Diplomatic Pouches Contain Documents Said To Prove Borodin Is Official Russian Adviser.

RUSSIANS BEHIND GENERAL STRIKES

Finance Minister T. V. Soong Admits Friction in Ranks, But Denies Dismissal of Chiang.

Pekin, China, April 2.—The capture of soviet diplomatic pouches, containing dispatches from soviet officials to Borodin, Russian advisor of the Cantonese government, was announced today by Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, who granted the correspondent of The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance an exclusive interview in which he cited his proofs of soviet participation in the Chinese nationalist movement.

Among other evidences related by the Manchurian war lord were seizure of the soviet boat Oleg, carrying munitions to General Feng Yu-Hsiang; training of nationalist officers by Russian officers; execution of Yang-Chu, one of Chang's own officers, for accepting Russian money to stir up strikes along the Chinese eastern railway, and documents seized from radical students in close touch with the soviet embassy.

Addressed to Borodin.

Chang Tso-Lin has just received a dossier of the documents seized with three Russian diplomatic couriers, and Mrs. Borodin on the soviet steamer Pamina Lenina, at Nanking, last month. Most of them are in Russian, and are addressed to Borodin from the soviet embassy at Pekin.

"They've not yet been completely translated," he said.

"They don't seem to be very important, being for the most part reports of the northern situation and extracts from the vernacular papers for Borodin's information. But they dispose of the allegation that Borodin is an unofficial adviser of the Cantonese. These documents amply prove he is a soviet government agent, for the documents forwarded by the soviet embassy were in diplomatic pouches.

"There are also several letters in Chinese. One is a copy of a resolution adopted by some workers' committee or soviet at Vladivostok pledging wholehearted support of the Chinese revolutionary movement in its fight against British imperialism and Mukden militarism, particularly against British imperialism because of its financing Mukden militarism. It had been translated into Chinese for transmission to southern authorities in a diplomatic pouch.

Second Ship Seized.

"The Pamina Lenina is the second Russian steamer we have seized. A year ago during the struggle with Yeng Yu-Hsiang for possession of Tientsin we seized the soviet boat, Oleg, carrying munitions to Feng. All officers on that boat are now in prison. Other instances of Russian scheming are too numerous to specify. The world should know that all the officers of the Cantonese army were trained by Russians employed by Chiang Kai-Shek in the Whampao academy of Canton.

"But I will confine myself to re-

Mexico Is Asked To Punish Killers Of Savannah Man

Note Is Sent To Foreign Office Urging Round-Up of Bandits Who Slew Edgar Wilkins.

SECOND AMERICAN SLAIN RECENTLY

Georgian Was Put to Death When Ransom Demanded by His Captors Was Not Given.

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—Murder of Edgar N. Wilkins, American mining engineer by Mexican bandits, at a time when the killing last September of another American, Jacob Rosenthal, still is an unsettled diplomatic case, has given a new twist to the already disturbed relations between the United States and Mexico.

Official report to the state department today from Consul Dwyer at Guadalajara that Wilkins' body had been found, was followed immediately by instructions to Ambassador Sheffield at Mexico City to make urgent representations concerning the murder to the foreign office. The note delivered by the ambassador supplemented previous representations made at the time of the kidnapping of the Savannah engineer, March 27.

Dwyer reported that Wilkins had been dead four days, having apparently been slain when the bandits, hard pressed by federal troops, became convinced they would not collect the 20,000 pesos ransom they demanded. At the time of his capture near Guadalajara, Wilkins, formerly a resident of Savannah, Ga., was with his ten-year-old son. The boy was released by the bandits to obtan the ransom money.

Rosenthal was slain September 15 near Cuernavaca while his captors were in flight before federal troops. Several bandits were killed and others captured. Rosenthal, a merchant, also had been held for 20,000 pesos ransom.

No Attempt to Hide.

The slayers made no attempt to hide the evidence of their crime, and the body was found, lying on El Colli hill, near Santa Ana Acatlan. The discovery was made by an employee of the Chapala Electric company, of which Wilkins was chief engineer. The body was taken to Guadalajara, where the widow resides. Troops were continuing pursuit of the outlaws today.

When news of the kidnaping reached Mexico City, the American embassy made urgent representations to the Mexican foreign office.

The kidnapers, hearing that federal troops were seeking them and apparently convinced that the ransom would not be forthcoming, killed their captive.

They were overtaken by the federals at Cerro Chine, and several were

SPRING WILL SEE BETTER BUSINESS, MERCHANTS SAY

Department Store Chiefs Expect Trade To Go Through Process of Steady Progression.

BY LOYD A. WILHOIT.

On the heels of a recent official statement of the Sixth District Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta that the volume of retail trade in this district for February was greater than that of January, executives of Atlanta department stores Saturday made it known that this city is sharing in the general increased activity in business.

While Atlanta merchants showed no disposition to expect a tremendous leap in retail trade, they felt that opening of the spring trade with the advent of what appears to be warm and settled weather will result in a natural and appreciable stimulation of buying that will last through the entire spring and will make its effect felt throughout the year.

Care in making purchases, with especial vigilance after high values coupled with unusually close margins of profit appear to be generally practiced among the merchants themselves. Stocks are complete, but the stores have studiously avoided over-buying and are stressing high-grade, thoroughly dependable merchandise in educational advertising conducted along normal, even lines.

Spring Increase Seen.

The season of settled, bright weather has arrived, and merchants announce they have prepared to take care of more liberal patronage always resulting from such conditions.

The feel that untoward incidents which have ocurred during the recent months in local and sectional financial circles have been discounted; that the public is ready to respond and respond freely to a "business-as-usual" leadership, and that Atlanta and Georgia are on the threshold of a commercial era that will witness a steady progression toward prosperity.

But they realize that salesmanship and progressive and agressive ideas of merchandising are necessary to keep pace with this healthy increase in trade, and they are schooled against unwarranted and superabundant optimism and boom conditions of every kind.

"Our faith in the bed-rock foundation of this city and this section is as strong today as it was in the days of inflated war buying," Walter Rich, head of the M. Rich & Bros. Co., said. "Our business is good, and we are working hard to make it better in order that we may deserve the increased prosperity that is bound to come. Nowhere in the country could you find a better business city or section than Atlanta and its surroundings. They have always given our store a steady, healthy increase in business that has kept us on the jump to keep pace in service and expansion. Rich's trade has been entirely satisfactory, and we expect it to be better as the season opens and the year progresses. Certainly we will do our full share toward encouraging such a situation."

Population on Increase.

"There is absolutely no reason why business should not be better in the immediate future, when spring brings its natural stimulation of buying," said Beaumont Davison, president of the Davison-Paxon company. "Atlanta's population is constantly increasing and this city probably enjoys the patronage of more transients than any other in the south. Building is active, and every condition points to a good year of business. Our store is now in its new home. We have carefully stocked it with high grade merchandise with a view to actually serving those who buy from us. Our business is good and we are looking and working toward bettering it."

R. E. O'Donnelly, of the Keely company, expressed confidence in the business progressiveness of Atlanta but warned against any commercial policy not based on good, sound judgment and careful study.

"We anticipate a good spring business through April, May and June," he stated, "and if the past three months are any indication of conditions ahead, there will be a satisfactory increase in sales of these three months. This city and section are in good financial condition, and I can see no reason why the year 1927 should not be a profitable one for every per-

ALLEGED DRUNKEN AUTOIST ARRESTED FOR GIRL'S DEATH

NEGRO BABY GIRL CRUSHED TO DEATH

Nell Oberlin Hurt as Two Automobiles Collide on Spring Street Early Saturday.

Two were killed and eight injured in a series of traffic accidents Saturday.

The dead are Dorothy Partridge, pretty 18-year-old girl, of 1835 Fair street, S. E., and Dorothy Hubert, a three-months-old negro baby, of 568 Lee street.

Miss Partridge died in Grady hospital soon after she had been run down on Boulevard DeKalb, near Warren street, as she stepped from a street car. The driver of the automobile, which failed to stop when the street car halted to discharge passengers, according to witnesses, is held by police on charges of operating an automobile while drunk. His name is given as J. O. Shumate, of Scottdale. A companion in the car, giving the name of Jack Swords, is also held on charges of drunkenness.

Negress Killed.

The little negro girl was slain about 2 o'clock at Connally and Richmond streets, when run over by a car driven by Oscar Harris, of 227 Mildred street. A case of reckless driving was made against Harris by Call Officers F. A. Newport and J. W. Murphy.

Witnesses to the accident in which Miss Partridge was killed told police that Shumate attempted to escape after the crash, but was held by a number of citizens who were near the spot.

The body of Miss Partridge was taken to the undertaking establishment of H. M. Patterson and Son. Members of her family were out of the city Saturday, having gone to Charleston to visit the Magnolia Gardens, it was said.

Miss Partridge is survived by her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Partridge; two brothers, John and Everett Partridge; a sister, Lois Partridge, and her grandparents, Mrs. M. F. Partridge, of Mount Airy, N. C., and Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Goggans, of Newberry, S. C.

Harvey Gorman, 18, of R. F. D. No. 8 was another Saturday accident victim. Gorman, with an unknown companion, was riding in a light, cut-down roadster on the Cheshire Bridge road shortly before noon when the machine suddenly swerved to one side, skidded and turned over. Gor-

BUILDING PERMITS CLIMB IN MARCH

Atlanta building permits for March hit the highest mark of 1927 and reached the total of $1,094,393, according to the official report released Saturday by C. J. Bowen, building inspector. This topped January and February, which registered totals of $1,066,385 and $1,070,201, respectively.

A feature of the building activity in Atlanta for the past month, and which bears out water department figures that Atlanta's population is increasing about 1,750 a month, is that homes for 213 additional families were provided in newly-authorized buildings.

A total of 118 frame dwellings valued at $429,600; 15 frame duplexes valued at $39,600, and 10 apartment houses valued at $67,800 and providing homes for 57 families were included in the permits issued by the department.

The next largest single item on the list authorizes construction of eight brick business buildings at a cost of $429,500.

A total of 397 permits were issued during the month.

Now For A Feast of Good Things

No, you are wrong; we were not referring to good things to eat this time; but to some of those other good things of this life.

For instance, a new home; a new automobile; new clothing; new house furnishings; a new golf club, or a new lawn mower; a new—most anything; you know what is uppermost in your mind.

Well, you'll find it advertised in today's Constitution, and you will find that the price is very reasonable. Possibly you have been deferring the purchase because you thought you couldn't afford it just now.

You're wrong again. Just look through the advertisements in this issue of The Constitution and you will find those things that you need and desire, and you will also discover that the prices are so reasonable that you can no longer afford to defer their purchase.

MERCHANT SHOT; TWO ARE JAILED

C. A. Kimbrough, Apalachee Merchant, Seriously Injured as He Opens Store, by Beal Brothers.

Madison, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) C. A. Kimbrough, Apalachee merchant near here, was shot down and seriously wounded early today as he was opening his store by Austin Beal and a brother of the same community.

Alleged attentions of Kimbrough, who is married, to the daughter of Austin Beal is said to have caused the trouble. According to reports reaching here, an open break between the two families was averted by friends about three weeks ago, when it is claimed threats against Kimbrough were made by the father of the girl. Feeling between Kimbrough and the Beals was renewed within the last two days, it was said.

One version of the shooting is that when Kimbrough, who operates a big store at Apalachee, 8 miles north of here, approached his store early today he began firing upon Austin Beal, who was near the building.

Another version is that when Kimbrough came to his store he was accosted by Jack Beal, and after an exchange of a few words, his brother, Austin, appeared and fired at Kimbrough, who in turn whipped out his own pistol and fired twice at Austin, inflicting flesh wounds.

Both families are prominent in Morgan county. Austin Beal is an extensive farmer and is married and has several children. Kimbrough has a wife and one child.

The shooting created a sensation throughout the county, it being the topic of conversation here today.

Kimbrough was taken to a hospital in Athens, Ga., and the Beal brothers were locked up in the Athens jail.

Kimbrough was hit by one bullet, which lodged in his intestines. His condition was pronounced grave at the hospital.

The only eyewitness to the affair, it is said, was a negro farm hand who accompanied Kimbrough to his store.

CHUTE PROVIDED FOR AFTER-HOURS BANK DEPOSITORS

Chicago, April 2.—Members of Cicero's sporting fraternity today rejoiced at learning of a novel device fashioned by the new Western State bank, whereby money may be deposited through a safety chute at any time after regular banking hours. No longer, it was declared, may a successful gambler fear being compelled to transport his winnings homeward along a dark street.

Every known safety device will be in operation to safeguard money tossed into the chute, officials of the bank declared.

An intricate system of electrical burglar alarms is installed, as well as a radio sound wave apparatus designed to set off the burglar alarm system should the vault door be tampered with.

ILLINOIS COAL MEN READY FOR PARLEY

Operators, However, Are Pessimistic Over Any Prospects for Early Resumption of Work.

Chicago, April 2.—(AP)—Expressing a willingness to "talk over the situation with union officials at all times," Illinois operators tonight were nevertheless pessimistic concerning any early resumption of work in the bituminous coal fields, idle because of the failure of operators and miners to agree upon a new wage scale.

"We cannot afford to pay the Jacksonville wage scale and survive in competition with non-union fields," said Rice Miller, president of the Illinois operators, controlling mines employing 72,000 miners.

Non-Union Plan Barred.

Illinois operators said that no attempt would be made to operate the mines with non-union labor. No mine can operate without the approval of the state board, which, because of disorders that have arisen in the past, would be expected to frown on any open-shop operation.

Reports from the entire central competitive field and from other bituminous coal centers indicated that the suspension has been general. The exceptions are small mines scattered throughout the several fields which are continuing operation at the present scale, pending agreement on a new wage.

Both operators and miners have shown reluctance to take any definite steps toward immediate resumption of work.

FLIER COMPLETES FIRST TEXAS HOP

San Antonio, Tex., April 2.—(AP)—Commander Francesco de Pinedo, Italian airman who is touring four continents on a 30,000-mile aerial journey, waved goodbye to the Gulf of Mexico today and completed his first dry land hop in the United States when he flew from Galveston to San Antonio.

His giant twin-motored monoplane, which is equipped to land only on water, made the 250-mile journey without mishap and is in shape to speed away at 4:30 o'clock tomorrow for Elephant Butte dam, New Mexico.

Commander de Pinedo turned his plane to the west early this morning at New Orleans, his first stop in the United States, and flew approximately 300 miles along the gulf, arriving at Galveston shortly before 11 o'clock. After three hours spent in dining and tuning his machine he took off for San Antonio at 1:41 p. m., and flew almost due west until he crossed the city and came to rest on the waters of Medina Lake, 30 miles away.

A flight of five army planes met the flier near the outskirts of the city and formed an escort for him until he had located the lake, which is hidden among deep hills. After circling the lake once the Italian dropped to the surface while the other machines sought nearby landing fields.

Commander de Pinedo leaped to the wharf clad in a natty golfing outfit. He refused to devote much of his attention to the spectators and welcoming committee until he had given his plane a thorough inspection and superintended refueling and servicing operations. It was more than an hour before he was satisfied with the condition of his ship and started for San Antonio, where he attended a banquet in his honor given by the city, Italian societies and army officers.

Commander De Pinedo determined to start his flight to Elephant Butte at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning because he feared a high wind might arise and dash his plane against the rocky shores of the narrow body of water. He announced that he intends to go as the crow flies from here to Hot Springs.

The country he will traverse is semi-arid and very thinly populated. He is gambling on his plane performing perfectly as there is no possibility of a water landing through this territory.

The distance is between 600 and 700 miles.

OFFICIAL REPORT IS MADE PUBLIC AT WASHINGTON

Statement Absolutely Contradicts Version of Chen, Who Blames Defeated Northerners.

BRITAIN PLANNING DRASTIC ACTION

Additional 4,000 Men Are Ordered To China; Blockade by Great Powers Is Now Proposed.

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—An impending clash with nationalist authorities in China over responsibility for the Nanking anti-foreign outrages was indicated tonight when the state department made public "conclusions" of Consul John K. Davis at Nanking, holding nationalist military commanders directly accountable for what happened. Davis said all evidence showed that the attackers of foreigners were nationalist troops, and that the attacks clearly had been planned and carried out under orders.

A statement by Eugene Chen, nationalist foreign minister, published in Nanking, and which denied participation of nationalist troops in the attack, prompted publication of the Davis report.

Claims of Chen.

Chen attributed the outrages to "reactionary" counter revolutionists and "remnants" of the defeated northern forces from which the city had been taken by the nationalists. He protested the bombardment by British and American war craft and declared hundreds of Chinese had been killed by foreign naval guns.

Davis said seven persons "were killed in cold blood by soldiers in the uniform of the nationalist army." Information from "a wide range of disinterested sources," he said, showed that only three Chinese civilians had been killed in the naval bombardment, and that Chinese military casualties could only have been among the forces attacking foreigners.

"The outrages were committed by the same troops which were engaged in disarming the remnants of the northern armies, and they carried on their conversations in the dialects of Canton, Kiangsi and Hunan provinces (all nationalist territory)," Consul Davis reported.

"These soldiers bore no resemblance whatever to northern soldiers, and it is absolutely impossible for them to have been agents of the northerners."

"It is proved that the outrages were planned and could not possibly have been the accidental getting out of hand of a few troops."

Publication of the Davis report is

BANDITS GET $40 IN SUDDEN ATTACK

Springing out of a dark alley on Decatur street between Bell and Moore streets Saturday night, two negroes seized Paul Reynolds, of 181 Rhinehart street, slugged him, took $40 from his pockets and escaped, according to a report filed by Call Officers K. A. Wooster and R. A. Rakestraw, who investigated.

Reynolds said the assault occurred so suddenly that he was unable to obtain a good view of his assailants, and he could supply officers with no description.

C. L. Woodall, city license inspector, was held up, but not robbed, early Saturday night by two negroes at Greensferry avenue and Ashby street, near his home, according to reports. Mr. Woodall had nothing in his pockets because of many recent holdups in the city, he told police.

B. Isenberg, who runs a grocery at 737 West Hunter street, reported that three negroes entered his store shortly before closing time Saturday night and robbed the cash register of $150 and a government check for $25. He was held up by one of the trio, while the others rifled the cash drawer.

A soda dispenser, whose name was not learned by detectives, working in the drug store at 286 Angier avenue, owned by H. A. Glass, was held up and the cash register rifled of a small amount late Saturday night by a lone while bandit.

Detectives J. C. Davis and J. J. Chester were told that the bandit forced the soda dispenser behind the cash register, while he took its contents. He then fled out the door and was chased several blocks down the street by two negro delivery boys, but escaped in the darkness. The amount taken was not learned.

A large number of pistols were taken from the J. M. Caldwell safe and locksmith shop at 15 Houston street early Friday morning, according to police reports. Entrance was gained by breaking a large plate glass window in the front. Three negroes have been placed under arrest, in connection with the burglary, it was reported.

COAL LEGISLATION FAILURE DEPLORED

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—Deploring the failure of congress to enact effective coal legislation, Senator Copeland, democrat, New York, in a statement today, said it was a "sad commentary on government when the white house announces that no governmental action can be taken to prevent a coal strike."

"We will see now what suffering and stupendous final losses will follow in the wake of this strike, a strike which in all probability might have been prevented had my bill passed congress," he said, referring to the suspension in the bituminous fields, and added that "if this strike continues, the discomforts of the anthracite strike will be only a flea bite in comparison."

"The whole purpose of the coal barons is to destroy the unions and, what is quite important to them, to raise the price of coal to the consuming public," said Mr. Copeland. "Profiteering in price is the immediate penalty paid by the American public for the failure of congress to take appropriate action."

Handsome New High School Building Is Dedicated by Statham Citizens

Modern high school building which was dedicated by citizens of the Statham school district Friday. It cost $25,000 and is said to be one of the most modern consolidated school structures in the state.

Statham, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) Exercises celebrating the opening of the new consolidated school building at Statham were held Friday in the auditorium of the building. Professor J. W. Williams, superintendent, acted as master of ceremonies. Rev. John H. Wood, of Winder, offered the invocation.

Dr. E. A. Pound, of the state department of education, was the first speaker. He spoke on present educational needs and advantages in the state and of the splendid opportunities the newly created district would bring to the boys and girls of Barron county. He was followed by Professor D. L. Ernest, of the State Normal school at Athens, who compared the times and conditions when he lectured at Statham 40 years ago with conditions he found here and the rapid progress that had been made in school affairs.

Professor Peter F. Brown, also of the State Normal school, stressed the need of putting forth the best efforts to further accomplishments. Rev. Charles L. Bass, of Atlanta, former grand master of the Georgia Masonic lodge, made a brief address.

At noon dinner was spread and was amply sufficient to supply the large crowd assembled.

In the afternoon Rev. Bass, with the Statham lodge and visiting Masons, laid the corner stone of the new building.

The new school district was created about a year ago and $25,000 in bonds were voted for the building and equipment. It is a one-story brick building with 11 rooms and an auditorium, and is one of the most convenient and modern school buildings in this section of the state.

Professor J. W. Williams is superintendent, and the five trustees are J. H. Wall, chairman; Ben H. Grant, secretary-treasurer; M. L. Williams, J. L. McLocklin and W. S. Hunter. W. M. Holsenbeck is the county school superintendent. J. S. Holliday was the architect and contractor for the new building.

Little Girl Passes Night

:: WAS AFRAID TO LEAVE, SHE SAYS ::

Standing in School Corner

Philadelphia, April 2.—(AP)—During the long hours of last night a little girl, Helen Wilkus, aged 7, stood in a corner in a schoolroom, her face turned obediently to the wall. Throughout the night, too, her parents searched for her, fearing for her safety when she did not return from school.

Neighbors and police joined in the search, playmates were questioned, but there was no trace of Helen.

Today a sister went to the sewing room in St. Casimir's Parochial school. There were no classes today and Saturday's quiet prevailed. A stifled sob caught the sister's ear and she could scarcely believe her eyes when they rested on a weary little figure in a corner.

Helen sobbed out her story on the sister's arms.

"I was waiting for my sister Eva to take me home," Helen said. "Some boys came down the hall, pushed me into the room and told me I must stand in the corner for punishment. They told me not to dare leave the corner."

Frightened but obedient, Helen had remained in the corner all night. She was almost afraid to cry, she said.

"It was awfully dark and lonesome," the little girl said, "and I wanted my mother. Then the light came and I heard the sparrows and I wasn't so scared. I sat down then, but I stood up again when I got rested."

SYMPATHY IS SHOWN FOR CHINESE AIMS

New York, April 2.—(AP)—Expressing itself as profoundly sympathetic with the nationalist movement in China, the eastern Asia central conference, the highest authority of Methodism in China, Japan and Korea, informed the Methodist board of foreign missions here today that withdrawal of missionaries from the danger zone had been inspired solely by a desire to avoid friction between China and America.

While the conference described the nationalist movement as one of "the most hopeful" in Chinese history, it said the anti-foreign movement had been aggravated by a strong tide of soviet influence to such an extent as to excite mob violence beyond the control of the nationalist government.

The revolution's "central passion and purpose," the cable said, "is emancipation from conditions within, and relations without, that have prevented the realization of China's national freedom and the achievement of government of, by and for the people. With this movement the missionaries profoundly sympathize and, rejoice in the privilege of service in China in those nation-making days."

Former German Kaiser Stars In Realty Deal

Paris, April 2.—(United News.)—As a real estate dealer, the ex-Kaiser Wilhelm has few equals.

Recently the German republic, reimbursing the former emperor for his lost possessions, paid over to him 1,338,000 gold marks for a chateau he possessed in France but which was lost when Alsace-Lorraine was returned to France.

Several days ago, the French government, in liquidating enemy property, sold the same chateau for what it considered a good price, 347,000 paper francs or 70,000 gold francs. The kaiser's profit on the deal he made with the German government was about a quarter of a million dollars.

After the war of 1870, the kaiser looked around his newly conquered Rhine states and chose a site near Metz for a summer home. The land was bought up in secret and the chateau rebuilt in accordance with German architectural ideas.

A special railroad station was built nearby and finally the emperor and his suite arrived. Then followed summers of parades, maneuvers and inspections of neighboring forts in the region of Metz. But rain usually attended the reviews, so that the peasants of the region adopted the expression, "here comes the kaiser; now it will rain."

There were some patriotic French in the region who resented the kaiser's presence and they devised a trick which kept the chateau empty for many summers. They learned that the emperor was much afraid of contracting typhoid fever, so the story was circulated that an epidemic of that sickness had broken out in the neighborhood. The kaiser and his suite hurried back to Berlin.

Every summer, thereafter, at about the time of the expected visit of the imperial family, a fresh epidemic of typhoid was reported in the region until, after a number of years, the kaiser gave up entirely his summer home in former French territory.

Somnambulist Dies At Macon of Shots Fired by Neighbor

Macon, Ga., April 2.—(AP)—W. Herbert Miller, 20, somnambulist, who was shot early Friday morning by J. C. Godfree, grocer, when the latter found him trying to enter his home, died at a local hospital today.

Miller was clad only in his underwear. Godfree told the police that he heard a noise at a window and then at a door, and opening the door he saw the white figure before him. Godfree said that he shouted, "Who's there!" and receiving no response he fired three times.

Members of the Miller family said that he had been walking in his sleep since childhood. The police made no charges against Godfree.

249 ENTER PRISONS OF STATE IN 1927

Georgia prisons received 249 convicts during January, February and March, it was announced Saturday at the prison commission's office.

Twenty of these were sentenced to life imprisonment for murder, 32 were convicted for manslaughter and 20 were charged with assault to murder, the records show. No complete record was available of misdemeanor cases, attaches of the commission's office stated.

More than half of the felony convicts incarcerated since January 1 were convicted of some form of theft, with 57 for burglary, 42 for automobile larceny, 19 for larceny, 9 for robbery, one for embezzlement, one for cow stealing and eight for forgery.

Twenty-two persons were sent to prison for the manufacture of liquor during the three months and a large number were convictaed for bootlegging.

TRAPPED IN TRAIN PIT TWO MEN MEET DEATH

Boston, April 2.—(United News.)—Trapped in the train pit at the Broadway subway station in south Boston, two men were ground to death beneath the wheels of a Boston elevated train late today.

One of the victims later was identified as William P. Beddard, of this city. Nothing was found on the other body to aid in identification.

Both men were thought to have been employed by a local contracting firm. Railway officials were unable to determine how the men happened to be in the train pit.

Cordele Hotel Sold To S. J. Herrington; Improvements Planned

Cordele, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—Samuel J. Herrington, young business man here, purchased the Suwanee hotel Saturday from C. L. Lifsey, and will take active charge of the hostelry on May 1. The purchase price was said to be $100,000. The new owner plans extensive improvements. The hotel has been owned by Lifsey for about three years, but only actively managed by him for a year.

DYNAMO NOW RUNS FORDS

Milwaukee, Wisc.—A recent invention has accomplished the impossible by harnessing the power of a Dynamo to a Ford. The inventor, through the Dynamo Company, 426-923 Eleventh St., Milwaukee, Wisc., has already installed this device on thousands of Ford cars with remarkable success. The invention does away with the old timer, makes cars run smoother, increases the power, saves gasoline, causes instant starting and quick pick-up. So many Ford owners want this device that it is impossible for the Dynamo Company to take care of the business direct. Therefore, they want men everywhere to help them and will furnish free sample and full particulars of a $5,000 a year job. Write them today.—(adv.)

PAINT SHOP DAMAGED BY MYSTERY BLAZE

Fire of undetermined origin partly destroyed the automobile top and paint shop operated by the firm of Yancey Brothers, at 110 North Jackson street, late Saturday night.

While no estimate of the damage was forthcoming from fire department officials, it was stated that the loss was not large. Investigation failed to disclose the manner in which the conflagration started.

RITES AT JONESBORO TODAY FOR W. O. DUNN

Jonesboro, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) W. O. Dunn, prominent railroad man and former supervisor and roadmaster of the Central of Georgia railroad, died in Asheville, N. C., Friday.

He is survived by his widow and two sons, William and Frank Dunn, all of Jonesboro.

Funeral services are to be held from the residence Sunday afternoon at 2:30, with interment in Johnson cemetery here.

MEXICO DENIES DEBT DODGE PLAN

Mexico City, April 2.—(AP)—High Mexican official sources insisted today that Mexico has no intention of abrogating the Pani-Lamont agreement providing for the payment of Mexico's external debt, as has been rumored. They said that the government was adjusting its 1927 budget for continuance of the interest payments.

American commercial authorities, while cautious in their predictions about anything in Mexico, said they did not possess any evidence of abrogation at present.

A cryptic decree appearing in the Diario Official, March 26, apparently caused suggestions that the way was paved for diverting the funds intended for debt payments, but when it was published it was accepted by foreign observers as another of the many decrees altering for administrative purposes the apportionment of government revenues.

As freely translated, the decree said: "All laws, decrees, presidential orders and other dispositions which have appropriated (some or any) federal revenues to a special end, are repealed."

'Must Have Been Crazy,' Countess Tells Officers

Paris, April 2.—The Countess De Janze, formerly Alice Silverthorne, of Buffalo and Chicago, told police today that she must have been crazy when she shot herself and wounded her companion, Raymond De Trafford, a week ago today in the Gare Du Nord. The whole affair seemed to puzzle the American-born countess as much as it has puzzled the police during the week she and her friend have lain in hospital beds.

Until today the countess had made no formal statement, but she consented to sign a transcript of her words with the police today.

"I don't know why I did it," she said.

"I must have been crazy. He was leaving me, but was to rejoin me later. I wanted only to wound him and I really don't know why. I wanted to kill myself because I always have had ideas of suicide. From time to time and without reason, I have wanted to die."

Judge Bacquard, the examining magistrate, intimated today that he would order the countess accused of voluntary homicide Monday and have her removed from the hospital to St. Lazare prison.

Robber's Victim Dies.

Chattanooga, April 2.—(AP)—George Varias, a peanut dealer, died last night at a local hospital from the effect of a fractured skull caused by a blow on the head by some unknown person, near his peanut stand earlier in the afternoon. He was unconscious when found and died without regaining consciousness.

Tazewell, Tenn., April 2.—(AP)—Cleo Martin, slayer of his wife and mother-in-law, was convicted of murder here late today and sentenced to 25 years in state prison.

Angered at the cost of a dress his wife had purchased, Martin, according to testimony, whipped her and then shot her at Cumberland Gap last September. Her mother, Mrs. Jesse Gibson, appeared when she heard the pistol shot and the enraged man thereupon killed her.

Mrs. Martin lived for several weeks. In her dying statement she accused her husband of having attacked her without just cause.

Each of proved value in gaining and maintaining vigor. When you see the list on the bottle you'll understand why it accomplishes such amazing results—in babies, children, mature and even old people!

Tastes good

They said she'd never live to be 18

Every woman at some time faces a situation like this—but how few solve it so happily?

"Could any woman face a more serious situation than I did?

Jim,—that's my husband,—had been feeling miserable for months. So fagged out and weary he could not half attend to his job. When he came home he fell into his bed irritable and exhausted.

Edna, the oldest of my five girls, was so thin and listless that I was constantly worried about her.

One day the blow fell—or rather two blows.

Jim's employer suggested that if he could not get himself in shape his place would have to be filled with a stronger and healthier man. And at school the doctors said that Edna would never live to be 18.

Dark hours indeed. My home, my husband, my children and my income all threatened at once.

That was six months ago. Today Jim is stronger and healthier than he ever was in his life and he has been promoted with a raise. I have quit worrying and have gained twelve pounds. And Edna—well, I laugh at those worries now."

The amazing thing about Waterbury's Compound is its ability to enrich the blood, nourish the body and assist in building fine, firm flesh. Thus gradually bringing under par people back toward normal health.

If you could see the unsolicited letters from physicians telling what this fine, old remedy has accomplished, you wouldn't hesitate one minute to go down to your druggist and buy a bottle.

Thousands—literally thousands—of tiny babies, underweight boys and sickly girls, as well as mature men and women who once dragged wearily through life, have found new strength, new vigor and better health after using Waterbury's Compound.

That is only natural. For this famous remedy contains five natural tonics of proved value. Isn't it worth trying?

FORD'S INJURIES HELD ACCIDENTAL

Detroit, April 2.—(United Press.)—With Henry Ford recuperating rapidly at his home from injuries received in an auto accident last Sunday night, the incident was recorded officially today as accidental, and not an assassin's plot to murder the billionaire.

Investigators for the Ford Motor company reported to Robert M. Toms, prosecuting attorney of Wayne county, that they found nothing to indicate malicious intent on the part of the driver who crowded Ford off the road near the River Rouge bridge outside Dearborn and forced him down a 20-foot embankment.

The report was submitted to Toms by Harry H. Bennett, chief of the Ford investigators, who made an exhaustive examination of all facts pertaining to the accident.

"We shall accept their report as final unless new evidence is uncovered indicating the contrary," Toms said. "We consider the Ford investigators experienced, trained men and do not expect that anything further will be disclosed to substantiate any theory other than that of an accident."

The statement was regarded as ending definitely the widespread impression, fostered by wild rumors, that someone deliberately knocked Ford's little coupe off the road in an effort to kill him.

Meantime, Ford's condition was improving rapidly, the United Press was informed by a spokesman for Dr. R. D. McClure, his head physician. Dr. McClure stopped issuing bulletins last night and said Ford was making "a perfectly normal recovery."

The palatial Ford home at Dearborn was closely guarded against intrusion. No one was allowed to approach the house except members of the family and officials of the Ford company.

It was believed Ford officials were somewhat concerned lest the talk of a "plot" against the automobile manufacturer and world's richest man might plant the idea of attacking Ford in the mind of some crank.

In the future, it was understood, Ford would be accompanied by a bodyguard on his travels, on the insistence of his wife. Ford always has gone around freely, without taking the slightest precaution against attack.

HENRY FORD SUBMITS TO SECRET SERVICE.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Detroit, Mich., April 2.—The bulletin given out today at Dearborn, by attending physicians to Henry Ford was that Mr. Ford spent a restful night and has passed the danger mark.

To prevent a recurrence of what some persons believe to have been a deliberate attack on his life, when a coupe which he was driving was forced down a steep embankment, Ford has promised that he will submit to a constant secret service guard.

FUNERAL IN ATHENS FOR MRS. J. M. ALLEN

Athens, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—Funeral services for Mrs. J. M. Allen, of this city, who died last Tuesday night, were conducted here Thursday from the First Baptist church by Dr. J. C. Wilkinson. Interment was in Oconee cemetery. Surviving Mrs. Allen are her husband, Jesse Mercer Allen; her children Mrs. W. P. Egbert, of Augusta; Mrs. Cobb Davis, of Athens; J. Owen Allen, of Portsmouth, Va.; Mrs. Eugene Baker, of LaGrange; sisters, Mrs. J. M. Gainer, of Moultrie, and Miss Jennie DeMoore, of Athens; brothers, C. I. DeMoore, of Brooklet, and A. E. DeMoore, of Augusta.

Audience Gives Ovation To Tech Glee Clubsters

An enthusiastic audience of Tech supporters forgot itself several times Saturday night at the Erlanger theater to the extent of just standing on the seats and yelling for more. Not that their sympathies naturally were with Tech, but the program was so good that even an anti-Tech crowd would have done the same thing.

It was the annual appearance of the Georgia Tech Glee club, an organization that seems to improve with age, and the yellow jackets and their friends "swarmed around" the Erlanger to the tune of "S. R. O." There is a distinctive freshness and "pep" about a college glee club not generally found in musical organizations, and the Tech club Saturday night was no exception to this rule, but rather an exaggerated example.

Novelty marked the performance from stem to stern, novelty of the college boy's brand, for those Tech boys proved that a college boy can go further toward making a musical instrument actually talk than any other known species on this earth. And when a yellow jacket out-cornetted a trick cornetist with a mere mouth organ that crowd just begged for more.

Three Sections.

There were three divisions to the program, with the Tech Ramblers, one of the "hottest" orchestras you ever tuned in on, occupying the middle stanza. The audience couldn't get enough of J. D. Ambrose and his interpretation of "I Know My Baby Loves Me," a snappy melody presented in a keen way. George Prix, singing "Kentucky Lullaby," scored a big hit, while Malcom Nolan, offering "Wistful and Blue," made the encorists burn their hands.

Have you ever seen a singer so modest, and with such little cause for his modesty, as James Alderson, musical director of the club, who performed the unique stunt of singing the "Serenade" from the "Student Prince" while occupying the leader's position in the orchestra pit, and without a spotlight to guide him! Alderson's voice, a rich tenor, was one of the most enjoyable bits of the evening.

Two samples of the Mandolin club brought thunderous appeals for encores, this part of the glee club appearing in both the first and last portions of the program. The instrumental boys plucked some mean harmony, with some "don't mean maybe" voice work to match, while Banton, of the instrumental trio, scored such a bull's eye with "The Traveling Man" that he almost gave out of numbers for encores. Hancock's banjo solo proved him a wizard of the strings.

Glee Club Good.

Effective work was done by the glee club in its several appearances, particularly in "'Tis Me," a negro spiritual, and in "Goin' Home," by Dvorak. Probably the biggest hits of the evening, though, from the amount of excitement raised in the audience, were those sprung by the glee club in its rendition of Frank Roman's immortal "Up With the White and Gold," and in Roman's "Alma Mater."

Allen T. McNeill, assistant musical director, offered several inspiring cornet solos, accompanied by Director Alderson on the piano. These numbers included the intermezzo from "Cavalleria Ruticana," and Schubert's "Serenade," as well as "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice."

A male quartet always pleases, but especially so did the quartet composed of Stewart Boyle, first tenor; Judge Bearden, second tenor; George Gaissert, baritone, and Nathan Avery, base. An instrumental trio composed of J. R. Wetzel, violin; E. G. Ferrel, saxophone, and W. C. Walton, piano, performed with credit.

Colored light effects added much to the performance, while the costumes of the glee club, of white with gold capes, were stunning. These costumes were produced by Tech students from the weaving of the cloth to the dyeing and tailoring.

—BEN COOPER.

DR. WILLIAM T. BROWN FUNERAL ON SUNDAY

Funeral services for Dr. William T. Brown, 75, prominent Atlanta physician, who died Saturday morning at the residence, 158 Georgia avenue, S. E., following an illness of several months, will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock from St. John's Methodist church. Interment will be in West View cemetery with the Rev. R. A. Edmondson officiating.

Although he had been in failing health for the past several months, Dr. Brown's death came unexpectedly and was a shock to members of his family and a large circle of friends.

Born January 16, 1852, in Columbus, Ga., Dr. Brown studied medicine under the late James W. Taylor, of Luthersville, Ga., and graduated in 1876. After completing his medical course at Whitesburg, Ga., he came to Atlanta about 35 years ago. He retired from the profession a year ago on account of failing health.

Dr. Brown was a member of the Fulton county medical association, the Georgia Medical association and the American Medical association.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Harriet Wilson, of Meriwether county, and a daughter, Mrs. Bell Brown Coleman.

Harry G. Poole, funeral director, in charge.

NEGRO DRIVES AUTO AT POLICE OFFICER

Detective John W. Lowe narrowly escaped serious injury and possible death late Saturday night in an alleyway beside 138 Vine street, when pinned against a fence by an automobile driven by a negro, Robert Evans, according to police reports.

Officer Lowe and Detectives W. D. McGee and W. W. Ford answered a call to Vine street. The officers had secreted themselves in a negro house and were waiting for James Holland and Rogers Sanford, negroes, who have five indictments for theft pending against them, it is said.

While the officers were waiting Sanford came in and was immediately placed under arrest. Soon after his arrest, a large automobile drove up in the alleyway and its driver gave a certain "whistle signal," the officers stated.

Sanford failed to respond to the signal and the driver of the car attempted to drive out when Officer Lowe demanded that he stop. The negro steered his car directly at Officer Lowe, who pulled his gun and shot the windshield in front of the negro. The negro then gave himself up and was jailed along with Sanford. He gave the name of Robert Evans at police station and the pair are being held under charges of suspicion, pending an investigation.

Arctic Watchers Still Wait Word From Wilkins

BY A. M. SMITH.

Special correspondent of The Atlanta Constitution, The Detroit News and the North American Newspaper Alliance.

(Copyright, 1927, by The Detroit News and the North American Newspaper Alliance in the United States, Great Britain and all other countries. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

New York, April 2.—(By North American Newspaper Alliance Radio.) No further word was received from Captain George Hubert Wilkins marooned on the ice 100 miles north of Point Barrow with his pilot, Ben Eielson, and a disabled airplane, after their brief message telling of engine trouble, dispatched at 4 p. m. yesterday (9 p. m., eastern time). The message was sent when the men had already been 82 hours out from Point Barrow, and nearly 48 hours after their forced landing on the ice.

It clearly indicated that they have not started on the trek back to Barrow, a walk of from 10 to 20 days, depending on ice conditions, but still are attempting to get their plane into the air.

Vilhjalmur Stefansson, arctic explorer, said here today that the blizzard which raged around Barrow yesterday probably did not endanger the men's safety, though it may have embarrassed their efforts to get their plane off the ice.

FORESTRY CONVENTION TO BE HELD IN DALTON

Blairsville, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—Round-table discussions, committee reports and addresses and a visit to Berry schools at Rome will be features of the fifth annual convention of the Georgia Forestry association to be held at Dalton April 22-23, according to Bonnell H. Stone, secretary.

The convention will open with a luncheon at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon, April 22, at the home of Mrs. M. E. Judd, Dalton, second vice president. The afternon business session will be devoted to round-table discussions of forestry questions, general committee reports, adoption of program on education and legislation and election of officers.

Friday evening at 7 o'clock a "forestry dinner" will be given the visitors by the Dalton Civitan club and Junior Chamber of Commerce. M. T. Nichols, president of the Georgia Forestry association, will preside as toastmaster. Many distinguished guests, including Governor and Mrs. Walker, Governor-elect and Mrs. L. G. Hardman, Charles Lathrop Pack, of the American Forestry association, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, have been invited to attend the dinner.

On Saturday a motorcade will run from Dalton to the Berry schools, where addresses in the auditorium there will be followed by a luncheon and sight-seeing tour through the Berry forests. In the evening Miss Eloise Gerry, of Madison, Wis., will give an illustrated lecture at Berry, and motion pictures on forestry subjects will be shown in the Rome theaters.

Sunday, April 24, will mark the opening of Forest Protection week in Georgia, led by Henderson Hallman, of Atlanta, state chairman of the Georgia Forestry association.

WAGE DEMANDS TO BE MEDIATED

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—The southeastern railroads and their firemen have agreed to arbitrate their wage increase controversy, the United States railway mediation board announced today.

Following meetings between representatives of the railroads and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen the two groups have each selected a member of an arbitration board and these two in turn will choose a neutral member at a conference on April 5.

The railroads selected as their representative Vice President J. W. Jenks, of the Norfolk and Western railroad, and the firemen, Vice President C. J. Goss, of the brotherhood. The firemen are seeking an increase of $1 a day in wages.

The wage demand was made by approximately 6,500 firemen on 12 southeastern railroads. The railroads are the Atlantic Coast Line, Central of Georgia, Chesapeake and Ohio, Clinchfield, Louisville, Henderson and St. Louis, Louisville and Nashville, Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis, Norfolk Southern, Norfolk and Western, Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac, Tennessee Central and Jacksonville Terminal company.

Cartersville Boy Is Winner In District Oratory Contest

BY M. L. FLEETWOOD.

Cartersville, Ga., April 2.—Robert Walton, of the Cartersville High school, on Friday afternoon was declared winner for the seventh district in the oratorical contest on the constitution of the United States, sponsored in Georgia by the Atlanta Constitution.

Walton's subject was "The Present-Day Meaning of the Constitution."

Miss Geraldine Legg, representing Calhoun High school, was awarded second place and was named alternate from the seventh district. Her subject was, "The Constitution."

Other entrants included Charlie Hill, representing Marietta High school, with the subject, "Washington and the Constitution;" Walton Hunter, representing Rockmart High, with the subject, "The Limitless Power of the Constitution," and Margaret Wallace, representing Rome High, and her subject was "Washington and the Constitution."

The judges were Solicitor General Charles Smith, of the Stone Mountain circuit, Decatur; Professor W. M. Rainey, of Decatur, superintendent of the county schools of DeKalb, and Professor A. C. Whitehead, of the Acme Teachers' agency, Atlanta.

Aids Constitution Study.

The American Bar association through various newspapers is sponsoring this annual series of oratorical contests, with the idea of furnishing a means of better study of the American constitution among the high school students of the country.

As winner of the seventh district contest, Walton was awarded a prize of $15 from the Atlanta Constitution and accorded the honor of representing this district in the state contest, to be held later in the spring. The winner in the state contest will receive a cash prize of $100 from The Constitution and will have the privilege of entering a zone contest to be held in Birmingham, Ala. Winners of the zone contests, throughout the country, are to deliver their orations before the judges of the United States supreme court, and the winner here will be awarded a prize of $1,000. Each winner in the zone contests is to be given a six weeks' trip to Europe, with all expenses paid.

TIFTON CONTEST NEXT TO BE HELD.

With the announcement that Robert Walton, Cartersville High school boy, will represent the seventh district in the fourth oratorical contest, sponsored in Georgia by The Constitution interest now centers in the other elimination meetings to be held in the various Georgia districts. Next on the program will be the second district meeting at Tifton next Thursday, April 7.

On Friday, April 8, three districts will hold elimination meetings. The first, at Millen, the sixth at Jackson and the twelfth at Dublin. Representative will be named in each of the districts to compete in the state contest.

Other contests to be held are, third district, Americus; fourth, West Point; fifth, East Point, April 21; eighth, Athens; ninth, Commerce; tenth, Warrenton; eleventh, Brunswick.

The state contest will be held in Atlanta on April 30, and the southern zone contest at Birmingham in May. The Georgia state winner will compete at Birmingham. The national finals will be held in Washington on May 27. The contest is sponsored throughout the United States by various newspapers in each state. Randolph Leigh, Washington, D. C., is director general of the national contest, and Dr. Joseph S. Stewart, of Athens, is the director for Georgia, with the Georgia contest sponsored by The Constitution.

BAPTISTS TO HOLD MEET AT COLUMBUS

Columbus, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) The seventh annual convention of the Baptist Sunday school workers of Georgia will be held here next week beginning Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock and continuing through Thursday evening. The sessions will be held in the First Baptist church auditorium. Dr. T. W. Tippett, of Athens, will preside. Clark Landers, of Atlanta, will direct the singing of the convention, assisted by Miss Irene Landen and Dr. W. H. Houghton, both of Atlanta. Mrs. Arthur McCreary, of Atlanta, will be the pianist.

Dr. John A. Davison, pastor of the First Baptist church, will deliver the welcome address on behalf of the city.

The opening session will be held Tuesday night and the principal address will be given by Dr. Charles W. Daniel, pastor of the First Baptist church of Atlanta. His subject will be "The Present Day Challenge to Southern Baptists." Music and greetings and the Daniel address will take up the opening session.

The departmental conferences will

DR. JOHN A. DAVISON,

Pastor of First Baptist church at Columbus, where session of Baptist Sunday school body will be held.

be held Wednesday morning with Mrs. O. M. Gerald, presiding over the elementary division. Addresses on "Getting the Memory Work," by Mrs. J. J. Heard, of Vienna, and "Worship in the Beginners' Department," by Mrs. Lewis Jones, of Canton, will be heard at this session.

Miss Alice Biby, of Nashville, Tenn., is director of the intermediate division and subjects of interest to the various phases of this work will be discussed at this conference on Wednesday morning.

The young peoples' and adult division meeting will be directed by William P. Phillips, of Nashville, and the administration division session will be presided over by Harold E. Ingraham, of Nashville.

Homer L. Grice, of Nashville, and M. D. Reed, of Norcross, Ga., directors of the Vocation Bible school, will be in charge of the meeting held Wednesday, and a conference on church architecture will be under the guidance of P. E. Burrough, of Nashville.

At the central meeting Thursday morning Homer L. Grice will speak on "A Vital Religious Program for Vacation Period," and Dr. A. C. Cree, of Atlanta, will talk on the subject, "Southern Baptist Cooperative Program." Other speakers at this session will be Walter P. Binns, of LaGrange; Rev. W. H. Houghton, Atlanta; Mrs. J. M. Dawson, of Waco.

A pageant will be the feature of the Thursday afternoon session and at the night session election of officers will be held.

Officers of the convention are: Dr. T. W. Tippet, Athens, president; John J. West, Albany; C. J. Wyatt, Rome; Dr. W. H. Faust, Atlanta; Mrs. J. H. Parker, Millen; F. W. Withoft, Fort Valley, vice presidents; M. A. Wood, Macon, secretary-treasurer; George W. Andrews, Atlanta, general secretary; Mrs. O. M. Gerald, elementary superintendent.

Unless the weather bureau's forecast goes awry, today will be one of those April days when the old folks feel like three-year-olds and the young folks' fancy turns lightly to love, for the prediction made late Saturday by C. F. von Herrmann, meteorologist, promises clear, balmy weather; a gradual pacification of shifting winds and a steady rise in temperature from 42 degrees in the morning to a maximum near 65 degrees in the afternoon.

Sunday will be very similar to the weather experienced Saturday, only in that the high winds will be missing, Mr. von Herrmann said. It should be ideal weather for motoring, he asserted. Saturday's minimum was 56 and maximum 65. The wind reached a velocity of 36 miles an hour at 8 a. m. and 30 at 3 o'clock.

The month of March, which gave way to Aril Thursday at midnight, was almost normal in most respects, according to the monthly summary of the weather bureau. The mean temperature for the month was 54.8 degrees, while normal is 52. The highest temperature recorded was on March 19, when the thermometer touched 80 degrees. The lowest was 25 degrees, registered on March 3.

March 1927 Normal.

The 1927 record failed to approach either the highest or lowest temperature reached since 1879. The warmest March on record was that of 1907, when the mean was 61.5—or more than seven degrees warmer than last month. The coldest March was that of 1915 when the mean reading was 43.6 degrees, or 11.2 degrees colder.

Normal rainfall for March is 5.42 inches. Last month the total rainfall was 3.31 inches. Of this total, 1.19 inches fell between midday on the 8th and 9th. One inch of snow fell on the first day of March. These figures in no wise approached records. The wettest March on record was that of 1880, when 11.87 inches of rain fell. Since then there have been exactly nine Marches with rainfall exceeding 10 inches. The driest March occurred in 1905, when the total was only .88 inch.

During the past month there were 220.7 hours of total sunshine, which indicates that this part of the country enjoyed much pleasant weather. The average hourly wind velocity was only 12.6 miles.

Naturally there is much speculation as to whether or not there is a frost in sight at this late date, Mr. von Herrmann said. His personal opinion is that there is not. However, there have been frosts in April. Records disclose the fact that there was a frost on April 17, 1905, and a killin frost at that. The average last killing frost, however, is around March 30.

Preparing Parks For Opening Soon As Spring Dawns

Many improvements in recreational facilities and beautification of Atlanta's parks are being pushed to completion in anticipation of the greatest summer season ever experienced, it was announced Saturday by officials of the department.

Bathhouses are being renovated and new plumbing features being installed; shower baths are added for convenience of golfers at Piedmont and James L. Key courses. Greens, too, are being set in order, prettier than ever in the history of golf in this city, the golf capital of the world.

In accordance with plans of the park committee, composed of John A. White, chairman; Charles L. Chosewood, Jim Ozburn, Harry York and W. E. Saunders, L. L. Wallis, superintendent, is perfecting every detail for the convenience of the public and to facilitate the opening of recreational centers with the advent of spring. Although no definite date has yet been set, it was intimated Saturday that it will not be far off, if the present balmy weather continues.

Parks in all sections of the city are sharing in the distribution of park funds. Several new granite entrances, in which more than three carloads of the stone, donated by the Pine Mountain Granite company, have been consumed, have been erected at Grant, Piedmont and smaller play centers. These are massive and imposing structures, and are appropriately decorated. Drawings were donated to the city by the architectural firm of Edwards and Sayward.

All white way posts at Piedmont have been redecorated in buff, instead of the white and green color scheme of former years. Another marked improvement at Piedmont is the construction of a broad concrete bulkhead between the two arms of the lake and erection of a bandstand located out in the lake. This will permit water carnivals and other aquatic events, while the bands play. Concrete starting and finishing platforms will this year supplant the crude wooden ones.

Tennis courts are being resurfaced, and a new bathhouse is under course of construction at Mozley park.

NATURE GUARDIAN LEGION FOR GIRLS AS WELL AS BOYS

Expansion of the Loyal Legion of Nature Guardians, an organization composed of approximately 20,000 Georgia boys, was made recently to include the girls of the state, it was announced by Peter S. Twitty, state game and fish warden, who is working to establish at least one chapter in every school of the state.

Statewide endorsement of the legion by school authorities has followed its organization several weeks ago. Commissioner Twitty mailed form letters to county teachers throughout Georgia recently requesting that they furnish lists of boys and girls interested in nature study.

The purpose of the legion, the commissioner said in his letter, is to instill into young people a love for birds, flowers, forests, streams and other works of nature. Provision will be made to have a state department employee devote his whole time to the affairs of the legion, Mr. Twitty said, members of which will receive from the state a series of study pamphlets on game, fish, flowers, plant life and other kindred subjects.

Merit badges will be awarded to young people who become proficient in the study of wild life, Mr. Twitty said. He asks all boys and girls in Georgia who are interested to write him for particulars, stating that they will be supplied with directions for forming an organization, together with membership and oath cards and legion buttons. The blue bird is the official emblem for the boys in the legion, while a contest will be staged to select a symbol for the girls.

EMORY SOPHOMORE INJURED AS CYCLE AND AUTO CRASH

Emory University, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—Jimmy Moore, son of Dr. J. T. Moore, Tampa, Fla., a sophomore at Emory university, narrowly escaped death Saturday noon, when the motorcycle he was riding collided with an auto at the intersection of Oxford road and North Decatur road, near the campus. The victim was rushed to Wesley Memorial hospital in an unconscious state.

Cause of the wreck is not known. The auto was only slightly damaged but the motorcycle was twisted out of shape, and its rider thrown several feet.

Moore's injuries are not serious.

Three and a half years ago five Atlanta brothers had an idea. They believed in it and backed it with the money they had worked for and saved.

The five brothers were Samuel B., Harry, Mark, Irving and Simon Edison. The idea was to establish a shoe store featuring novelty women's footwear at one price; footwear that went in for style as well as for wear.

Three and a half years ago they opened their original store in Atlanta. Yesterday the city of Houston, Texas, turned out a tremendous crowd to witness the formal opening of the tenth beautiful shoe store of the Edison Brothers company, operators of the well-known Chandler Boot shops.

"It was a good idea we conceived," Sam Edison said Saturday in Atlanta, which is headquarters of the chain of stores. "We treated the public honestly and presented our merchandise attractively. It was a go from the start."

From the modest beginning of one store in Atlanta, the Chandler shops now cover this city with three stores, as well as New Orleans, Birmingham, Memphis, Nashville, Louisville, Kansas City, where a store was opened six weeks ago, and Houston, where the tenth store was opened Saturday.

The Edison brothers were reared in Georgia and have been in the retail shoe business here for the past 26 years. When they got the idea of a style shoe at a single price three and a half years ago, they pooled their resources in order to back their project. The phenomenal growth of their business and the fact that their annual sales have passed the $2,000,000 mark and are well headed toward $3,000,000, tells the story of how the public responded to their idea.

Attending the opening in Houston Saturday from the Atlanta office, were C. E. Hadaway, sales manager; Harry and Irving Edison, of the Edison Brothers firm; Mark Edison, of the buying office, located in St. Louis two months ago, and J. C. Murnan, general decorator.

EMORY PROFESSOR ON LONG COMMITTEE

Emory University, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—Dr. George Bachman, professor of physiology at Emory university, has been appointed on the committee of judges to pass upon research work in medicine presented by members of the Medical Association of Georgia in competition for the Crawford W. Long memorial prize.

The prize is being offered by a progressive citizen who is interested in the scientific progress of medicine and in stimulating research work in Georgia. It is to be competed for at the next annual meeting of the Medical Association of Georgia in Athens, May, 1927. This is the first time it has been offered.

DU PONT

To really protect, paint must be good all through . . . .

THE name du Pont—look for the oval on the can—is your assurance that the results you will get will be better than any you have known before. For du Pont paints are good all through—from raw material to the finished product in the can. The du Pont dealer near you will be glad to advise you just which du Pont paint, or varnish, or enamel, or Duco, is best fitted to do the work.

Wherever the painting you contemplate calls for the professional mind and hand, call in your painter. He will be glad to counsel you on which du Pont product best fits the needs of your work.

GEORGIA SPENDS $40,000 ON BOYS

Georgia spent $40,000 last year on its school for delinquent boys at Milledgeville, it was revealed in an audit of the institutions' accounts just made public by State Auditor Sam J. Slate. The institution received $40,750 in appropriations, its disbursements being $40,110.87, the report showed.

The Georgia Training School for Boys had 110 inmates, 75 of whom were white boys, on December 31, 1926, as against 65 white and 35 colored inmates the year previous, Mr. Slate said. During the last year 71 white and 29 colored boys were received at the school, and 62 white and 26 colored boys were discharged.

The institution authorities reported 23 escapes and 12 recaptures for the year. Nine boys were returned to the school for the violation of their parole.

In his official report to the governor of his examination of the accounts of the school's accounts for 1926, Mr. Slate said, "This institution appears to be doing good work and being operated at the minimum for the work done. The shop building is completed and the equipment about placed. The course of training as contemplated has not yet yet been started.

"The physical condition of the property is good," he said, "and the faculty still appears to be highly interested and working harmoniously."

A survey of the year's receipts showed the school sold $32.38 in farm products during the year. Disbursements for the year included $9,666.76 for salaries; $7,692.49 for provisions; $1,888.54 for clothing; $156.63 for school supplies; $414.39 for drugs; $130.50 for dentistry; $2,897.50 for farm supplies, and $9,506.57 for shop building and equipment.

Legion Observes Tenth Anniversary Of War Beginning

Legionnaires of Atlanta will gather at the Henry Grady hotel at noon Wednesday for official observance of the tenth anniversary of the declaration of war against Germany by the United States. The observance will be in the form of a luncheon which, for the week, will replace the regular Friday luncheon of the legion.

Guests of honor on the occasion will include Major General Malin Craig, new commander of the fourth corps area; Brigadier General H. O. Williams, new commander of Fort McPherson, and Colonel Duncan C. Major, chief of staff of the fourth corps area.

Colonel Major will be chief speaker and a tribute to those who lost their lives in the conflict will be given by Major Asa Warren Candler, commander of the legion post.

The program is being arranged by Basil Stockbridge, grand chef de gare of the Forty and Eight, who will be chairman for the day. He is being assisted by Harry A. Wallerstein, chef de gare of the Atlanta post.

As an added feature of the program the Twenty-Second Infantry orchestra will give several selections.

Face of Prettiest Lassie Will Aid $50,000 Campaign

:: Captain Victoria Chandler Acclaimed Most Beautiful ::

CAPTAIN VICTORIA CHANDLER.

Atlanta has the distinction of having one of the most beautiful Salvation Army lassies in all Dixie.

She is Captain Victoria Chandler, attached to the new southern territory headquarters of the Salvation Army's field department.

Captain Chandler is the accomplished daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Alfred A. Chandler and came to Atlanta from Chicago when her father was assigned here as chief secretary to Commissioner William A. McIntyre, in charge of the southern territory.

Beside being a very efficient Salvation Army officer, Captain Chandler is a graduate nurse, having prepared herself for nursing in Chicago, and is a musician of more than ordinary ability.

This lassie's likeness is to be featured in the extensive publicity campaign in connection with the coming campaign to raise the sum of $50,000 with which to complete the financing of the new Dixie headquarters, the building on Ellis street.

Her features, framed in a blood-red heart and carrying the words, "open your heart" on posters, booklets and folders, will be seen and placed in the hands of many thousands of Atlantans during the coming week.

Perfection of organization which will carry forward the Dixie headquarters campaign is rapidly progressing and General Chairman Preston S. Arkwright Saturday expressed himself as well pleased with the response which has met the call for campaign workers.

Through the courtesy of King Hardware company the campaign committee has secured the store at 55 Peachtree street as campaign headquarters.

It is hoped to have Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army in America, as the speaker at the opening meeting of the campaign workers at the start of the campaign.

Commander Booth is to be a visitor in the city the two days previous to the opening of the campaign and if possible arrangements will be made to have her remain for the workers' mass meeting.

Former Georgia Educator Heads Junior Achievement

Election of Albert A. Johnson, educator, organizer and administrator of wide experience and with international contacts, to the newly-created position of national executive director of Junior Achievement, Inc., national club organization for city boys and girls with headquarters in Springfield, Mass., was learned here Friday from Horace A. Moses, president of the corporation.

Mr. Johnson is widely known throughout Georgia and was formerly prominently affiliated with the North Georgia Agricultural college at Dahlonega, and while there he married the daughter of Dr. G. R. Glenn, who was then president of the college.

Among leading agricultural colleges in this section the work of the institution is favorably recognized in all educational centers. J. G. Penny, the prominent chain store merchant, is very much interested in its work, and he also is well known in the south.

Work of Institute.

The Junior Achievement system, which now has approximately 10,000 boys and girls enrolled in some 900 clubs in the northeastern states, recently was incorporated so as to permit of its expansion into all sections of the country. It is the purpose of the system, by working through existing agencies dealing with city boys and girls, to interest these young people in productive enterprises in industrial, commercial and home-making lines, so that they may grow into good citizens and more skillful and industrious men and women.

Mr. Johnson comes to the Junior Achievement organization direct from the J. C. Penny-Gwinn Institute of Applied Agriculture at Green Cove Springs, Fla., which institution he organized and served as president. His past experience as organizer includes the planning and setting up of three other agricultural institutions, two in Wisconsin, his native state, and the other the New York State Institute of Applied Agriculture at Farmingdale, Long Island.

Saw Near East Service.

Beginning in August, 1921, when he was designated by the Near East relief to assist in organizing the agricultural educational work of boys and girls in the Near East orphanages, Mr. Johnson spent a considerable portion of the next several years as a member of various commissions in the war countries of Europe. He served as chairman of the Russian commission of the Near East and as manager of the unofficial American commission to Russia. Mr. Johnson's training and experience fit him ideally for his new position with Junior Achievement Inc.

Mr. Johnson was born near Madison, Wis., in 1880, the family soon after moving to a ranch near Ft. Sisseton, S. D. He spent his boyhood days in the saddle, undergoing many of the hardships of pioneer life, including adventures with Indians and some thrilling blizzard experiences. At the age of 18 he volunteered for service in the Spanish-American war. He went to the Philippines and served through the insurrection in the First South Dakota Volunteers, receiving the Philippine congressional medal.

He attended the South Dakota State College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts at Brookings and the University of Wisconsin, being graduated from the latter in 1907 with the degree of B. S. A. At both institutions he was prominent in athletics and in the cadet battalions.

Upon graduation from the university Mr. Johnson accepted the chair of agriculture and biology at North Georgia Agricultural college, Dahlonega, and later was elected principal of the Marinette County School of Agriculture, Marinette, Wis., which institution he reorganized. Still later he organized, equipped and conducted the La Crosse County School of Agriculture and Domestic Economy at Onalaska, Wis., and the Milwaukee County School of Agriculture and Domestic Economy, near Milwaukee, Wis.

He was called to New York to plan, organize, equip and conduct the New York State Institute of Applied Agriculture at Farmingdale, L. I.

GENERAL MALIN CRAIG ASSUMES COMMAND

Major General Malin Craig arrived in Atlanta Saturday to assume command of the fourth corps area, succeeding Major General Johnson Hagood, who left for the Philippines two weeks ago.

General Craig, considered one of the most brilliant of the younger general officers of the army, has had a remarkable career, rising rapidly during the past ten years of service.

Going to France as a colonel, he soon was promoted to a brigadier general, and saw much active service on the line as well as making an unusually brilliant record as a staff officer.

Although a native Missourian, General Craig received his appointment at the military academy from the state of Pennsylvania, graduating in 1898. He served in the Santiago campaign of the Spanish-American war and also with the American relief expedition to China at the time of the Boxer rebellion, being stationed later in the Philippines, where he saw 10 years' service.

During the world war General Craig was made chief of staff, first army corps, in which capacity he served through the Aisne-Marne, St. Miehiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives.

Since the war General Craig directed the general staff college at Washington, D. C., and served as commander of coast defenses at Manila and Subig Bay. During his active foreign service General Craig received the following decorations: The Cross of the Legion of Honor and the Croix de Guerre from France; the Champion of the Bath from England; LaCouronne from Belgium, and the Crown of Italy.

Anderson, S. C., April 2.—(AP)—Gluck Cotton mill, the center of a destructive hail storm in 1917, was visited yesterday afternoon by another, and today Robert E. Ligon, vice president and general manager, estimated the damage at $30,000, after making a careful survey.

EMPIRE TRUST ISSUES TWO PER CENT DIVIDEND

A quarterly dividend of 2 per cent on capital stock, amounting to $4,000 on the $200,000 capital, was declared at a recent meeting of the Empire Trust company, payable April 1 to stockholders of record on March 31, according to announcement Saturday by G. C. McWhirter, vice president and treasurer of the company.

FORMER FORSYTH LEADING WOMAN IS RECUPERATING

News has been received by Atlanta friends of Miss Mildred Florence, former leading woman of the Forsyth Players, stating that she is rapidly recovering from the illness which seized her here. She now is at Nahant, Mass., her letter to Manager Martin L. Semon, of the Forsyth theater, stated.

Miss Florence, fresh from a series of triumphs on Broadway, came to Atlanta last fall and opened with James Coots, popular leading man, but was stricken ill and forced to enter a hospital here. She remained here for many weeks and finally was carried to her home in New York.

ACCIDENTS DECREASE IN MARCH, REPORT

Atlanta's traffic mishaps are on the wane, it was learned Saturday when a report issued at police headquarters showed the March total was 12 accidents under that of February.

During March 168 automobile accidents came to the attention of the police with no fatalities and 67 injuries as against February's record of 180 accidents, which injured 75 persons and claimed two lives, the reports show.

FORCES OF DIAZ READY TO ATTACK

Managua, Nicaragua, April 2.—(AP) Troop concentrations have been completed and the conservatives are prepared to make an attack on the liberals near Tierra Azul within 48 hours, it was announced in conservative quarters today. Conservative food and ammunition trains have been arriving hourly at Bocoa, and a hospital corps and staff doctors have been sent up from Managua in preparation for the battle.

Scouts report that the liberals have slightly more than 1,000 in the Matiguas territory, with possibly 400 scattered elsewhere within a 30-mile radius. The conservatives claim to have 3,000 in the field.

Everything possible is being done to bring about a decisive battle before Holy week, for during three days of that week trains will not run and stores will not open and it will be considered "unethical" to engage in battle as all the country will parade, pray and fast.

The United States Sirius arrived at Corinto today and will leave tomorrow, taking to San Diego Captain Campbell, marine aviator, who was fired on by natives last Monday. The Sirius brought a marine hospital corps.

SPRING WILL SEE BETTER BUSINESS

son and business institution that works hard and does its share."

Plans Carefully Laid.

"The J. M. High company has enjoyed a splendid patronage and believes the arrival of spring will mean a healthy and appreciable increase in business," A. R. Dorsen, merchandising manager of the well-known Whitehall street department store, said. "We have carefully laid our plans to meet an increased demand that we expect to continue throughout the year. In other words, we have discharged our duty toward the public with this belief in mind, and we confidently expect that our anticipations of improved and improving conditions will be justified."

Henry S. Johnson, of the Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose company, stressed the idea of service as a means toward improvement of present conditions.

"The fundamental soundness of this city and section always remains unchanged," he said. "Spring naturally will see some increase in trading and I feel that the prospect is for more advantageous things. Our store is prepared to take care of such a circumstance. We have bought fully but cautiously, with a view to rendering one hundred per cent service to those who patronize us."

J. P. Allen, head of the firm which bears his name, reported that his store had recorded a substantial increase in business during February and that March business was normal.

Buying Power Unimpaired.

"There is every reason to believe that business will be reasonably good throughout 1927," he said. "The people are employed; our many big office buildings are paying steady salaries, and buying power is unimpaired. Atlanta is strategically located as the business heart of the southeast, and always shows a disposition to work together for better things."

Frank L. Stanton, of the George Muse company, also reported that this firm has enjoyed increases in its sales this year, both in its men's and its women's departments.

"The outlook is good," he said; "for a steady progression of business this year. Our net sales increased 8 per cent in January and 10 per cent in February. March was even better and will show an increase over last year of from 10 to 12 per cent. We are stocked fully and carefully to meet real needs of our customers, and we are doing all in our power to help toward even better business."

AMERICA PROTESTS WILKINS' MURDER

killed. The majority, however, escaped.

Wilkins, who was 55, had been a resident of Mexico for years and his wife was M ican. He had been kidnaped twice before, but was released unharmed.

Rosenthal was captured by bandits last September in the wild country 40 miles outside Mexico City. The bandits demanded $10,000 ransom. Rosenthal was taken as he and his party, which had been spending the week-end at Cuernavaca, were returning to Mexico City. By a ruse federal troops tried to capture the outlaws and release the prisoner, and when this failed the bandits brutally murdered Rosenthal. Afterwards the troops killed two of the bandits as they fled the scene.

FAMILY PROMINENT IN TWO STATES.

Savannah, Ga., April 2.—(AP)—Edgar M. Wilkins, killed in Mexico, was the son of Gilbert Wilkins and Emma Cheves Wilkins, of South Carolina. He was of distinguished ancestry, and is widely connected throughout that state and in Georgia.

Besides his wife and 10-year-old son, Gilbert Claude Wilkins, he is survived by two brothers, Langdon Cheves Wilkins, of New York, and Martin Wilkins, of Tampa, Fla., and two sisters, Miss Minna C. Wilkins of New York, and Miss Emma C. Wilkins, of Savannah.

A telegram received in the city at 2 o'clock this morning advised Miss Wilkinse of her brother's death.

In speaking of a former trouble which Mr. Wilkins had some eight years ago in Mexico, Miss Wilkins said that it could not have had any connection with the kidnaping by bandits this week. The trouble some years ago occurred when he was associated with an electric engineering company at Orizaba on the gulf coast just north of Vera Cruz, and on that occasion, it was the Mexican government which suspected him—falsely, as it was proven—of being in sympathy with the rebels. He has been living for the past year at Guadalajara, on the Pacific coast, where he was taken captive by the bandits last Sunday.

Story of Trouble.

It was during the Huerta government, about eight years ago. The Mexican government at that time could not protect the electric plant with which her father was connected, and the company, realizing this fact, employed an Irishman, who was friendly with both government and the the rebels to act as mediator, and protect the plant.

This Irishman gave permission to the rebels (unknown to the employees of the plant, it was later proven) to store dynamite in an unused part of the plant. This was discovered by the government, and Mr. Wilkins was arrested and taken to court, but no evidence was found against him. No sooner had he returned to the plant than he was arrested a second time, on suspicion of being in sympathy with the rebels, and was deported as an enemy.

Mr. Wilkins returned to this country and took the matter up with the secretary of state, and absolutely cleared of all charges, returned to Mexico and resumed his connection with the company. Miss Wilkins has been in correspondence with her brother regularly since this time, and there was never any reference to any further trouble there.

Since last July Mr. Wilkins has been connected with the Chapala Electric company, of Guadalajara, on the east coast.

FEDERAL TROOPS PURSUING SLAYERS.

Mexico City, April 2.—(AP)—Pursuit of the bandits who slew their captive, Edgar M. Wilkins, American electrical engineer, was continuing tonight. Army officers conducting the man hunt said they were confident of capturing or killing the outlaws. Wilkins was slain when the bandits' demands for $20,000 ransom proved unavailing.

Announcement of the finding of the body was made yesterday. Advices reaching the United States embassy here from Guadalajara, where the body has been taken, indicate that the engineer was put to death three or four days ago.

The embassy today delivered to the Mexican foreign office a note requesting the capture and punishment of the guilty parties. However, news dispatches from Guadalajara report that federal troops have been actively searching for the bandits for several days.

MARYLAND HOUSE CALLS ON RITCHIE TO MAKE RACE

Annapolis, Md., April 2.—(AP)—With republicans from three counties simultaneously moving to suspend the rules to clear the way for it, the Maryland house of delegates today unanimously adopted a joint resolution asking Governor Ritchie to announce his candidacy for the democratic presidential nomination. The resolution was adopted by the senate last night.

RUSSIAN ACTIVITY IN CHINA BARED

cent instances. In Harbin we had to execute one of our generals, Yang-Cho, who was auditor general of the Chinese eastern, when he was found to be in Russian pay, engaged in fomenting strikes on the railway in the Russian interest.

"A week ago the police in Pekin rounded up radical student leaders in close touch with soviet embassy. In their house were found documents giving details of conferences the soviet embassy held to create trouble. As far as we know these conferences were not intended to work out a plot, but to appoint sectional chiefs to organize strikers among railway and other workers and to undermine the loyalty of police officials."

Burrowing From Within.

These Cantonese are using borrowing from within tactics. All financial help must come from Russian sources because the students have no money to propagate agitation. I am now taking up with the powers the question of continued soviet representation in Pekin. Karakhan has been given his passports and cannot return but I feel that further action should be taken only in consultation with powers.

"You see why I insist on the deportation of bolshevik advisers before I will come to terms with Chiang Kai-Shek. My fight is merely against red influence in China. I will make peace with the south at any time if it will depose Borodin as organizer of agitation activities. General Galents, the strategist, and these men's underlings. I must demand the suppression of communist propaganda. If I arrange an understanding under the present circumstances the world would see a repetition of the Far Eastern republic experiment in China. You remember the soviet upset the Far Eastern republic in Siberia to ward off any attack from the powers preliminary to its absorption to the soviet.

"My fight is the world's fight. I am fighting a world menace in bolshevism. Borah and Lloyd George may think lightly of its effect in China, but I have it at my door and even in my house and therefore may be presumed to know something about its operations. Quite apart from other means of help, I am asking the powers through their ministers at Pekin to warn Russia against encroachment."

BY LAWRENCE WILSON.

Special Correspondent of The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.

(Copyright, 1927, by the North American Newspaper Alliance in the United States, Great Britain and All Other Countries. Reproduction in Whole or Part Prohibited.)

Shanghai, April 2.—In an exclusive interview today, Finance Minister T. V. Soong denied that Chiang Kai-Shek, generalissimo of the Cantonese forces, had been dismissed. He admitted that there is friction within the party, but suggested that such a condition was not strange to political parties in China, America, or other parts of the world.

He refused to comment on the reasons which have impelled him to call an immediate conference with Eugene Chen, foreign minister. "The local financial condition is excellent," he said. "We expect soon to employ foreign advisors and to ask for foreign loans to open the country.

"The notion that we expect to attack the foreign settlement is absurd." He freely admitted that there were enough foreign troops in the foreign settlement to defend it against the whole Chinese army. "But what good will it do the powers to remain in this situation, even if they build such a big wall as we have around north China, around Shanghai?" he added.

Asked why China had been saturated with anti-foreign propaganda while the national government expressed its good will to foreigners, he replied that a slogan was needed to gain victory.

American Cruisers Arrive at Shanghai

Shanghai, April 3.—(A.P.)—The American naval armada in Chinese waters was reinforced with the arrival here this (Sunday) morning of the United States cruisers Richmond and Marblehead.

CANTONESE ACCUSED IN CONSUL'S REPORT

particularly significant, since the state department refused to discuss steps it is preparing to take to exact reparations for the insult and injury inflicted upon Americans at Nanking. Indications are that a final determination has not been made, although demands to be presented to the nationalist authorities are believed to have been drawn up and to conform generally to those the British cabinet has decided to make in behalf of British sufferers and British prestige.

Chen's statement, if taken at face value as the attitude of nationalist authorities in regard to the outrages, may influence the ultimate decision in Washington as to the course of the government in dealing with the Nanking incident.

LONDON SENDS BRIGADE OF INFANTRY TO CHINA.

London, April 2.—(AP)—New evidence was given today of Great Britain's firm determination to exact reparations from the Chinese nationalists for the Nanking outbreak, in which several foreigners were killed or injured.

The war office officially announced that another infantry brigade and auxiliary units totaling approximately 4,000 men would be dispatched to the Far East as soon as they were brought to war strength by calling up reservists.

Augment Resources.

Decision to augment the Shanghai defense force came as a surprise even to those in close touch with events, but military experts at home and in China have maintained that it is essential, when the demands are made on the Chinese, that there be an adequate force on the spot to back up threats of possible action.

It is stated the brigade will be rushed to Hong Kong, relieving the troops there for duty in Shanghai. If urgently necessary, they will be sent directly to the Yangtze.

Negotiations for American and Japanese adhesion to the demands on the Cantonese continue, but it was stated at the foreign office tonight that no agreement had been reached. Meanwhile, Great Britain remains firm in her resolve to take drastic action, alone if necessary.

Blockade Predicted.

Newspapers are full of reports and predictions that the powers finally will agree on a blockade as the best step to take in the event the nationalists refuse reparation for the Nanking affair.

Foreign spokesmen assert there is new evidence that attacks now are being directed by the Cantonese against all foreigners indiscriminately, whereas hitherto the British have been the main targets.

For instance, it is said, the usual anti-British posters have been supplemented at Tsinanfu by others urging the Chinese to rise and kill all foreigners.

MAILED FIST HIDDEN BEHIND DIPLOMACY.

BY ALFRED P. RECK.

Washington, April 2.—(United News.)—The Chinese foreign situation has developed into a contest between the power of the sword and the pen.

But it is a mailed fist diplomacy which is moving close behind naval forces in an attempt to assure protection of foreign lives and property.

While the United States is shifting its warships in Chinese waters to new danger points and concentrating 1,500 additional marines for duty in the far east if needed, diplomatic conferences are under way in Washington to consider protection and indemnity demands to be made to the Cantonese government.

British-U. S. Conference.

Secretary of State Kellogg and British Ambassador Sir Esme Howard have been in conference considering a joint course to be taken as a result of the Nanking riots. Whether the United States will act with Great Britain and Japan in presenting demands upon the Cantonese was not revealed and officials stated they were not ready to announce publicly the action to be taken.

The British are understood to favor a more drastic course than that desired by the United States.

Following the discussion with the British ambassador, Secretary Kellogg called at the White House to present President Coolidge with information on the latest Chinese developments. Both the president and his secretary of state are said to be giving the subject of proper indemnification for the Nanking riots close consideration.

NATIONALIST ARMIES SWEEPING ONWARD.

Shanghai, April 2.—(AP)—Except for minor local disorders Shanghai was quiet today and the attention of the foreign authorities was focused upon the situation to the north of the Yangtze, where the nationalist armies are sweeping onward. Eventually, it is believed, to meet the forces of Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, the Manchurian leader.

Reports from Nanking indicated that the situation there, following upon last week's serious anti-foreign outbreak, was comparatively tranquil, although the British cruiser Emerald, anchored in the Yangtze, continues to be the target for snipers along the shore. Foreign buildings made vacant by the general exodus of foreigners from the city, are being used as barracks by the nationalist soldiery.

BY H. FRANCIS MISSELWITZ.

Shanghai, April 2.—(United Press.) Increased dissention between the radical and moderate wings of the nationalist movement was indicated here tonight.

Several Chinese were killed and 150 wounded in a riot between the radical and moderate factions of the nationalist army at Chunging, according to an unconfirmed report received today from that city.

The report said that members of the radical wing of the party were conducting a strong anti-foreign demonstration and that 300 nationalists who did not sympathize with anti-foreign activities attempted to break up the demonstration.

Chunging is more than 1,000 miles up the Yangtze river from Shanghai and the scene of several recently reported disorders.

Chen Makes Protest.

Meanwhile, a strong nationalist protest against the bombardment of Nanking by British and American warships during the anti-foreign disorders there has been made by Eugene Chen, nationalist foreign minister at Hankow and one of the leaders of the more radical wing of the nationalist party, which is reputed to be dissatisfied with the moderate tendencies of General Chiang Kai-Shek, nationalist military commander.

man received a serious fracture of the skull and internal injuries while the companion, whose name was not obtained at Grady hospital, where both were treated, escaped with minor scratches.

Louise Robinson, 3 years old, of 313 Woodward avenue, was slightly injured about the face and head Saturday night at Woodward avenue and Hardin street, when knocked down by an automobile driven by V. C. Lessett, of 463 Whitehall street. After rushing the child to Grady hospital where several stitches were taken in the child's head, Lerrett reported the accident to Captain J. L. Gordon. No case was made.

Rufus Pritchett, of 44 1-2 Marietta street, reported to police that a machine he was driving had knocked down John Slack, 15, of 1011 Dimmock street, Saturday night on Lee street near the McCall crossing. The boy, in an unconscious condition, was taken to Grady hospital where it was said the injuries were serious.

Nell Oberlin Injured.

Miss Nell Oberlin, of 300 Jackson street, N. E., was injured early Saturday morning when her automobile collided with a car driven by B. Blevins, of 17 Hardin street, Hapeville, at Spring street and Carnegie way, according to the report of Patrolmen W. F. Rusell and H. W. Wiggins.

Miss Oberlin, who figured as Jack Lance's sweetheart in the investigation of the murder of Bert Donaldson, crack investigator of Solicitor General John A. Boykin's office, was driving south on Spring street, while Blevins was going north, it was reported. A. J. Jones, of 661 Catherine street, was an occupant of Blevins' car. All three participants were badly shaken up and bruised, and Jones was lacerated about the face. Cases of reckless driving were made against both drivers.

Miss Ida Feinberg, of 981 Washington street, was bruised Saturday afternoon at Five Points when struck by an automobile. She refused to go to the hospital for treatment and requested that no case be made, it was reported by police.

Atlanta Girl May Win Fame As Grand Opera Soprano Star

PEARL MYERS-BAKER.

Atlanta may soon boast another nationally-known artist in Pearl Myers-Baker, talented dramatic soprano and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Myers, of 910 North Main street, Colonial Hills.

This became known recently following an audition given Miss Myers-Baker by Madame Schumann-Heink in Charlotte, N. C., following which the famous contralto enthusiastically advised the Atlanta girl to pursue her musical training in New York under the tutelage of Frank LaForge, vocal instructor of that city.

So emphatic was Madame Schumann-Heink's declaration that a brilliant future awaits Miss Myers-Baker that she outlined what she said would prove to be a practical course to follow. The noted opera star suggested a training program which embraces study in Paris under capable instructors.

The local dramatic soprano first received training at the Atlanta Conservatory of Music, where for four years she was a pupil to Miss Mary Lansing, who brought out the fine qualities of the girl's voice.

Following this course of training, Miss Myers-Baker won a place in the ensemble of the Atlanta Light Opera company and later went to Florida, where she engaged successfully in concert work, visiting a number of the largest cities of that state. Through her participation in radio programs she is well known to thousands of radio fans throughout the south.

One of the finest compliments paid Miss Myers-Baker was the extension of an invitation to join the Manhattan Opera company, which last winter was presenting a number of concerts in Tampa.

According to Miss Myers-Baker, she intends spending at least a year in New York under instruction of Frank LaForge. She is laying plans in that direction at the present time, she said Saturday.

BUTLER TO MAKE POLITICAL SURVEY

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—After a conference with President Coolidge, William M. Butler, chairman of the republican national committee, announced today that he would begin a country-wide survey of the republican political situation beginning April 15.

The national chairman plans to be on the road about a month and, while his itinerary has not been fully worked out, he said he would visit Pacific coast states as well as those in the northwest, conferring with national committeemen, state chairmen and other party leaders.

Asked if one purpose was the sounding of sentiment on the question of renomination of President Coolidge next year, Mr. Butler said candidates were not being considered at this time; that the idea was to tighten up the party machinery.

N. Y. LEGISLATURE FAILS TO REOPEN DRY LAW FIGHT

Albany, N. Y., April 2.—(AP)—The effort of Eliot Tuckerman, New York attorney and former member of the legislature, to induce the legislature to reopen the question of the validity of the eighteenth amendment apparently died at birth, as the legislative session adjourned without any action on his proposal.

went glimmering when the union officials said they would decline to participate in any conference which had for its basis a discussion of a scale lower than that which expired Thursday midnight.

The Ohio operators had replied to a union suggestion for a conference by stating they would participate only in the discussion of a competitive wage. The miners are bound to discuss no scale lower than that of the Jacksonville agreement.

More small mines in Ohio announced their intention to continue operations under separate agreements with the union.

Railroads of the nation, forewarned of the general suspension in the bituminous fields, have stored enough fuel for three to four months of operation, according to Charles D. Morris, assistant chairman of the western railways committee on public relations.

If the suspension extends for more than four months, he said, the railroads will have little difficulty in obtaining additional supplied from non-union fields.

APPLE BLOSSOM FETE ON TUESDAY

Cornelia, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) With millions of pink petals nodding and swaying approval of glorification, the first Apple Blossom festival is formally on in this section and will be brought to a fitting close next Tuesday, when a huge outdoor pageant will be staged here.

Special trains will be run and, in the absence of rain, the highways in this section will be in good condition and thousands of visitors are expected to be present.

The pageant will be staged in the R. H. Black orchards, about one-half mile beyond the city limits. This orchard was selected, not only because of its size and tens of thousands of blossoming trees which are now in their full bloom, but because of its convenient location.

The program opened last night, when a pageant under the direction of Miss Selina Lewis was presented at the school auditorium. Trained players took part in the play that glorified the apple, blossoms being used in the scenes and as decoration for the building.

The Apple Blossom festival is being directed by the Consolidated Apple Growers' exchange, of which J. Frank Beck, of Atlanta, is president. This company embraces many leading orchardists of this northeast Georgia section.

Next Tuesday, which has been selected as the day on which the blossoming fruit trees will, in all probability, present their greatest riot of profuse glory, a great outdoor pageant will be presented. Miss Lewis is also directing this. Mrs. Will Fort, wife of the mayor of Cornelia, has been selected as "apple blossom queen," while William Lewis will be "apple blossom king."

The Clemson college band will provide music for the occasion and will head a large delegation from South Carolina. The Cornelia Kiwanis club, all city officials and other prominent Cornelia citizens, will act as a welcoming and entertainment committee.

Special trains are to be r... by the Southern railway, with exceptionally low round trip excursion fares. Ample accommodation for the crowds, regardless of size, is promised by officials. Each train will be met at the Cornelia depot and free transportation provided to the scene of the pageant.

Concluding the pageant visitors will be taken by automobile through some of the largest orchards in Georgia, covering many miles of territory. Among the orchards which will be visited in this automobile tou... the Yonah orchards, of Porter Brothers; the R. H. Black orch... M. J. Yoeman's properties; H. G. Straight property, at Ta... Ogletree property; C. J. Haden property; F. L. Asbury orchards at Clarksville, and the J. Frank Beck orchards at Hollywood.

This, the first apple blossom festival ever staged in Georgia, promises to attract national attention by the extent of the plans announced and preparations made to care for thousands of visitors. On one stretch along the Tallulah Falls railroad there is a continuous perspective of the blossoming trees, unbroken for a distance of 40 miles.

Moving picture cameramen from all the leading news reel concerns will be on the scene, as well as scores of newspaper cameramen.

MANY ATLANTANS TO SEE FESTIVAL.

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce is very much interested in having Georgia stage both apple and peach blossom festivals and is appealing to all citizens of Atlanta to patronize the annual apple blossom festival to be held at Cornelia, Ga., on Tuesday, April 5.

The chamber of commerce obtained the cooperation of the Southern railway to operate a special train, leaving Atlanta at 7 a. m. April 5, arriving at Cornelia at 10:45 o'clock. Tickets are good for return on the following afternoon trains leaving Cornelia at 2:30, 3:46 and 5:45 o'clock. A round trip rate of $1.75 has been designated.

A beautiful entertainment has been arranged, consisting of a pageant, under the direction of Miss Silina Lewis. Mrs. Will Fort, wife of the mayor of Cornelia, is the queen and Charles Lewis is the king. Forty beautiful young ladies of that vicinity and about 100 children will take part.

The Cornelia entertainment committee will arrange to have cars to take the visitors on an inspection tour of the prominent orchards. The more prominent orchard properties to be visited will be those of R. H. Black, Yonah orchards of Porter Brothers, C. J. Haden properties; Phil Ogletree's orchard at Demorest, Frank L. Asbury's orchards at Clarksville, and J. Frank Beck's orchard at Hollywood.

It is believed that large delegations from Atlanta will attend this apple blossom festival.

COMER FUNERAL HELD IN ALABAMA

Eufaula, Ala., April 2.—(Special.) Funeral services for Edward T. Comer, capitalist and philanthropist, who died suddenly Thursday morning at his home in Savannah, were held Saturday at Old Spring Hill, Ala., near Eufaula, where he was born in 1856. Interment followed at the Comer family cemetery where the body was laid to rest in the handsome mausoleum, which he erected several years ago.

Arriving in Eufaula by special train at 8:15 Saturday, Mr. Comer's body, accompanied by many loved ones, was carried directly to Spring Hill church by way of the famous Comer highway, which was built and is maintained by a generous endowment of the deceased. Dr. D. P. Slaughter, Methodist presiding elder of the Eufaula district, officiated. Among the pallbearers were nephews of the deceased.

Besides a large number of relatives and friends from Savannah attending the funeral were W. T. Comer and Dr. C. T. Brocket, of Atlanta; W. D. Anderson, Mrs. John D. Comer and others from Macon; Governor and Mrs. R. B. Comer, Birmingham.

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Georgia Stewart Comer; two brothers, Ex-Governor B. B. Comer, Birmingham, and Colonel G. L. Comer, Eufaula, and many nieces and nephews.

BLANCHARD GETS TERM IN PRISON

Appling, Ga., April 2.—(AP)—A jury in Columbia county superior court this afternoon returned a verdict of guilty and fixed sentence from one to two years in the penitentiary in the case of the State vs. L. E. Blanchard, clerk of court, charged with the murder of Ike Jones, business man of Harlem, December 1. The punishment given by the jury covers the charge of manslaughter, which was charged by the court. The verdict was received by Judge A. L. Franklin at 1:15 o'clock this afternoon.

Counsel for Blanchard announced that a new trial will be sought. Blanchard went on trial Wednesday morning. The case went to the jury at 4:55 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Its deliberation was longer than that of any jury in this court, according to officers of the court.

The trial of Blanchard created much interest in this section. The courtroom was packed throughout the trial. A number of citizens were here this afternoon when the verdict was read. The largest number of school children and women ever seen in the courthouse at any one time witnessed the trial.

District Odd Fellows Hold Griffin Session; Fine Reports Are Made

Griffin, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—The semi-annual convention of the eleventh division of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows was held in Griffin today. Counties embraced in the eleventh district and from which lodges sent representatives are Spalding, Pike, Upson, Coweta, Troupe, Monroe, Fayette, and Henry.

The convention was called to order at 10 o'clock this morning in the lodge room of Griffin Lodge No. 346 with M. O. Chappel, division deputy grand master, presiding. A large number of delegates were in attendance.

Among the prominent Odd Fellows here were T. H. Robertson, grand secretary, of Gainesville, and A. B. Brown, past noble grand, of the Rose Hill lodge of Columbus. The convention transacted business of interest to the members and the reports showed that there had been a material increase in membership and that all of the lodges in the division are in a most prosperous condition.

THE Frye-Atwood Geography is a textbook used in most public schools. From it your youngster learns what people do to earn a living.

And wherever the geography goes, the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company goes also. The geography illustrations reproduced on this page show typical scenes of American industry. To each of them is added a note pointing out some Westinghouse contribution to that special field. The list includes a cotton mill, a steel mill, a railroad train, a skyscraper—if space permitted it could be made large enough to take in nearly every aspect of American life.

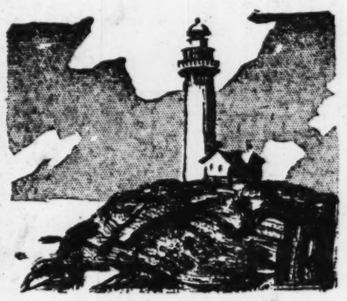

For in almost every modern activity, Westinghouse has pioneered in the use of electric power and is a leader in that activity today. To find where Westinghouse serves, read your youngster's geography. For the book which tells the story of American industry is a guidebook to the accomplishment and constant progress of Westinghouse.

Westinghouse facilities are as extensive territorially as the countries covered in your youngster's geography. 13 factories, 31 service shops, 33 warehouses, and sales offices in 114 cities serve the United States. Westinghouse dealers are in the smallest towns. The Canadian Westinghouse Company serves our neighbors on the north. The Westinghouse Electric International Company has offices and distributors throughout the civilized world.

Candler Loud in Praises Of Nine Operas Included In Atlanta's Annual Week

Music Festival Association Official Gives First-Hand Impressions of Operas and Brilliant Stars.

Charles Howard Candler, vice president of the Music Festival association, probably has heard more of the operas to be sung during the Atlanta season than any other person in the city. A request to give his views on the coming season, and to give some of his personal impressions of the operas to be presented here, brought forth an interesting account.

"Nothing is too good for Atlanta," Mr. Candler said. "We are accused on all sides of being blow-hards. There is not a little justification. We always have something about which to blow and naturally being proud of our achievements we tell it to the world.

"Grand opera in Atlanta has become an institution. For many years the Metropolitan Opera company confined its activities to New York and Philadelphia. Three years ago it visited Cleveland on a return trip to New York from Atlanta. Last year Cleveland and Rochester were visited. This year Baltimore and Washington will be visited, with four performances at each city. Three days will be spent in each city before getting to Atlanta where the company will stay a whole week, as usual, giving eight performances, presenting nine operas, three of which have never before been heard in Atlanta.

"Turandot" Is Praised.

"It is due to the marvelous reception accorded this splendid organization by the people of Atlanta and vicinity, the remarkable success of past seasons of grand opera here that we were able to prevail upon the management of the Metropolitan to bring to us the tremendous posthumously produced Puccini work, 'Turandot.' It is most lavishly staged, requires many supers and a large cast. It is probably one of the most costly productions ever staged by the Metropolitan. The expense incurred has been fully justified by the gratifying success of every performance in New York.

"We said to Mr. Zeigler, 'If it is good for New York, Atlanta certainly deserves it,' so we have it, and everybody is going to be charmed with it. The music is majestic. When the chorus is singing one is impressed with the belief that all of those hundred supers are singing. The story or plot of the opera is intensely interesting and the singing of the principals overwhelms the audience with enthusiasm.

"Three of the principal roles will be sung here by three Americans, all of charming personality and exceptional ability. Florence Easton, the princess; Edward Johnson, the unknown prince; Nannette Guilford, Lui the lover of the unknown prince. Miss Eaton has the largest repertoire of any member of the company, and does every role exceptionally well. Edward Johnson, said by John McCormack to be the perfect tenor, has recently achieved the unusual feat of singing five different leading roles within eleven days at the Metropolitan Opera house. This reward at the hands of the Metropolitan management was brought about by experience and hard study and the success achieved in the undertaking merited the confidence placed in him.

Miss Guilford Charming.

"Nannette Guilford is on of the most beautiful girls in the company and is particularly successful in such roles as 'Nedda' in Pagliacci. De Luca is a most amusing clown, one of a trio of ambassadors who are always in hot water. This opera also serves to introduce to Atlanta two singers new to us, Pavel Ludikar, basso, and George Cehanovsky, baritone, playing respectively, father of the unknown prince and the Mandarin.

"Anyone who passes up this privilege of hearing and seeing this magnificent opera will regret it, as the Metropolitan can hardly afford to produce it again away from New York.

"A glance at the two casts of artists to sing Tuesday evening in the bargain double bill reads like a roster of the Metropolitan company. That evening the most thrilling melodramatic tragedy, 'The Love of Three Kings,' will be sung to the most perfect modern music by a galaxy of artists all of whom are well-known prime favorites in Atlanta. The divine Rosa Ponselle, who has only this season added to her repertoire, 'Fiora,' sings and acts this part with a magnificent abandon never before portrayed by any of the fine artists essaying this role. Martinelli, the perfect passionate lover, with his voice of exquisite quality arouses the interest of his hearers to fever heat enthusiasm in his strife for the fickle Fiora."

"Our own Lawrence Tibbett, whose sensational success in every role entrusted to him because of his perfect acting and understanding of the business of his parts together with an unusually fine, sweet-baritone voice of powerful proportions, will run Martinelli a tight race for favor both at the hands of the foolish 'Fiora' and the enthralled audience. Leon Rothier, as the old blind king, will handle the cruel Killing with proper restraint and sing the passionate passages of affection for his son, who has been deceived by the unwise Fiora with remarkable sonority and unexcelled beauty. The remaining six roles will be adequately handled by well-known singers of outstanding ability.

Hunter in New Opera.

"Preceding this music lovers' treat will be presented 'Gianni Schicchi,' the one-act Puccini musical comedy, with the incomparable comedian, De Luca, in the leading role and the fascinating Louise Hunter, Atlanta's sweetheart, singing and playing the sweetheart role opposite Tokatyan, one of the most romantic actors in the company. Kathleen Howard, the contralto par-excellence, is planning to keep the estate in the family. This opera will afford Atlanta its first opportunity of hearing Ezio Pinza, the best basso since Edward De Reske. Beautiful Nannette Guilford, charming Grace Anthony add to the fun by their interfering suggestions. The old reliable Angelo Bada, who can sing any tenor buffoon role in opera, is uproariously funny, ably assisted by another standby, Paolo Ananian. To complete the cast requires five other first-rate artists.

"These two splendid shows require the services of 24 of the best artists in the company, all of which we get for the price of one performance, which will certainly give us our money's worth and can truly be classed as a big bargain.

"Misguided love, misuse, misunderstanding, and misfortune, following close upon one another, each in turn holding full sway, serve to open our reason with Verdi's 'La Traviata.' The leading role will be assumed by Ameliti Galli-Curci, whose vocal charm is always manifest in her singing. Her admirers never cease to marvel at her ability. The ever popular Gigli, said by some to possess a voice more nearly than that of any other approaching the perfection and beauty of the immortal Caruso, sings 'Alfredo.'

"His duet with Germont, his father, to be sung by Bassiola, who made such a favorable impression last, year, will be one of the outstanding gems by which the evening will be long remembered. In this the father begs him to return home, to 'Fair Provence,' and give up the naughty Violetta. The third act provides a beautiful ballet divertissement by exquisite Rita De Leporte and corps de ballet. Like all Verdi operas, this one abounds in melody and will always be popular.

New Tenor to Appear.

"Friday afternoon 'Lohengrin' will introduce to Atlanta Walter Kirchoff, the new German tenor, who made his debut in America January 28, this year. His first appearance at the Metropolitan Opera house was a sensational success. He revealed himself as an excellent artist; his singing, thrilling in its quality, was agreeable and free from offense. Dramatically, he follows the line of the music as well as the meaning of the part, as no singer has done in this country since the departure of Otto Goritz. He sings his music, and does not bark, bleat or shout. Florence Easton will be a beautiful 'Elsa.' Julia Claussen, who has delighted Atlanta audiences heretofore, will sing the dramatic 'Ortrud,' while Lawrence Tibbett, as 'Telramund,' will help her designs against Elsa. Pavel Ludikar will portray a majestic king.

"Friday evening will afford Ponselle and Martinelli together with Bassiola and Pinza another opportunity of charming their many friends and admirers in the memorable melodious Verdi opera 'La Forza del Destino.' They are supported by a large cast as well as the corps de ballet, which will introduce incidental dances. This opera will serve to introduce the new conductor, Vincenzo Bellezza, this being his first visit to Atlanta.

"The Metropolitan will draw upon the best resources of its organization for the cast of 'Mignon,' one of the most successful of this year's revivals. The new scenery is beautiful and the costumes are tasteful and harmonious. It has not been in the repertoire since 1908. As a type, Mignon is in that misty mid-region between serious and opera comique. The most interesting moments in the work are in the detached solos. Atlanta's best beloved, barefoot Bori, the fascinating gypsy in this opera, as in everything she sings, will display the charm and also the pathetic winsome quality which this role calls for. Her best singing may be expected in 'Connais-tu' and in the little prayer in the final scene which brings back to Mignon the recollection of her identity and incidentally reestablishes the sanity of Lothario and his own personality as the father of Mignon.

Bori and Gigli Sing.

"No two singers' voices are better suited for duets than are Bori's and Gigli's. He has no better opportunity during the week—and he sings in three operas—for a display of the quality and richness of his tones. His singing of this role is likely to create a furore. As Philine, the vivacious, white-plumed, hood-skirted coquette, America's own Marion Talley will be ravishingly beautiful. In this part she does the best work with which she has thus far in her short career honored her thousands of admirers. The very mechanics of her singing she does with a smoothness and ease which cause her listeners to marvel at her ability.

"You certainly have a treat in store in hearing her sing 'Je Suis Titania,' one of the most difficult and glorious coloratura arias in all opera. Leon Rothier, a native Frenchman, will gratify and please in his dramatic presentation of the simple-minded Lothario. The role of Frederic was originally written for a tenor. It is now usually sung by a dainty young lady who can act. What a treat is in store for us with Louise Hunter playing the swashbuckling boy lover who is cast aside with derision by the vain Philine! How can anyone afford to miss such a treat as this magnificent case in this delightful opera will afford?

"In 'Romeo et Juliette,' the Saturday matinee, we will again have the charming Bori and magnetic Gigli combination, with Louise Hunter thrown in for good measure, singing again a young man's part, dressed according to the Elizabethan style of the time of the immortal Bard of Avon. Everyone knows the play and most of Gounod's melodies. The waltz song is a classic and is used by nearly every young lady soprano who graduates in music as a means of demonstrating her proficiency.

"This opera will serve to introduce to Atlanta Joseph Macpherson, of Nashville, Tenn. It was during the week of opera last year when Major John S. Cohen interested Otto Kahn and other officials of the Metropolitan in giving Macpherson an audition. So pleased were they that he was given a contract and has made good. He will sink the Duke of Verona. A large number of his Nashville friends and admirers are making a special trip to hear him. We lay claim to him also.

"The week of glorious song, wonderful music and charming social events, contributed to by our many delightful guests, will be brought to a fitting close with the ever-popular Puccini's 'Madame Butterfly,' giving us again its pathetically beautiful story and its veritable limitless store of familiar lovely melody. Florence Easton is the little Japanese maid who loves the handsome, dashing United States naval officer, which will be played by the fine-looking, romantic Tokatyan. The artist of all in the company who was more nearly responsible for first interesting Atlantans in bringing grand opera here is our dearly beloved friend, sterling actor and sweet singer, Antonio Scotti, who will sing Sharpless, the United States consul, as perhaps no one else does. He will never grow old. He will always be young and gay. At our social functions he is always the life of the party.

"It will be this year, as it has been in the past, with a sigh of regret that we see the big red plush curtains swing together at the end of the last act of 'Butterfly,' but he will have the satisfaction of looking forward with confidence to another big season of operas of the Metropolitan's usual high standard of excellence."

BANK OBSERVES 37TH BIRTHDAY

Felicitated by its hundreds of friends while it "carried on" into a new year of business, the Fourth National bank Saturday observed the 37th anniversary of its birth as an important factor in the business life and development of Atlanta.

Throughout the day the bank's patrons and pioneer residents who are most keenly aware of the prominent part the Fourth National has played in making Atlanta the commercial hub of the southeast, visited and congratulated John K. Ottley, president of the institution, and its vice presidents, Charles I. Ryan, James D. Robinson, Robert Strickland, Jr., William T. Perkerson, Stewart McGinty and R. Clyde Williams.

JOHN K. OTTLEY,
President of the Fourth National Bank.

On its 37th birthday the bank issued a statement showing that it is in a prosperous condition, with resources of over $40,000,000, more than 80,000 patrons, deposits of $36,000,000 and capital, surplus and profits of $3,750,000.

The Fourth National has been one of the leading banking institutions of Atlanta since its establishment here nearly 40 years ago. It has played a prominent part and actually financed many of the biggest improvements made here looking to city progress, and its influence has been felt in every project of civic improvement launched since it was founded.

In addition to the president and vice presidents, officials of the bank are: Frank M. Berry, cashier; Edward H. Daly, assistant cashier; Henry B. Longino, assistant cashier; Samuel J. Fuller, assistant cashier; Edgar A. Stubbs, auditor, and W. LeRoy Daughtry, assistant trust officer.

BAPTISTS OF DECATUR HEAR SERMON SERIES

A series of daily meetings will be held at the First Baptist church, of Decatur, April 3-17, with morning services at 10 o'clock and night services at 7:30 o'clock. The general theme to be discussed at the meeting is "Christian Living—Things That Hinder and Things That Help."

The opening service will be held Monday at which the subject, "The Burden of Temporal Cares," will be discussed. "Fires of Hate Unquenched," "The Poison of Secret Sins," "Feeding the Soul on Husks" and "Filching God's Time and Tithes," are the subjects announced for the first week.

"Things That Help in Christian Living," is the theme of the second week's meeting, for which the following subjects have been announced, "Wholesome Fare for the Soul," "Tapping the Source of Power," "Keeping the New Commandment," "Learning the Mathematics of Faith" and "Taking the Best Exercise."

Local Naval Reserve Unit Laying Plans for Cruise in July

The regular monthly inspection of the Atlanta battalion of the United States naval reserve was held Friday night at the reserve armory, Rolling Jones building, Lieutenant W. L. Travis, inspector-instructor, reporting favorably on appearance of the personnel.

An interesting event of the evening was the presentation of silver loving cups by the battalion commander to J. V. Patrick, coxswain, first battalion, and Z. S. Carnes, coxswain, second division. Cups were presented these men for displaying meritorious service in their respective divisions during the past year.

Lieutenant Harry F. Dobbs, battalion commander, stated that orders had been received from the bureau of navigation to the effect that the annual summer cruise of the Atlanta unit would take place in July, sailing from Charleston, S. C., on July 30, for northern ports aboard the U. S. S. Bainbridge and U. S. S. Reuben James, destroyers.

LUNCHEON GUESTS KEEN FOR QUIET

More than 50 local members of the Georgia Alumni association attended the second monthly luncheon meeting of the organization Friday at the Atlanta Athletic club. The meetings are finding popularity among the alumni who welcome an absence of speeches from the luncheon program, it was announced by W. Henry Smith, chairman of the luncheon committee.

BUCKHEAD BAPTISTS PLAN REVIVAL SERIES

Buckhead Baptists have secured the services of E. L. Wolflagel, chorus leader, who has served as musical director with Billy Sunday and who has assisted Dr. Weston Bruner, pastor, in some of his evangelistic campaigns, to assist Dr. Bruner in the revival starting June 5. The church has secured a large tent and will erect it on the lot on Peachtree road and all denominations will join in the campaign. Mr. Wolflagel arrives June 5 and the meeting will start on that date.

Dr. Bruner, pastor of the church, announces a series of sermons beginning April 3, his topics as follows: April 3, morning, "What I Believe About the Word of God;" evening, "The Young Man and His Home." April 10, morning, "The Fatherhood of God;" evening, "The Young Man and His Teacher." April 17, morning, "The Saviourhood of Jesus;" evening, "The Young Man and His Friends." April 24, morning, "The Friendhood of the Holy Spirit;" evening, "The Young Man and His Enemies." May 1, morning, "The Brotherhood of Man;" evening, "The Young Man and His Crown." Graded Sunday school at 9:30 o'clock each Sunday morning, with J. W. Elliott, superintendent.

HELLMAN OFFICIALS IN CONVENTION HERE

As part of a nationwide movement looking to a better understanding and a more thorough knowledge of the policies of Richard Hellman, Inc., in relation to its distributors, the concern which makes the popular Richard Hellman brand of mayonnaise Saturday held a convention at the Atlanta Athletic club.

Richard Hellman, head of the big concern which bears his name, was expected to attend but was unavoidably detained in New York. He has been here twice during the past year and is favorably impressed with Atlanta and the entire south.

Present at the distributors' conference—at which A. D. Leavitt, local district manager, acted as host—were G. C. Rohrs, general sales and advertising manager, and Joe G. Wood, national sales counsel, in addition to distributors from this territory.

Mr. Rohrs and Mr. Wood have been holding conventions in all of the Hellman company's branch plants, which are located in Atlanta, Dallas, Tampa, Chicago and San Francisco. The main plant is in New York.

Dallas and Tampa have already held conventions this year. The Atlanta session was staged for the benefit of distributors of Georgia, Alabama, North and South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia.

The Atlanta plant of the Hellman company is located at 65 Walker street, with Mr. Leavitt as district manager.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LIX., No. 293. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 3, 1927.

President Revokes Oil Reserve Order Issued by Harding

Jurisdiction Is Changed From Secretary of Interior To Navy Department by Coolidge.

ACTION FOLLOWS COURT DECISION

Under Old Order Albert Fall Negotiated Leases With Edward L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair.

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—President Coolidge has revoked the executive order issued by President Harding May 31, 1921, under which Albert B. Fall as interior secretary negotiated the naval oil reserve leases with Edward L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair which led to both civilian and criminal actions in the federal courts.

The order of revocation was dated last March 17, and it was stated at the white house that it was issued in keeping wih the decision of the United States supreme court revoking the contracts and leases made with Doheny covering the Elk Hills, California reserve and oil tank storage at Pearl Harbor.

Executive Order.

Made public at the state department in the usual routine way of publishing executive orders, it reads:

"Executive order No. 3474 of May 31, 1921, committing to the secretary of the interior the administration and conservation of all oil and gas bearing lands in naval petroleum reserves Nos. 1 and 2, California, and naval petroleum reserve No. 3 in Wyoming, and naval shale reserves in Colorado and Utah, under the provisions of the acts of congress approved February 25, 1920, and June 4, 1920, is hereby revoked."

Navy Placed in Charge.

By this order jurisdiction over all of the reserves save that in Wyoming—the celebrated Teapot Dome—is left exclusively with the navy department. The Wyoming reserve still is in dispute, with Sinclair appealing to the supreme court from a circuit court decision revoking the lease.

Both during the senate investigation and the hearings on the civil suits for the recovery of the reserves, President Harding's order was attacked as illegal because it in effect set aside an act of congress placing jurisdiction in the navy department.

In deciding the Doheny case, however, the supreme court did not pass judgment on that proposition. Justice Butler, who read the decision, declared the transaction evidenced by the contracts and leases with Doheny was not authorized by the act of June 4, 1920, under which Fall and Edwin Denby, as secretary of the navy, contended they had authority to revoke the time-honored policy of keeping a great naval petroleum in the ground.

Originated With Fall.

Evidence before the senate oil committee was that the executive order which Harding signed was drawn in the interior department and the charge was that the plan of leasing the reserves originated with Fall, who accepted $100,000 from Doheny during the negotiations covering the Elk Hills reserve.

The executive order was approved at the navy department and it was taken to the white house for Harding's signature by Theodore Roosevelt, then assistant secretary of the navy.

After the order was signed, negotiations for leasing of the two principal naval reserves were entered into, first with Doheny's company, and later with Harry F. Sinclair's mammoth oil company. They extended over a period of more than a year and in holding that the Doheny lease and contract were tainted with fraud, the supreme court cited the secrecy which attended their negotiation.

Fall has faced one jury with Doheny on a charge of criminal conspiracy. Both were acquitted, but the former interior secretary is charged jointly with Sinclair with criminal conspiracy in connection with the Teapot Dome leases. That case is set for trial in the district of Columbia supreme court April 25.

OPERA FANS AWAIT OPENING OF SALE OF SINGLE SEATS

Sale of Season Tickets Ends Saturday Night After Remarkably Successful Sales Period.

Following the close Saturday of the sale of season tickets for the 1927 season of Metropolitan Grand Opera in Atlanta the week of April 25, thousands of persons over the south are eagerly awaiting the opportunity to purchase tickets for single performances. The sale of single tickets will begin on Monday, April 11, at the Cable Piano company, 84 North Broad street.

The sale of season tickets this year compares most favorably with the year 1926, which was the largest season ticket sale in the history of the 16 years the Metropolitan company has been paying spring visits to Atlanta.

This year's season of opera in Atlanta will, according to General Manager Giulio Gatti-Casazza, be "more ambitious in number of performances and in richness and variety of repertoire, presenting the most brilliant galaxy of stars of the lyric stage possible of assembly today."

According to Gatti Casazza, this season will be the best from every standpoint that the Metropolitan company is able to offer. Particular interest is centered around the performance of Wednesday evening of Turandot, a posthumous opera by Puccini which will be presented in Atlanta for the first time. Another particularly ambitious performance will be the double bill Tuesday evening on which will be heard another of Puccini's operas, Gianni Schicchi

SIX COAL MINERS DIE IN EXPLOSION

Cokesburg, Pa., April 2.—(AP)—A coal dust explosion in Ellsworth collieries mine No. 3 here today claimed the lives of six miners, but 400 others at work in the underground tunnels escaped uninjured to the surface by way of the main shaft. Five other workers were burned but will recover. The mine was known until recently as No. 53 of the Bethlehem Mines corporation, subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel company.

The suspension of mining yesterday in the central competitive field did not affect the Cokesburg mine, which is non-union. The regular force went to work this morning, 411 men.

In a room of the main heading some miners tapped in a shot of dynamite to loosen coal. Just as they had finished preparing the shot a rock tumbled down from the roof, setting the explosives off. The miners were unprepared and the explosion shot out into the entry, setting off coal dust.

The entire mine had been insulated thoroughly with rock dust, and the explosion did not spread beyond the entry. Eleven miners at work nearby were knocked unconscious by the blast. Six of these succumbed to deadly after-damp before rescuers found them. Five others, burned slightly, were rescued.

In other parts of the workings 400 miners were busy digging coal. Some of these men at isolated points from the scene of the explosion did not know the blast had occurred.

Do College Students Pray?

:: Northwestern Graduate Conducts Questionnaire ::

If So, Why, When, Where?

Evanston, Ill., April 2.—(AP)—R. W. Williams, of McComb, Miss., graduate student at Northwestern university, has taken an unusual subject for his dissertation for a Ph. D. degree.

He has set out to determine whether the average college student in the United States prays. And, if he does, how and when.

His questionnaires are being answered from over the country, but Williams has not compiled the information received so far.

Williams seeks an answer to general questions like the following:

Is the college student merely a hard-boiled human machine who has forgotten all about prayer, or that religious training for which our grandfathers and earlier ancestors were noted?

If they have given up prayer, is that an indication that this indeed is a mechanistic age, one largely devoid of devotion to the Supreme Being, or trust in an all-kind Providence?

Here are a few of the specific questions he is asking:

What is the relation between crises in your life and the regularity of your prayers?

Have approaching crises in your life stimulated private prayer?

If you have discontinued habits of prayer, have they ever been temporarily revived since they were discontinued, by crises in your life, or in the lives of others?

What is the relation, if any, between changes in material prosperity and the frequency of your prayers

What motives lead you to pray?

To whom do you direct your prayers—to Jesus, as an intercessor, or as one coexistent with God, or as an integral part of God, yet somewhat subordinate to Himself?

Charity Fund of $5,523 Awarded Junior League of Atlanta As Reward for Sponsoring Special Constitution Edition

At left below, Major Howell presents to Mrs. Philip Wilcox, the league's treasurer, a check for the league's charity fund as a reward for the organization's sponsorship of last Wednesday's 92-page special edition of The Constitution. At right, Mrs. Eugene R. Black, Jr., president of the Junior League, presents to Herbert Porter, advertising director of The Constitution, a silver vase in token of the league's appreciation of his cooperation in the work of preparing and publishing the mammoth paper.

The Junior League of Atlanta received $5,523 as its reward for sponsoring last Wednesday's edition of The Atlanta Constitution, and this handsome sum will be used in carrying on charity and civic improvement work of the organization of young society women.

Announcement of the sum which the mammoth special edition of the league netted its sponsors was made Friday at a luncheon tendered team chairmen, officials and department heads of the league's publication committees by Clark Howell, Jr., business manager of The Constitution.

A check for $4,323 was presented the league by Major Howell as the league's percentage of advertising appearing in the 92-page edition of The Constitution—the largest week-day paper ever published in the south—and Major Howell announced that proceeds of the street sales of the big paper, every cent of which went to the league, totaled $1,200, making the grand total $5,523.

In presenting the check to Mrs. Phillip Wilcox, treasurer of the league, Major Howell expressed the keen pleasure which officials and employees of The Constitution derived from their association with the workers of the Junior League, who sold advertising, edited news matter and attended to all other details of the publication.

Expenses Paper's Pleasure.

"The Constitution feels that it has aided you in a splendid work for Atlanta's poor and unfortunates and in the upbuilding of civic conditions," he said. "It is with pleasure that I present this check to you, knowing that it will spread cheer where aid is badly needed and will help to make Atlanta a bigger and a better city."

Mrs. Eugene R. Black, Jr., president of the Junior League, responded on behalf of that organization, graciously thanking The Constitution for the part it played in raising the big charity fund.

"Our association with The Constitution has been most pleasant," she said, "and our only regret is that it cannot be continued just as closely as has been the case while we were at work on the special edition. We shall always feel most grateful for what it has done for the Junior League and the splendid way in which it presented our product to the public."

Lauded by speakers for her inspired leadership in directing the campaign for the special edition, Mrs. Eugene Harrington, general chairman of the edition, was presented by Major Howell with a gold vanity case, on which were engraved the words: "To Amelie Harrington from The Atlanta Constitution; the Junior League edition could never have been such a success without her leadership."

Mrs. Harrington received the official thanks of the league as expressed by its officials and workers, and in turn thanked the workers for the

BONDS OF $11,000 MADE BY BANKERS

J. S. Slicer and T. J. Norman, of Defunct Colonial Trust Company, Face Many Charges.

Bonds of $1,000 each on 11 separate charges growing out of the failure on September 29, 1926, of the Colonial Trust company were assessed Saturday morning by Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy in Fulton superior court for J. S. Slicer, president and trustee, and T. J. Norman, vice president and trustee, of the defunct state banking institution.

The original bonds for the bank officials were set by attaches of the solicitor's office at $25,000 each, but Attorney Sam Hewlett, representing Mr. Norman, filed an application for reduction of bail to $5,000 each. Both Norman and Slicer surrendered to Sheriff James I. Lowry early Saturday morning.

The defendants were jointly indicted Friday by the Fulton county grand jury on charges including embezzlement, forgery, receiving commissions for procuring loans and fraudulent bank insolvency following an investigation into the bank failure by investigators of Solicitor General John A. Boykin's office and the state banking department.

Slicers' bond was signed by Samuel Evins and Dr. J. O. Seaman. The vice president's bond was signed by C. A. Snipes, of 1118 St. Charles place.

Walter C. Colquitt and Ben J. Conyers, of the law firm of Colquitt & Conyers, will represent defendants.

Assistant Solicitor General John H. Hudson said that books of the trust company showed a deficit of approximately $309,000. Another audit made at practically the same time, according to Attorney Hewlett, showed a credit balance of $116,000, the discrepancy being due to a low valuation on real estate owned by the company.

Continuation by the Fulton county grand jury Tuesday into the investigation is slated, according to attaches of the solicitor's staff, who are engaged in obtaining names of several witnesses and preparing summons for Tuesday's session of the investigating body.

WHITE HOUSE BIDS MADE BY WYOMING AND CALIFORNIA

Washington, April 2.—California and Wyoming are the latest aspirants for the Coolidge summer vacation.

Richard V. Dennison offered the president a 22,000-acre ranch at Baer Creek, near Yellowstone National park, as a holiday site.

Fred D. McPherson and S. A. Hanson, of Santa Cruz, asked the president to visit California.

Relief Sought For Husbands To Aid Society

Chicago Judge Asserts Separate Maintenance Law Tends To Debauch Morals.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, April 2.—Modification of the separate maintenance laws as a means of uplifting public morals and of relieving persecuted husbands is favored by a committee of superior and circuit court judges organized to study the divorce problem, Chief Justice Joseph Sabath, chairman, said today.

Judge Harry A. Lewis pointed out that separate maintenance "tends to debauch the morals of society for a husband thus separated from his legal wife, is deprived by law from following his natural urge for a home with a new mate."

Judge Sabath said that nine out of ten separate maintenance suits are filed by wives to use as a club in forcing a financial settlement. The suits also are used, he added, by vindictive women who refuse to accept a divorce so their husbands never can enjoy the happiness of a second legal marriage.

The legislative modification proposed is to make separate maintenance a temporary rather than a permanent decree. At the end of two years, according to the proposal, the separate maintenance would expire and the wife or the husband would be granted a divorce.

ITALIANS HAVE SPEAKEASIES FOR DANCING

Rome, April 2.—(AP)—Speakeasies for dancing have sprung up in Italy since the issuance of the government's edicts regulating dancing in public and virtually declaring war on night clubs.

The under cover jazz resorts are housed in exclusive halls and sometimes in the palatial homes of the aristocracy. In order to stay unquestionably within the law, they operate as unostentiously as possible and on a strictly non-commercial basis. Mere money does not suffice for entrance, cards of admission being distributed only to persons whose birth and social standing make them acceptable.

Meanwhile, the anti-jazz decrees have taken full effect among the less wealthy classes. With dancing banned, the cabarets and dance halls are not operating. It also is understood that the law soon will be extended to the fashionable hotels where a two-hour dance period hitherto has been allowed as a concession to the tourist trade.

ASK PRIMARY VOTE FOR NEW CHARTER

Women Voters Request Mayor To Urge That Proposal Be Placed on Ballot.

City council Monday will be asked to place the proposed city manager charter for Atlanta on the forthcoming primary ballot, it became known Saturday when Mrs. R. L. Turman, president of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, and Miss Eleanore Raoul, treasurer of the same organization, requested the mayor to use his influence with city council to have the proposition included on the ballot.

Mayor Ragsdale took the position that the proposal is a matter strictly up to council and declined to figure on either side in the proposition.

Councilman Horace Russell, of the ninth ward, chairman of the citizens' charter committee in charge of the drive to push over the new charter proposal, will again champion the paper on the floor of council. That body declined to place the election on the primary ticket at the last session, citing among other things as a chief reason that it would be unfair to force primary candidates to pay for an election which if carried would mitigate to abolish the very offices they would be seeking in the primary election.

Predictions Saturday were that council would sustain its former action and would not ask the city democratic executive committee to place the charter election on the primary ballot. This would force the pro charter forces to file with council on April 18 the initiative petition, which they claim was signed by 15 per cent of the registered voters in the last election. When this is done and a check shows that charter requirements governing the initiative have been met, it will be mandatory on council to set a special charter election 30 days after the petition is filed.

Another important matter to come before council will be a proposal of Councilman Jack Savage, of the ninth, to increase the maximum number of cubic feet suburban patrons get for the minimum charge from 500 cubic feet to 800 cubic feet. This has the favorable recommendation of the water and finance committees and is expected to pass without opposition.

TRAINMEN LEAP, ESCAPE DEATH IN ENGINE CRASH

Williston, S. C., April 2.—(AP)—Jumping from engine cabs to avoid death when their coupled railway locomotives en route from Charleston to Augusta crashed into Southern railway train No. 55 which was standing here, trainmen on the coupled passenger locomotives suffered bruises and Fred Bolchoz, a fireman, suffered a broken ankle.

Money Provided For Everglades Drainage Project

HUGE CIGARETTE FACTORY TO OPEN SOON IN ATLANTA

$1,000,000 Capital Back of Local Firm for Manufacture of Cavalier Brand.

Organized by Atlantans and financed to the extent of $1,000,000, with local money, the Southern Tobacco corporation will begin manufacture of Cavalier cigarettes, an entirely new brand, within the next six weeks as the first cigarette factory in the state, it was announced Saturday through Fred T. Newell, secretary of the industrial bureau of the chamber of commerce.

Formation of the new company, which was incorporated recently, was a direct result of the tremendous strides in tobacco growing in this state, it was said. South Georgia bright leaf and other domestic tobaccos will be blended with Oriental tobacco in the manufacture of the new Cavalier cigarette; in fact, local tobacco will be the chief ingredient, for, as officers of the company declared Saturday, "Georgia tobacco is the best in the world today."

H. L. Hull, of 1123 Peachtree street, retired banker and former president of a furniture manufacturing plant in Mexico City, is president of the new corporation. H. G. Davidson, for the past 12 years connected with Liggett & Myers as southern manager, is vice president and general manager, and Robert E. Harvey, vice president of the Atlanta Trust company, is treasurer of the organization.

Although the beginning will be modest with a sectional distribution of the Cavalier brand throughout Georgia and neighboring states, plans of the company include the building

RUMANIA PRAYS; KING IS BETTER

Subjects Feel That Indomitable Will of Monarch Will Conquer. Physicians Share Optimism.

Bucharest, April 2.—(AP)—News that King Ferdinand's condition had improved tonight was received with enthusiasm throughout Rumania, where the entire population has centered its interest on the royal palace. The members of the royal family were optimistic that he would pull through, and this optimism was shared by his physicians, for in their latest bulletin they said:

"The amelioration established in the sovereign's condition yesterday has been maintained. His respiration is 26, pulse 90 and temperature 36.4 centigrade (about 97 Fahrenheit)."

Public opinion, strong in the knowledge of the ruler's qualities, feels that his indomitable courage will conquer. The suddenness with which the slight cold turned to grippe, aroused the sympathy of all Rumanians and prayers were offered today for his recovery. Tomorrow there will be prayers for the king in every city and hamlet throughout the land.

QUEEN MARIE FACES POLITICAL ECLIPSE.

Paris, April 2.—(AP)—Queen Marie, looked upon by her admirers as the strongest figure of the Balkans, may face political oblivion if King Ferdinand dies at present, in the opinion of Rumanian circles in Paris, but

Governor John Martin Announces Eastern Capitalists Will Finance Huge Reclamation Plan

OFFER TO BE SENT TO LEGISLATURE

Loan of $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 Will Be Needed To Carry Out Proposed Scheme.

Tallahassee, Fla., April 2.—(AP)—Arrangements have been perfected with large eastern capitalists for financing the everglades drainage project in its entirety, Governor John W. Martin announced today.

The governor's announcement followed his return here last night from a hurried trip to New York, where he had been summoned, it developed later, for a conference on financing the reclamation work.

A loan of $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 estimated as needed to complete the project "and settle forever the financial question of everglades drainage, as far as the state is concerned," has been promised through negotiations conducted at New York, the chief executive stated.

Goes to Legislature.

The matter will be presented to the legislature at the biennial session, which opens Tuesday, the governor said in a two-page statement issued late today.

The governor did not reveal the identity of the "large capitalists" referred to in his statement. However, replying to questions of newspapermen as to whether President S. Davies Warfield of the Seaboard Air Line railroad, whose name was mentioned in connection with the executive's trip to New York, was interested in the newly-formed financing plans, he declared that Mr. Warfield is not involved.

Drainage and reclamation of the Florida everglades was begun a quarter of a century ago. Succeeding administrations, however, found the problem of financing it more difficult, until the matter reached an acute stage within the past few years, when bonding firms refused to further advance funds for the work.

Can Dig Canals.

"I will be delighted," said the governor, "if this administration can finance the district without liability to the people of Florida or to the people of the adjacent area. If the legislature adopts the plans I propose and ratifies my financing plan, then the state can immediately start to dig new canals and complete the old ones. The dirt can fly in the Everglades at a rapid pace until it is finished.

"I believe that the spending of $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 in this area will help stabilize the value of real estate in south Florida, especially in the Everglades. If the public is advised that ample funds are in hand to complete the work, that the land will be protected from surplus water, then settlement will take place and an era of prosperity in that vicinity will be seen that has hitherto been unknown.

"The state went into this project years ago and it must see it properly finished, not only because of its value to the state, but because of a moral obligation to complete it.

"At the conference with these financiers and their attorneys in New York, I am sure that I solved the Everglades problem and that the legislature will look favorably upon its financing as the plans are fair and reasonable and complimentary to the state of Florida."

WIDOW ENJOINED FROM MOVING BODY OF HER HUSBAND

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, April 2—Judge F. L. Anderson, in district court today, issued a perpetual injunction against Mrs. Mary Klimesh restraining her from moving the body of her husband, Frank Klimesh, from the cemetery where it is buried beside that of his first wife, to another cemetery. She is also restrained from placing a headstone at the grave. She had bought the stone and had it engraved. Family differences between the second Mrs. Klimesh and Mrs. Mary Buresh, daughter of Mr. Klimesh by his first marriage, caused the daughter to obtain the injunction.

Half-Starved Child

:: COURT TAKES HER FROM FOSTER PARENTS ::

Lived in $16 Day Room

New York, April 2.—(United News.)—Roberta Jane Pratt, a pale, half-starved child of six, was taken from her foster parents at the exclusive Hotel Plaza today and placed in custody of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Her guardians, Mr. and Mrs. Everett S. Pratt, a wealthy Des Moines couple, objected to the proceedings but were overruled by Justice Samuel D. Levy in children's court.

An astounding tale of misery and suffering in a $16-a-day room in the luxurious surroundings of the Plaza was told to the court by Vincent Pisarra, agent of the society, who instigated the proceedings.

Pisarra had the child brought to court on a technical complaint charging incorrigibility. He presented a doctor's certificate showing the child's body was covered with bruises and scars, apparently caused by burns, and that she was suffering from malnutrition.

Pisarra said he acted on the complaint of a woman guest of the Plaza whose name he refused to give. He said the woman told him she had discovered the child's condition and, talking to her, was informed that she slept on a blanket on the floor and had nothing to eat but graham crackers and water once a day.

Pisarra presented an affidavit of his own charging the child had been mistreated and neglected. Judge Levy granted him custody of the child despite the objections of John O'Hara, counsel for the Pratts. Judge Levy adjourned the hearing until Monday.

The register of the hotel showed the Pratts had been there 10 days and were occupying a $16 room.

NEVER ADOPTED LEGALLY, SAYS REPORT.

Des Moines, Iowa, April 2.—(AP)—Juvenile authorities here developed tonight that Roberta Jane Pratt, who was taken from her foster parents in New York today pending investigation of maltreatment charges, had never been adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Everett S. Pratt. Records show that adoption papers were made out but were never executed.

Sherwood Eddy two years ago took the child, then a 4-year-old golden-haired baby, from a so-called "poor home" and placed her in custody of Mr. and Mrs. Pratt. The child's mother, said by court officials to be of a good Des Moines family, resides here. The father is dead.

REED TO RESUME SAPIRO GRILLING

Detroit, April 2.—(AP)—The merciless light of cross-examination which for a week has played over the eventful life of Aaron Sapiro was dimmed today during the week-end adjournment of his $1,000,000 libel suit against Henry Ford.

A story of struggle and reward, from orphanage days on the Pacific coast to unusual success at 42, has been carefully pieced by the young organizer of cooperative farming associations.

High points in the picture, touched by Senator James A. Reed, chief of Ford's imposing array of counsel, have revealed remarkable accomplishments in a virgin field. Blunt questions and insinuations have been answered readily, without signs of wriggling by the quick-witted Sapiro, who says his reputation was injured by articles printed in Ford's Dearborn Independent.

Sapiro faces further cross-examination Monday, Senator Reed indicating he could not tell when he would finish with him. The next move in the trial, after the plaintiff leaves the stand, is still in doubt. William Henry Gallagher, Sapiro's attorney, has announced he would ask the defense to proceed with its side of the case if Ford was unable to take the stand when Gallagher wanted him. But the defense has indicated it would be unwilling to do this.

Tonight Ford rested easily and, according to his doctors, was well on the road to recovery from injuries suffered when his little coupe was sideswiped and forced from a highway last Sunday night.

There was no indication, however, of when he might be expected to be able to make his first appearance at the trial. The manufacturer, still splintered and bandaged about the chest and back, remained prostrate in bed under orders of his physicians.

Herbert Porter Honored.

In token of the league's appreciation of the supervising work of Herbert Porter, advertising director of The Constitution, Mrs. Harrington presented him with a handsome silver vase on which was inscribed the league's thanks. Mrs. Harrington paid tribute to Mr. Porter's business ability and unfailing energy and good nature.

In reply Mr. Porter lauded the Junior League girls for making an outstanding success of "a tremendous business venture that would have tried the nerve and ability of the oldest professionals in the newspaper game."

"It was simply wonderful," he said, "and it deserves the admiration of every man and woman in Atlanta."

A check for $75 was presented by Major Howell to Mrs. John Knox, Jr., and Mrs. Preston Arkwright, Jr., team captain and co-worker, respectively, as three of the four $25 prizes offered by The Constitution to workers in the advertising contest. Mrs. Edwin Peeples, as captain of another team, was given the fourth $25 prize for the work of her team in winning one of the awards.

Mrs. Julian Thomas was presented with a gold piece as a prize for selling the greatest number of the special edition in the street sale contest.

Several department heads of The Constitution were present at the luncheon and were thanked for their aid in making the edition a success.

J. C. Penney Company Chiefs End Conference Here With Managers of Seventy-Five Southeastern Stores

National officials of the J. C. Penney company attending the spring sectional convention of the southeast at the Henry Grady hotel, which closed Saturday. Above, left to right, Walter P. Becker, head of the shirts and furnishings department; E. C. Sams, president of the great chain store organization, and D. McKee, head of the underwear and hosiery department. Below, E. N. DeMoss, of the employment department; G. T. Mitchell and A. W. Hughes, of the personnel department; A. C. Barnard, of the real estate department; F. W. Benzin, of the merchandising department, and R. S. Fidler, field representative of the merchandising department.

National officials of the J. C. Penney company, one of the biggest chain department store organizations in the world, and managers of 75 Penney stores in the southeastern states Saturday concluded their semi-annual sectional convention at the Henry Grady hotel, the fourth session of its kind held in Atlanta.

Attending the convention from New York headquarters of the big chain store were E. C. Sams, president of the J. C. Penney company; D. McKee, head of the underwear and hosiery departments; George T. Mitchell and A. W. Hughes, of the personnel department; E. M. DeMoss, of the employment department; F. W. Benzin and R. S. Fidler, of the merchandise department; Walter Becker, head of the shirts and furnishings departments, and A. C. Barnard, of the real estate department.

Mr. McKee, head of the underwear and hosiery departments, while a national official of the Penney company and having headquarters in New York, is a southerner who has many friends in Atlanta. He has been connected with the Penney company for the past eight years, prior to which time he spent a number of years in the retail dry goods business in Nashville, Tenn.

The convention, held for the purpose of discussing merchandising and expansion problems, came to a close Saturday night. Mr. Sams and a number of the national officials will leave today, the president for Washington and the other officials for Kansas City to attend another sectional conference. The national buying department heads will remain here until next Friday attending to stock needs of the 75 southeastern store managers in attendance at the convention.

Acquainted with the information that reports were in circulation here that the Penney company is planning to establish an Atlanta store, Mr. Sams stated that there is no definite move on foot looking to such a step.

"We have our eyes on Atlanta," he said, "and we will give it consideration from time to time as a city in which to locate one of our stores. At this time, however, there is nothing definite in that direction."

Mr. Sams, who has been at the head of the Penney company for 10 years, explained that the Atlanta convention is similar to those held every spring and fall in eight cities in as many sections of the country.

"I am most favorably impressed with Atlanta," he said. "It is truly a splendid city. The fact is that the Penney company has come to look upon the south as one of its very best fields of business."

The Penney company, which now has 786 stores all over the United States and last year did a total business of nearly $116,000,000, was founded by J. C. Penney in the little mining town of Kemmerer, Wyoming, 25 years ago. The great concern now is celebrating its silver anniversary and is planning still further expansion to meet the growing needs of its clientele.

The original Penney store was called "the golden rule store," and the "golden rule" policy has been carried into every one of the present concern's activities contributing largely, officials say, to the phenomenal success which the company has met. It has a large number of stores in Georgia and neighboring states.

RANGERS NEARING OIL BOOM TOWN

Borger, Texas, April 2.—(AP)—Texas rangers ordered to Borger by Governor Dan Moody to stay "until the lawless element unconditionally surrenders," were nearing this oil city tonight, and with their approach city and county peace officers felt more secure.

The rangers were called after the killing of two deputy sheriffs on the highway near here Friday and the robbery of the First National bank at Pampa Thursday, both crimes believed to have been committed by the same men.

A crowd formed near the jail last night at Stinnett, where three men are under arrest in connection with the killing of the deputy sheriffs, and Sheriff Owenby called all available officers to protect the jail. There was no trouble, however, and the situation had quieted down today.

Seven of the rangers left Austin today, it was reported, and are expected here late tonight or tomorrow. They are to be in command of Captains Tom Hickman and Frank Hamer. Hickman several months ago, with two other men, shot and killed two robbers as they were dashing from a north Texas bank.

TEMPLE SISTERHOODS GATHER HERE MONDAY

Assembling in Atlanta for their annual convention, from 300 to 500 members of the Temple Sisterhoods of Georgia, Florida and Alabama will make the Standard club their headquarters during the first half of the coming week, according to announcement Saturday by Fred Houser, executive secretary of the Atlanta convention and tourist bureau.

The convention will open at 9 o'clock Monday morning with a meeting of the executive committee at the Standard club. At 10 o'clock the general convention will assemble, with Mrs. Isadore A. Rosenberg, of Albany, Ga., presiding. Dr. David Marx will deliver the invocation, while among those taking part in the first day's activities will be Mrs. Nathan Saltzman, Mrs. J. T. Eichberg, Mrs. Frank Neely, Mrs. Ernst Horwitz, Mrs. Julius I. Peritz, of Albany; Miss Ray Halle, of Jacksonville; Mrs. Paul Nathan, of Jacksonville; Mrs. Sam Schoen and Mrs. Isaac E. Marcuson, of Macon.

On the second morning of the convention Professor Josiah Morse, of the University of South Carolina, will address the convention at the temple, on Pryor and Richardson streets. Following this a reception will be tendered by the Atlanta section of the National Council of Jewish Women. Following automobile tours of the city, the delegates will lunch at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, where papers will be read by Mrs. Rose Kaplan, of Pensacola, and Mrs. George Solomon, of Savannah. At 7 o'clock Tuesday night a banquet will be held for the delegates at the Standard club. On Wednesday the remaining business will be concluded and officers elected for the ensuing year.

An invitation to the Temple Sisterhood session has been extended to the Atlanta public through Mrs. I. F. Sterne.

PLAN CELEBRATION OF BIRTH OF CLAY

Lexington, Ky., April 2.—(AP)—The one hundred and fifth anniversary of the birth of Henry Clay will be celebrated here April 12, Judge Samuel M. Wilson, chairman of the committee in charge of arrangement announced today.

The feature of the program will be the presentation of a portrait of Henry Clay, painted by G. P. A. Healy, to the state of Kentucky. The picture will be presented with appropriate ceremonies at "Ashland," the historic home of Clay here, by Miss Lilly Duncan, owner of the portrait.

TENNESSEAN CHOSEN FOR EPISCOPAL POST

Philadelphia, April 2.—(AP)—Announcement was made here today that Leon C. Palmer, of Sewanee, Tenn., has been elected general secretary of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew in the United States. Mr. Palmer was formerly secretary of the national committee on evangelism in the Episcopal church. As general secretary he succeeds G. Frank Shelby of Philadelphia, who becomes vice president of the brotherhood.

Chinese Backs Firm U. S. Policy Toward China

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—What the Cantonese leaders as a group think about the American policy towards China is not a matter of record, but one of them at least, if he has not changed his mind recently, believes the United States should vigorously follow up the policy enunciated by John Hay, for the "open door" in the Oriental nation.

Dr. Hsiang Hai K'Ung, just appointed as minister of industry by the nationalist government, reflected this view on a recent visit to Washington, after having received the degree of doctor of laws from Oberlin college, of which he is a graduate.

Speaking to friends, the minister, a prominent banker of Canton, talked freely of conditions in his war-torn country, and likened them to those of other nations which have gone through periods of revolutions.

"This period of unrest in China must be gone through just as the mariner finds the waters of the sea more easily stirred up as he approaches the harbor," Dr. Hsiang said. "Because China is going through a change of ideas and these modern ideas are more quickly assimilated by some than others, we find the present unrest. Hence, in China today we have people who grasp modern ideas quickly and are eager for change. On the other hand, there are those to whom new ideas come slowly, and who deprecate sudden changes. For this reason some clashing of opinions is inevitable.

"In bringing about the present situation, I am sorry to say, foreign nations are not wholly without blame. With some it is a matter of business. China, disturbed and unquiet, is a good market for guns and ammunition. Many have made fortunes in this way.

"With others it is policy that China should be kept tied down and weak, not only that they may enjoy the privileges they have secured at the point of the bayonet, but perhaps look forward to complete domination when China has been bled white.

"The United States, whose interest is chiefly commercial and philanthropic, has, no doubt, wished to see China strong and prosperous so her own interests could be advanced. The Chinese know this, and so the attitude of the Chinese toward America and Americans is more friendly."

Dr. Hsiang said American representatives in China had been desirous of helping China, but many times had been unable to make an effective use of their friendliness and sympathy because of "weakness of American diplomatic policy in China."

FRED BROWNLEE SENTENCED TO DIE

Vero Beach, Fla., April 2.—Fred Brownlee today was sentenced to death in the electric chair, and C. G. Gourley and Phil R. Farrell to life imprisonment in connection with the death of Perle S. Thomas, Fort Pierce salesman. Sentence was pronounced by Judge Jefferson B. Brown, of Key West.

Counsel for the defense signified that a motion for new trial would be filed.

Thomas was shot on a night several weeks ago, on the Dixie highway south of Fort Pierce, when a party of immigration officers and others sought to stop him in a search for smuggled aliens.

Brownlee yesterday was found guilty of first degree murder and the others of second degree murder.

Three other men await trial.

EDWARDS PREDICTS SMITH NOMINATION

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—Senator Edwards, democrat, New Jersey, declared today that Governor Smith, of New York, would be nominated for president at the democratic 1928 national convention "just as sure as he lives and the democratic party endures."

"The 118 votes represented in convention by New Jersey and New York will be cast solidly for Governor Smith just as long as he permits his name to stay before the delegates," he added. "Added to this assured support will be all of the votes of Massachusetts, Illinois, Montana, California, Arizona, Wisconsin, Texas, North Carolina, Rhode Island, Maryland, Connecticut, Minnesota and Delaware.

"The cry of Catholicism raised against Governor Smith is the cowardly wailings of bigotry which, although still a factor to be reckoned with in political life, is fast on the wane."

KING IMPROVES AS NATION PRAYS

there are many who believe she would find her way to power again.

Prince Michael, five-year-old son of former Crown Prince Carol, who renounced his throne rights some time ago, is heir apparent, under a regency which excludes Marie, and it is pointed out that Carol himself also is on the kingly horizon. It is known that the queen for a long time has desired to be named regent, but the king's illness prevented any change, even if the monarch so desired, which never was certain.

Often it has been reported that the king looked forward to Carol's return to Rumania, and a change which would permit Carol to take the throne. The regency set up when Carol renounced his royal prerogatives is composed of Carol's brother, Prince Nicolas, who accompanied Queen Marie on her American tour; Miron Christea, patriarch of the Greek orthodox church, and the president of the supreme court. They would rule until Michael became 18, and the queen would be merely a dowager. Few in Rumanian circles here, however, can imagine she would be content to remain completely effaced.

According to the gossip, Queen Marie may replace Nicolas as regent if Michael ascends the throne, and thus control the regency. A regency is recognized as a weak solution of the problem Carol created when he gave up his rights on December 28, 1925. With such a rule, observers here believe, the Balkan volcano again would sputter. Carol's attractive personality, it is commented, would be a big factor in bringing about unity, and his apparent reformation has won him many friends.

BLINDS ARE DRAWN AT CAROL'S HOME.

Paris, April 2.—The blinds are drawn and there is not a sign of life at the villa at Neuilly, where Prince Carol of Rumania and his sweetie, Magda Lupescu, are living.

The prince's friends state that he is ready to return to Rumania if his father dies and claim the throne on the grounds that his renunciation was forced upon him by politicians and his family and that the people wish him to return and wear the crown.

HUGE CIGARETTE FACTORY TO OPEN

of a national distribution system within a short time. The plant will sell to jobbers, who will take care of distribution. A. W. DeVan, formerly Florida division manager for Liggett & Myers, will be sales manager for the firm.

From 50 to 100 Atlantans will be given employment in the cigarette factory to start with, it was said.

All of the machinery and other equipment has been ordered and will be installed as soon as a lease is signed for a location on Marietta street, for which negotiations now are under way.

Temporary offices of the company have been opened in room 413 of the new Norris building, on Peachtree street, but will be moved to the plant in the manufacturing and jobbing center when the factory is opened. Sketches of the cigarette box, to include a picture of a Cavalier on a horse, are being prepared by an artist, together with advertising matter. The corporation plans a tremendous advertising campaign to boost the new product.

The price of the new cigarette will be the same as that asked for all other brands, 15 cents for a box of 20, with the 20 size the only manufactured by the company. Officers of the company are now engaged in picking a slogan for the new brand, and have several snappy ones under consideration.

Georgia Tobacco Praised.

Discussing the progress of tobacco farming in Georgia, officers of the corporation said Saturday that this state's leaf is without doubt the best in the world, having captured first prize at the 1926 Paris exposition. They pointed to the mellowness of Georgia tobacco as one of its chief attributes, and said that the south is just now beginning to realize the fine quality its lands will produce.

Georgia tobacco ages more quickly than that of other sections, aging as much in six months as the old North Carolina belt tobacco required two years for, it was said. By a new process, developed by officers of the company, the Georgia tobacco will be blended with other domestic leafs and with an Oriental tobacco in such a way as to greatly enhance the good virtures of each of the leaves.

Production of the new company will be around 1,000,000 cigarettes daily within a short time after the plant starts operation, it was said. Attorneys for the company are Spalding, McDougald & Sibley, who filed incorporation papers.

PETITIONS CALL FOR RESIGNATION OF SCHOOL CHIEF

Superior, Wis., April 2.—(AP)—As an outgrowth of the "walkout" of 800 high school students here yesterday following the dismissal of a teacher, petitions requesting the resignation of Rev. A. T. Ekblad as president of the board of education were circulated through the city today.

Mr. Ekblad refused to grant a hearing to a "committee of 21" which sought to effect a reconciliation between the school board and the ousted teacher, Miss Lulu Dickinson, and as result the petitions for his resignation were drawn. Five hundred of them were placed in circulation.

At an executive session of the committee of 21 today, from which reporters and students were barred, it was decided to take legal steps to force Mr. Ekblad to call a special meeting of the board of education. He has steadfastly refused to grant the committee a hearing since the removal of the teacher, March 14.

The teacher was removed because she derided the policies of the board of education. The students' walk-out followed. School authorities said they would grade the students in accordance with their classes missed during the "walk-out."

ROY CLOUD, FORMER BAINBRIDGE BOY, IS ASPHYXIATED

Tallahassee, Fla., April 2.—(AP)—Roy Cloud, 19, formerly of Bainbridge, Ga., was found dead here tonight in the bathroom of his rooming house. Death was due to accidental asphyxiation from the fumes of a gas heater according to certificates of two examining physicians.

An inquest was not deemed necessary.

PLANTING OF CROPS IS TWO WEEKS EARLY

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—The agricultural production program for the coming season, as indicated by reports from farmers, appears to be in fairly good balance as among crops and live stock, although weather conditions will be a decisive factor. The department of agriculture in an analysis of early season reports said that the production season is reported as fully two weeks early with spring work coming into full swing over most of the country.

"Reports from farmers show an intention to shift acreages of crops rather than to make a substantial change in total production," the department said. "Readjustment in the cotton belt is indicated by a planned increase of about 6,000,000 acres in feed crops. The north and west are planning a 3,000,000-acre increase in their principal crops, which would little more than replace acreage lost by drought in the great plains last year.

"The intended potato acreage, with average yields, would produce some 410,000 bushels, or near a record crop, which would be a sharp increase over the crops of the last two years."

The department added that March reports showed about 14,000,000 bushels more potatoes stored than a year ago; about 380,000,000 bushels less of food grains on hand, while the cotton carryover appeared "much less than was thought probable a few months ago."

"There is a marked tendency to increase acreage in both the commercial and non-commercial areas in the western states," it said, "and it is in these states that the marketing problem is most likely to be serious next fall, if present intentions are carried out and average yields are obtained."

After holding up T. H. Meadows, manager of a downtown automobile parking garage and obtaining $3 and his gold watch, two neatly dressed bandits bound him and then helped themselves to their choice of cars parked in the garage.

The bandits looked over the cars, picked out one of the latest design coupes, filled it with gasoline and oil, put in the tires and then sped away, police were told.

Some time after the holdup, employees working in the back of the garage, unaware of what had happened, walked to the manager's office and found him tied to a chair.

Although appearing to be only amateurs at the game, the bandits worked with unusual ease and care, police were told.

The name of owner of the car in which the bandits escaped was not known, but officers were told that it was in transit to another city and was only parked there temporarily.

GADSKI, OPERA STAR, LOSES $250,000 SUIT

New York, April 2.—(AP)—Mme. Johanna Gadski Tauscher, former soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, has lost a $250,000 libel suit she brought against the New York Herald-Tribune because of an article appearing in that paper in 1923 which she contended made it appear that she sang a song lauding the sinking of the Lusitania.

MAKES RADIO STATIC UNHEARD

A simple amazing device has been invented by C. H. Geppert, D-41 Hewitt Bldg., Des Moines, Ia., which practically eliminates all static in radios. Not only that but it will increase volume, bring in more distant stations, saves 30 to 40 per cent on batteries, eliminates local stations from running in, gives every set at least one more stage of radio reception, works on any type set, can be attached without change by anyone instantly. Mr. Geppert wants agents and is willing to send a no cost sample. Write him today.—(adv.)

Children's Home Society Names Black To Aid Appeal For Extension of Support

Easter Enrollment To Begin Monday With 50 Counties Organized to Help.

Election of Eugene R. Black, president of the Atlanta Trust company, as state treasurer for the Georgia Children's Home society membership appeal, was announced Saturday by Hal G. Woorhis, chairman of the society's executive committee.

The membership campaign will open next Monday, April 11, and continue through Easter Sunday, April 17, the period proclaimed by Governor Walker as "underprivileged children's week."

Mr. Black stated that five different classes of membership had been adopted to provide places in the society for all classes of givers, life membership being open to givers of $500 or more; honorary membership for $100 or more; annual membership for $5 or more for three years, junior membership for $1 or more for three years for persons under 18 years of age, and firm or corporation membership for $25 a year for three years.

The membership appeal will be carried into approximately 50 counties through county executive committees already established as official units of the Georgia Children's Home society. Women's clubs and civic organizations are to be asked to conduct the appeal in other counties.

The funds raised throughout the state will be used entirely in the state-wide work, outside of the two largest cities, Atlanta and Savannah, where the society's local work is supported by the Community Chests. It reached 1,000 children in 70 counties last year and lack of funds forced the society to decline many requests for help. If the membership is extended as planned in the Easter appeal, the service also can be extended in proportion as its service is limited only by its funds.

EMORY DEBATERS PLAN LONG TRIP

BY C. M. McMILLAN.

Emory University, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—David A. Dockmiller, Athens, Tenn., and R. W. McDuffee, Louisville, Ky., students at Emory university, will leave Friday, April 8, on a ten-day debate tour covering many of the western states and engaging six universities in debates on both sides of three subjects. This is the longest trip ever sponsored by Emory debate council and the biggest program ever attempted in one series by two Emory students.

Lockmiller, a senior in the school of liberal arts, has twice met the international team from Oxford, England. He is a member of Tau Kappa Alpha, honorary forensic fraternity; Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalistic; Omicron Delta Kappa, highest honorary leadership fraternity; Eagles Club, highest non-fraternity honorary organization, and many other lesser honors. He has held many positions of trust on the campus besides debating, in the activities council, Few literary society, and Independent student body. He was secretary debate council last year and is vice chairman this year. He is also cashier of university publications.

McDuffee is a student in Lamar School of Law, and was also one of the debaters to meet Oxford team this year. He holds membership in Tau Kappa Alpha, Gamma Rho, legal fraternity, and Beta Tau, Greek letter fraternity. He has been on the Emory varsity team for several years.

The queries to be used deal with the question of recognition of the Soviet government of Russia, the cancellation of European war debts, and the principle of prohibition as a government policy.

The schedule for this tour will be as follows: April 9, Birmingham-Southern college, Birmingham, Ala.; April 11, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Ark.; April 12, Southern Methodist university, Austin, Tex.; April 13, McMurray college, Abilene, Tex.; April 14, Baylor university, Waco, Tex.; April 16, Louisiana State university, Baton Rouge, La.

DeKalb County Solon Heads Pan-Hellenic Council At Emory

Emory University, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—The Pan-Hellenic council of Greek letter fraternities at Emory university elected John Wesley Weeks, Decatur, Ga., senior of Lamar School of Law, to head the council for the spring semester, at its last regular meeting. Ed Bradley, Murray, Ky., was chosen vice president, and Clifford Hendrix, of Atlanta, was named secretary-treasurer.

The new president is a member of the Kappa Alpha social fraternity, and the Phi Kappa Phi legal fraternity. Last year he was president of the Lamar School of Law student body, and at present is one of the representatives in the Georgia legislature from DeKalb county.

Bradley is a member of the Phi Kappa Alpha social fraternity, and Alpha Kappa Psi, business fraternity. He was recently elected secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and is one of the members of Emory Student Activities council from the school of business administration. Hendrix is a member of Sigma Nu fraternity.

R. A. BURFORD BURIED IN OCALA SATURDAY

Funeral services for R. A. Burford, Jr., 40 years old, formerly a well-known engineer of Atlanta who died Thursday at a private sanitarium in Tampa, Fla., were held Saturday in Ocala, Fla. Interment was also in Ocala.

Although a native of Florida, Mr. Burford made his home in Atlanta for several years where he was a member of the firm of Burford, Hall and Smith, contracting engineers. He severed his local connections about a year ago and moved to Florida to build the Tampa Arctic Ice company, of which he was president.

Mr. Burford is survived by his wife and three daughters, Virgina, Barbara and Eloise; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Burford, Sr., of Ocala, Fla.; two sisters, Miss Mary Burford, of Ocala, Fla., and Mrs. Charles Saunders, of Birmingham, Ala., and one brother, Samuel K. Burford, of Knoxville, Tenn.

The Famous Keeley Treatment for Liquor and Drugs

More patients came to The Keeley Institute in 1926 — than in any year since 1917.

For more than 50 years, The Keeley Institute has been the Mecca for men and women facing physical, mental or financial ruin, because of drink or drugs. They have come to Dwight, and at the end of the treatment, have gone their several ways with no more desire for a drink or drug, than if they had never used it. No restraint—no bad after effects—moderate cost—correspondence confidential. Address—

Augusta, Ga.—"I suffered for a long time. I had no strength, my nerves were in bad condition, my back ached and I had bearing pains through my sides. I was so completely rundown and miserable that I could hardly drag myself around, when I began taking Dr. Pierce's medicines. I took the 'Favorite Prescription' and the 'Golden Medical Discovery' together, and by the use of these medicines I have regained my health and am feeling better than I have for a long time. I am gaining in weight, my nerves are in good condition, I don't have that heavy, tired, draggy, all worn-out feeling that I always had before."—Mrs. Loree Welch, 2234 Broad St. All druggists. OFFICERS NAB NEGRO UNDERNEATH HOUSE

Summoned for the second time Saturday to the home of Mrs. Sara H. Gilman, of 483 Washington street, Call Officers Sinyard and Manus captured a negro under the floor of an adjacent house who gave his name at headquarters as James Luke, 23, of 125 Fletcher street.

Mrs. Gilman told officers she was awakened as a bedroom window was lifted by some one from the outside who was frightened away by her screams. Responding to her call, police found no one in the vicinity and returned to headquarters. Later they were again summoned to the Washington street address.

While cruising the streets in an automobile, the officers saw a man lurking in a nearby alley and gave chase. The fellow crawled under the floor of a nearby house and was hauled out by one of the officers who also found a quantity of clothing in the hiding place, police allege. The clothing was later identified as belonging to P. Pamarance, of 127 Richmond street, whose home the negro admitted he robbed earlier in the night, according to police reports.

LAME RIGHT HAND OF COOLIDGE HEALING

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—The lame right hand of President Coolidge is about healed, Dr. W. S. Baer, of Baltimore, a specialist, reported today after visiting him. Dr. Baer described the lameness, which was largely in the wrist and hand, as local rheumatism.

PRIDGEN COMPANY BARRETT DEALERS

The Pridgen Roofing company, managed by R. L. Pridgen, is one of the approved roofers of Barrett & Co., and as such is prepared to put on Barrett's roofs and furnish Barrett 20-year bonds with each of its jobs. The company has been operating on Whitehall street since it was organized seven years ago, Mr. Pridgen having been prominently identified with the roofing business here for the past 19 years.

Good examples of some of Pridgen's roof work both in sheet metal and composition may be found in the chemistry building at Georgia Tech, the Sisson garage and the residences of Cator Wofford and Carling Dinkler.

J. B. Bell, in charge of estimating, is well known to the rooting, sheet metal and furnace industry, having been engaged for the past 20 years in this kind of work.

Mr. Pridgen has recently secured the distributorship of Hero furnaces and he is looking forward to a wonderful year in the furnace business as well as the roofing trade.

SHRINE POTENTATE TO VISIT ATLANTA

Elaborate preparations are being made for the entertainment of Judge David W. Crosland, of Montgomery, Ala., imperial potentate of the Ancient Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, who will pay an official three-day visit to Yaarab temple this week, according to members of the entertainment committee.

Judge Crosland will arrive in the city Wednesday night and will be escorted to the Biltmore hotel by the potentate, staff and heads of the local organization. The program of entertainment will start Thursday morning, soon after the breakfast hour, and will end with luncheon Friday at the Atlanta Athletic club, after which Judge Crosland will leave for Macon at 1:15 o'clock.

Members of the entertainment committee, appointed by Potentate Tom C. Law, include Major J. O. Seamans, grand marshal; Asa G. Candler, Jr., Harry Carr and Henry H. Green.

While here Judge Crosland will visit Stone Mountain, the Scottish Rite hospital for crippled children and the East Lake country club.

A luncheon will be served at the East Lake club Thursday, after which the party will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Heinz, in Druid Hills. They will go from there to the home of Asa G. Candler, Jr., on Briarcliff road, returning to the Biltmore hotel late in the afternoon.

An elaborate banquet on the Ansley roof garden will be held Thursday night at 8 o'clock.

Besides the potentate, divan, committee chairmen, staff and organizations, the following have been invited to the banquet: Charles A. Sockwell, of Covington, imperial representative representing the out-of-town nobility, and Past Potentates Forrest Adair, Sr., John A. Hynds, Walter P. Andrews, George M. Napier, Henry C. Heinz, W. Bayne Gibson and Charles A. Bowen.

Doctor Treats Wealthy Eskimo By Aid of Radio

Seattle, Wash., April 2.—Sepillu, wealthy Eskimo chief, living southeast of Nome, Alaska, is being kept alive tonight by medical advices radioed over 125 miles of the frozen northland, between Nome and St. Lawrence island, it was learned here.

Thomas Scupholm, radio operator on the island, hourly broadcasts a description of Sepillu's condition and in turn receives advices from Dr. Dale Welch, physician at Nome, telling what curative methods should be followed. Scupholm and his wife administer the radioed first aid.

Meanwhile airplanes are being prepared to make the treacherous 125-mile flight over frozen Bering sea with doctors and nurses to operate on the Eskimo leader.

Many friends of forestry were in attendance at the dedication of trees to the city of Atlanta Saturday afternoon by the Hoo-Hoo club in Piedmont park. Those taking part in the ceremonies shown above are C. B. Harmon, C. H. Dudley, C. A. Mathews, president of the Hoo-Hoos; J. M. Burchel, Bonnell H. Stone, W. E. Foster, R. C. Morrison, George W. West, H. J. West, L. L. Wallace, Dr. Wallace Rogers and C. J. Haden.

An embryo forest of decorative trees, comprising 25 flowering trees, 12 redbuds, seven dogwoods and six crepe myrtles, planted recently in Piedmont park, was formally presented to the city of Atlanta by the Atlanta Hoo-Hoo club in ceremonies Saturday afternoon at the Park Drive bridge.

Presentation ceremonies included the unveiling of a stone tablet bearing the Hoo-Hoo emblem, and addresses by a number of prominent friends of forestry. The Hoo-Hoo club is a fraternal organization composed of lumbermen, foresters and newspapermen, the name meaning "call of the woods."

C. A. Mathews, president of the club, acted as master of ceremonies, while the Rev. Wallace Rogers, pastor of Trinity Methodist church, offered the invocation. C. J. Haden made the presentation address, and Boy Scouts, under the direction of Scout Executive A. A. Jamison, unveiled the tablet.

George W. West, president of the chamber of commerce, responded to the presentation address, while L. L. Wallace, superintendent of parks, accepted the trees on behalf of the city. Members of the Hoo-Hoo club and their families, together with delegations from the newspapers, civic bodies, woman's clubs, public schools, colleges, city council, the county, state officers, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire girls and others attended.

HOKE O'KELLY ENTERS COUNCILMANIC RACE

Hoke O'Kelly, Atlanta attorney, Saturday announced his candidacy for the councilmanic post now held by Councilman A. J. Orme, of the eighth ward, subject to the city democratic primary of May 25.

Mr. O'Kelly is a veteran of the world war, having been trained with the first contingent at Fort McPherson and later attached to the 320th field artillery, 82d division, Camp Gordon. He later was transferred to the balloon division of the air service. He is a member of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and is prominent in fraternal circles of Atlanta.

Mr. O'Kelly was educated at the North Georgia Agricultural college, the University of Georgia and also attended law school at Columbia and New York universities.

Mr. Orme has not yet announced for reelection.

DR. HARDMAN SPEAKS AT TIFTON MEETING

Tifton, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—The field meeting at Tifton Wednesday drew a representative gatherings of farmers interested in live stock production. Over 500 farmers from 20 counties, with county agents and agricultural specialists, made a study and comparison of such winter legumes as Austrian winter peas, hairy vetch, Monanthos vetch, bur clover, pasture grasses, etc., with a view to providing sufficient feeds and pasturage.

It was brought out at this meeting, which was sponsored by the Coastal Plain Experiment station and the South Georgia A. & M. college, that practically all of these crops could be grazed sufficiently during the winter months to pay all costs of seed, planting, etc., and the crops would be turned under to enrich the soil and thus benefit the summer crops that follow.

Although this is a busy season when the farmers are planting tobacco cotton, etc., the fact that so many counties were represented at the meeting showed a lively interest in the cow-hog-hen program advocated by the Georgia association. Dr. L. G. Hardman, governor-elect, and J. Phil Campbell, director of extension, joined the party when they were looking over the various experimental tests, and made talks on live stock production at the South Georgia A. & M. college.

Visits are made to these institutions from time to time during the year by farmers from various parts of the state. They are enabled on these occasions to see the results of the research work and profit by the facts discovered and the improved methods developed. The vocational agricultural teachers from south Georgia counties made an inspection of the cover crop experiments Saturday.

WOMAN IS MISSING WHEN VESSEL DOCKS

Baltimore, April 2.—(AP)—Old Bay line officials today asked Baltimore police to aid in the search for Mrs. S. B. Marshall, who disappeared mysteriously last Thursday night from the steamer State of Virginia, en route to Baltimore from Norfolk. Investigation by the shipping company had revealed no trace of the missing woman.

Mrs. Marshall was last seen shortly after the boat left Norfolk, by the negro porter who showed her to her stateroom. The boat later stopped at Old Point Comfort, but no one was seen to leave without hat or coat.

Examination revealed that she had unpacked her belongings and distributed them around her stateroom, but the berth was not disturbed. Her stateroom door was found locked.

Mrs. Marshall was on her way to visit her husband, who is employed at New Haven, Conn.

Leading Electrical House Will Restrict Ads to Newspapers

Acknowledgement of the value of the newspaper as an advertising medium is given by the recent decision of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company to direct all its advertising to the public, both local and national, through the daily newspaper.

This forward step on the part of one of the world's largest manufacturers of electrical apparatus is proof of the resourcefulness and adaptability of modern industry, in its constant search for the best method of carrying its message to the public. On April 1 at the outset of the 1927-28 fiscal year, Westinghouse began the expenditure of many thousands of dollars to reach the buyers and users of electrical equipment through the columns of more than 400 newspapers. Advertising in the trade papers and magazines is to be continued as the most effective medium for technical announcements to the industries.

Founded 41 years ago by George Westinghouse, inventor of the air brake, the Westinghouse company has grown steadily, until today it employs more than 50,000 persons, and sells about $165,000,000 worth of products annually among the nations of the earth. The eighty-five buildings and 300,000 items entering into the various products now manufactured in the East Pittsburgh works of Westinghouse afford striking contrast to the little shop in a Pittsburgh back street where a few men worked in 1886. But the restive spirit of genius which urged the inventor Westinghouse ever to new fields has come down through the years; his spirit lives in the industries which bear his name.

Frank Tyre Placed In Savannah Jail In Aspinwall Slaying

Savannah, Ga., April 2.—(AP)—Frank Tyre, charged with the murder of Don A. Aspinwall, chief of the county police of Wayne county, is in Chatham jail, having been lodged there last night for safe keeping by J. O. Mattox, sheriff of Wayne county.

Tyre was given a preliminary hearing yesterday afternoon before Judge R. Ben Hopps, the judge holding him on a charge of murder for the grand jury at the April term of court. Tyre made no statement at the hearing.

Sheriff Mattox said upon his arrival here that due to the state of feeling in Wayne county as a result of the slaying and also because of the jail at Jesup is filled and some necessary repairs are to be made he deemed it advisable to bring the prisoner here for safekeeping.

The slaying of Chief Aspinwall took place on last Sunday night in Tyre's home about 10 o'clock near Jesup. Aspinwall, in company with Sheriff Mattox and County Policeman T. B. Bishop, had gone to Tyre's home with a search warrant and a warrant for Tyre's arrest, the papers being issued on liquor charges.

MRS. HILT WILL HEAD NEW CHAPTER O. E. S.

Mrs. Bertie E. Hilt, prominent in Atlanta activities of the Order of the Eastern Star, will serve as head of the new Clara Henrich Memorial chapter, recently formed here, which is the first chapter to be formed in the world in honor of the late Mrs. Clara Henrich, of Ohio, most worthy grand matron of the order, the highest office in the organization. Mrs. Henrich died while on an official inspection trip in China and the Atlanta organization was being formed at the time of her death and became the first memorial to her.

It was announced Saturday by Mrs. Hilt that the new chapter will meet in the Forsyth building on the second and fourth Monday nights. Officers are: Worthy matron, Mrs. Bertie Hilt; worthy patron, Floyd Moody; associate matron, Mrs. Ireue Williams; conductress, Mrs. Alice White; associate conductress, Mrs. Cora Blackwood; secretary, Mrs. Louella Simpson; treasurer, Alvin E. McLendon.

For many years Mrs. Hilt has been active in Eastern Star activities throughout the state. She is a member of the office staff of Secretary of State S. G. McLendon and has served in the mail order automobile license tag department for many years.

Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, Clergyman and Editor, To Lecture At Emory

Emory University, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, eminent Methodist clergyman and editor, will deliver the sixth of the series of Quillian lectures at Emory university during week of April 4. The lectures will be given at 8 o'clock each evening in the new auditorium and will close with a lecture Sunday, April 10, at 11 o'clock.

Dr. Rowe is one of the leading theologians in America and has been editor of the Methodist Quarterly Review and book editor of Methodist Episcopal church, south, since 1921. Before this time he was a member of the North Carolina conference of the Southern Methodist church, and while there he served several important pastorates and edited the North Carolina Christian Advocate.

The general theme for the six lectures is "Reality of Religion." On Monday, April 4, he will use as his subject, "The Nature of Religion;" Tuesday, "Symbols of Religion;" Wednesday, "Scientific Religion;" Thursday, "The Scientific Method of Religion;" Friday, "The Power of Religion," and Sunday, "Finality in Religion."

J. E. TERRELL RITES IN DECATUR TODAY

Funeral services for J. E. Terrell, 42, of 311 Avery street, Decatur, who was fatally injured Friday afternoon when struck down by an automobile at the Oak street crossing in Decatur, will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the residence. The Rev. A. J. Moncrief will officiate and interment will be in Decatur cemetery.

Mr. Terrell, an invalid, suffered the loss of a foot in the accident. Doctors at first thought that he would recover, but during the night his condition continued to grow worse and he succumbed to the injuries.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. W. A. Terrell; three sisters, Miss Annie Terrell, Miss Nora Terrell and Mrs. J. L. Glenn, Jr., of Chester, S. C., and a brother, Ed R. Terrell. H. M. Patterson & Son in charge.

CLARKE, UPSON FIRST TO ENROLL VETERANS

Clarke and Upson were the first among a large number of Georgia counties completing the enrollment of all living Confederate veterans before noon Saturday, the date set for the first drive to end, it was announced Saturday at the office of the Stone Mountain Memorial association. Names of all living Confederate veterans enrolled will be entered in the special "gold star" section of the Book of Memory.

The first 15 counties completing enrollment in addition to Clarke and Upson included Walton, Spalding, Terrell, Sumter, Pulaski, Newton, Coweta, Peach, Troop, Rockdale, Decatur, McDuffie and Telfair.

A special campaign will be conducted during the coming week to enroll the remaining veterans before April 8 so that announcement can be made at the Confederate reunion to begin in Tampa, Fla., Tuesday, it was stated. This campaign will also be carried on in all southern states.

Reports reaching the offices of the Memorial association Saturday indicated that a number of other counties would enroll their entire veteran rosters by the first of the week. TWO MISSOURI DEMOCRATS FIGHT AS HOUSE CLOSES

Jefferson City, Mo., April 2.—(AP)—Fists flew in the house of representatives today as the hour of final adjournment of the legislature approached, but intervention stopped the prospective fight. Earl Roberts, democrat, representative from Crawford county, challenged and aimed several blows at Thomas J. Roney, democrat, Jasper county representative, but missed and was restrained by several other members.

HAMMOND HEADS BAR ASSOCIATION

T. A. Hammond, prominent Atlanta lawyer, was elected president of the Atlanta Bar association for the ensuing year, succeeding Major Robert B. Troutman, at the annual meeting of the association held at the Biltmore hotel Saturday night. Judge James K. Hines, of the Georgia supreme court, delivered a short address in place of Judge R. N. Hardeman, of Louisville, Ga., who was unable to be present because of illness.

Judge Hines declared that the lawyers of the country today face the broadest field since this government was established.

"We must look to the lawyers of the country to maintain our form of government," Judge Hines said. "We must look to the lawyers to preserve that balance of power which has existed between the state governments and the federal government. We are drifting today toward a great central government with the power of the states wiped out. The lawyers must preserve a government by law and not a government by the whims of men."

Other officers elected were John L. Tye, Jr., vice president, to succeed E. Warren Moise, and William Mathews, secretary-treasurer, to succeed William G. Grant.

The association adopted a resolution increasing the annual dues and also a resolution to assist as much as possible the Atlanta Legal Aid society.

Mr. Hammond delivered a brief speech of acceptance and Major Troutman made a short retiring speech.

Building Tribute To Motherhood Plans Are Pushed

In erection of a dormitory building on the campus of the Martha Berry schools as a tribute to motherhood, a task undertaken by Kiwanis clubs of Georgia, and Martha Berry circles of Rome and Atlanta, the custom will be followed of investing with a significant and reverent association every detail of the famous institution, it was said Saturday by the campaign committee, of which Robert H. Jones, Jr., Atlanta attorney, is local chairman.

The Mothers building will take place with the "Road of Remembrance," another feature of the Berry schools campus, as a center of love and tender memories, it was said.

This road is an improved highway, five miles long, cut, graded and completed with infinite labor by boys of the schools, through virgin woods and over mountainous terrain, as a personal expression of tribute to former students of the Martha Berry schools who died in the world war. Because every student pays by his labor at least part of the expense of his education, the hours of labor given to the work amounted to a donation of actual money value.

The custom of association is reflected in every other structure, as in Faith cottage, for another example pointed out by the campaign committee. This was so named because, without funds in sight but to fill a dire need, it was built in Miss Berry's faith that some provision would be made to care for the homeless waifs, motherless children and foundlings of the mountains, for whom it was to provide shelter.

Association Examples.

The main entrance of the campus is styled the "Gate of Opportunity." The entrance of the girls' school is the "Gate of Service," and in these are other examples, according to the campaign committee's statement, of the custom of giving expression to a poignant ideal in every detail of the school.

The Mothers building, planned as the first monument to motherhood on record, is to be another such structure, the committee asserts. According to the plans, ground will be broken for the building April 30, upon observance of the 25th anniversary of the founding of the Berry schools.

The campaign, of which W. W. Mundy, of Cedartown, formerly state senator, is state chairman, has for its goal obtaining $200,000 for erection of the Mothers' building, which is designed for use as a girls' dormitory and as the nucleus of a collegiate department of the schools, in which the boys and girls of the mountains may be fitted as teachers, thus enabled to return to their own people to spread the gospel of service.

Mrs. Frank M. Inman, president of the Martha Berry circle of Atlanta, is treasurer of the campaign. Headquarters are in the 101 building.

Hapeville Woman's club: Mrs. W. B Stewart secretary.

City councilmen: Charles M. Ford, tenth ward; Howard C. McCutcheon, second ward.

County commissioners: Walter B. Stewart and George M. Hope.

Short speeches were made by Frank Neely, of the Improvement club; Mr. Warner, Mr. Cumbea, Mr. Hope, Mr. Stewart, Mr. McCutcheon and Mr. Ford.

C. D. Knight, president of the Improvement body, presided.

Barefoot Boys To Have Rivals In "Big Sisters"

The barefoot boy will have a rival for pedal comfort this spring in the fashionably dressed lady, spring shoe styles for women announced by leading Atlanta department stores Staurday showed. "The more barefoot, the more fashionable," is the decree of dame fashion regarding shoe styles, experts here say.

Grecian sandals, of patent and kid, highly colorful, with cut-out work along the line of the sole, and extremely high heels, are being given a generous display. Shoes of shiny patent leather, with brilliant buckles and highly-colored rooster-red inlay work, are to be very popular, it was explained.

The plebian gingham, long shunned by fashionable designers, is given a prominent place in decoration of ladies' shoes. Many of the spring styles are in two-color combinations and have gingham covered heels. Patent apparently is the most popular leather, shoe men say. To further carry out the barefoot idea, hosiery counters are displaying hose of the sheerest materials.

So the call of spring to the boy and to the woman will be answered—but poor man will wear the usual heavy leather oxfords.

BARBECUE ON TAP FOR TRAFFIC CLUB NEXT SATURDAY

Members of the Traffic club of Atlanta will hold their annual barbecue next Saturday, April 9, at barbecue grove, near Industry yard, it was announced Saturday. A five-piece string orchestra and a track meet by members are among entertainment features planned for the outing by Jim Bruce, chairman of the entertainment committee.

Automobiles provided for those who do not drive cars of their own will leave the Central of Georgia freight depot, at the foot of West Alabama street, at 12:30 o'clock.

W. H. Gatchell, of Washington, D. C., assistant to the vice president of the Southern Railway system, will address the first April meeting of the Traffic club Monday night, April 11, at the Chamber of Commerce building, it was announced.

G. EVERETT MILLICAN BECOMES CANDIDATE

G. Everett Millican, young business man, Saturday announced his candidacy for alderman from the tenth ward, subject to the democratic primary, May 25.

In making his announcement, Mr. Millican stated that he would make his race in furtherance of a businesslike government for the city. He has been a resident of the tenth ward for several years and is well known in fraternal and church circles.

Winners in Constitution Twin Word Contest Are Announced by Judges

Mrs. L. C. Williams, of Hayesville, N. C., won first place, and Mrs. R. A. Huie, of Atlanta, second, in The Constitution's twin puzzle "Constantinople" word contest, the management announced Saturday. "We are sorry that you were kept anxiously waiting for so many days, but the judging of the answers and lists submitted was an unusual task and the greatest care was taken to perform this as perfectly as is humanly possible," the management said in announcing the outcome of the contest. "The judges and their assistants checked and rechecked the lists and at last were able to announce the fifty winners.

"It was found after deducting incorrect words and penalties, that Mrs. Williams had the greatest number of correct words. Having fully qualified her list of words, Mrs. Williams is awarded the maximum amount of first prize, which is $3,000.

"Mrs. R. A. Huie, of Atlanta, had the second largest correct list and is second prize winner. She, too, availed herself of the full opportunity and will receive $1,500. The winners and the amounts of the prizes they won are listed below. It will be noticed that many of them won the maximum prizes. We are sorry that it is not our privilege to award maximum prizes to each and every winner.

"The winners are being officially notified of their success and prizes will be awarded within a few days. In closing this contest, The Atlanta Constitution takes great pride in announcing the winners and feels that this has probably been one of its most successful reader-interest contests. Thousands participated and enjoyed the building of words out of 'Constantinople.' In all, the contest proved to be interesting, educational and profitable to our readers. We know that all those who had entered will realize that all cannot be winners, and that 'to the victor belong the spoils.' We are sure that they will join The Constitution in wishing the winners much happiness from their prizes."

Rules of Contest.

Rules and regulations under which the contest was conducted, and by which the winners were selected, were as follows:

"1. Any man, woman, boy or girl living in Georgia or adjoining states, who is not an employee of The Atlanta Constitution or a member of an employee's family, may submit an answer. Prize winners in former contests conducted by The Atlanta Constitution, winning $200 or more are not eligible to participate in this contest.

"2. Make as many words as possible from the letters in the word 'Constantinople.' You may use the letters over and over again in different words but each word must not contain a letter more times than it appears in the word 'Constantinople.' For example, you may use the letter 'e' just once in each word, the letter 'o' twice, and the letter 'n' three times, etc.

"3. Write your words plainly on one side of the paper, in alphabetical order and number words one, two three, etc. Write your full name and address in the upper right hand corner.

No Proper Nouns.

"4. Do not use proper nouns, proper adjectives, prefixes, suffixes, abbreviations, foreign words, obsolete words, contractions, combining forms, Scot and all dialetic words. Words spelled alike but with different meaning will be counted as one word. Words spelled differently, but with the same meaning will be counted as separate words. Both the singular and plural may be used and both will be counted, provided both forms are found in the dictionary. A mispelled word will not be counted.

"5. The judges will use Webster's New International dictionary, latest edition, as their authority in deciding the winning answers.

"6. One correct word will be deducted for each incorrect word.

"7. If there is a tie for any prize, the full amount of the prize will be paid to each person so tied.

"8. Only one prize will be awarded to a household, or person, or group of persons. Every list must represent your own effort, and must be compiled by the person submitting it.

Prize-Winning Regulations.

"9. The largest and nearest correct list of words prepared according to these rules will count 50 points and will win first prize. The next largest and nearest correct list will count 49 points and will win second prize, and so on until the fifty prizes have been awarded.

"10. There will be three independent judges having no connection with The Constitution, who will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes and participants by sending in their answers agree to accept the decision of the judges as final and conclusive.

"11. Subscriptions (both new and renewals) payable in advance at the regular subscription rates will be accepted in qualifying answer for the maximum prize. However, in qualifying for the $3,000 first prize at least one new yearly subscription must be sent in.

"12. Do not write for explanation of rules. It would be unfair to answer questions for one without sending the same information to all others. Fair play is assured to all. List of words must be mailed and postmarked on or before midnight March 19, 1927."

Fifty Prizes Offered.

According to the rules and regulations of the contest, there were only 50 prizes to be paid. These 50 prizes go to those who turned in the 50 largest correct list of words made from the word "Constantinople," keeping in mind that one correct word was to be deducted for each incorrect word.

These were the conditions of the contest, and no doubt thoroughly understood by all. The largest correct word list won first prize. The second largest correct list won second prize. The third largest correct list third prize, and so on down to the 50th prize.

The amount of the prize to be paid the winner of first prize depended on the amount of remittance for subscriptions sent to qualify the answer, viz: if the first prize winner, who of course, submitted the largest correct list of words, should not have qualified with remittance and subscription, the total amount to be paid under the rules would have been only $35.

Terms of Offer.

If only $5 and six months' subscription to the daily and Sunday Constitution had been sent, the first prize winner would have been paid only $350; if qualified with only $9.50 for one year's subscription, the amount of first prize would have been only $1,000. But in this contest the first prize winner sent in two annual subscriptions, one of which was new, with a total remittance of $19, and under the rules is therefore entitled to $3,000.

The same rule applied to the second prize, in accordance with amount stated in the prize table, which appeared in the announcement of the contest, likewise the third, fourth, fifth prize, etc.

The Constitution and the judges under the rules of the contest have no voice in, nor are they interested in any certain individuals winning prizes. The contestants themselves by the grade of word lists which they submitted themselves determined the winners. The only thing that the judges could do was to pick out the winners according to the standing and grade of the lists submitted, and the results as published herewith are the findings of the judges and aides after a careful and diligent examination of the word lists submitted.

Local Boy Wins First Prize In State Music Contest

BY HERB McCUSKER.

Just as a matter of fair warning—don't get the idea that because a boy wins first prize in a music contest that he's a "sissy."

Billy Stokey, nine-year-old son of Colonel and Mrs. W. P. Stokey, 334 Eighth street, N. E., and winner of the Atlanta Junior club's musicianship contest, went to Milledgeville recently and copped first prize in the state contest. But if you think Billy's a "sissy," you've got a battle on your hands.

Billy, as handsome a lad as ever you laid your eyes on—large brown eyes, fair hair, n'everything—is a pupil of Miss Dorothy J. Waldman, one of the foremost music instructors in Atlanta, with a studio at 739 Park drive, and, although disdaining to present proof of this assertion, one of the youngest teachers in the state.

Teacher Elated.

Billy was placed in the hands of Miss Waldman some 15 months ago and was instructed in the "progressive series of piano" system by which the pupil learns the theory of music from its inception. In the recent Atlanta Junior contest, Billy "spread-eagled" the field, as the saying goes, and walked off with first honors. This privileged him to represent Atlanta at the state contest in musicianship at Milledgeville last Thursday. Here Billy repeated his earlier accomplishment and won first prize in the material form of a bright, new five-dollar gold piece—and the privilege of representing Georgia in the district contest to be held soon in High Point, N. C.

Miss Waldman was elated at Billy's success, as were also Billy's parents. Billy himself "kinda liked it." But one thing worried him—he didn't want to be considered a "sissy."

Under the circumstances, what could a fellow do? Ask most any red-blooded "kid," and he'll tell you he'd have done just what Billy did.

Anyway, it required exactly three stitches to mend Billy's scalp where the rock, which some other kid heaved, struck him. Billy may have drawn a spanking for indulging in mimic warfare—but he was as proud of that wound behind his left ear as he was of the $5 gold piece. And nobody could call him a "sissy"—not and get away with it!

Exacting Test.

To give an idea of how exacting was the test which Billy won, the following list of subjects was used in the Milledgeville contest: Sight reading, transposition, sight singing, straight theory, chords, memory work, scale tetrachord and cadences.

"And Billy was the youngest contestant in his class," Miss Waldman, Billy's teacher, said proudly, upon the boy's return. "Not only that—he recently won the first prize for declamation at the Tenth Street school! Is it any wonder we're proud of him?

Billy lingered after the interview. "But please don't forget that I'm no sissy," he said, seriously.

Fat chance!

WATKINS TO SPEAK ON "DELINQUENCY"

Judge Garland M. Watkins, of Fulton county juvenile court, will address the Young Men's Business class of the Peachtree Street Christian church on the subject of "Juvenile Delinquency" at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

He will speak on the same subject at 8 o'clock Monday night to the Parent-Teacher association of the Stone Mountain High school, and at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night to the Parent-Teacher association of the South Pryor Street school.

CIVIC CLUBS PLAN TO GET OUT VOTE

This week has been designated as registration week in Atlanta and six civic organizations have pooled their resources in an effort to stimulate interest in the coming primary of May 25.

These organizations are the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the Federation of Trades, the Federation of Women's Clubs, the League of Women Voters and the City and Civitan clubs.

A decorated truck will visit each ward in the city and occupants will urge persons qualified to visit the office of the city registrar in the city hall and register in order that they may vote in the primary and also in the proposed city-manager charter election, the date of which will be set later.

The campaign is headed by Joel Hunter, of the City club, who is chairman of a joint committee from all the organizations in the get-out-the-vote drive. He announced Saturday that the drive is non-partisan. The slogan for the campaign is "Vote, Vote As You Please, But Vote."

On Monday morning the registration truck will be in the seventh ward, as follows: Gordon and Lee, Peeples and Gordon, Cascade and Gordon, Cascade and Beecher, Gordon and Lucile, Lucile and Holderness, Lucile and Ashby. In the afternoon it will be in the tenth ward.

CLEAN-UP WEEK NAMED BY CIVIC DEPARTMENT

Clean-up and paint-up week was officially designated Saturday for the week of April 11 to 18 by the civic department of the Atlanta Woman's club, of which Mrs. James R. Little is president.

Civic organizations will join in the general drive to make Atlanta cleaner and brighter, and the whole town will be given a spring house-cleaning if plans of the women are carried to completion. Every possible assistance will be sought in the crusade to make the city the cleanest in the entire country.

The sanitary department of the city government under the supervision of Chief John Jentzen will cooperate to make the week a success. A fleet of 51 garbage trucks, 23 sweeping carts, six street sweepers and five street flushing machines will be worked night and day if necessary to make the city spick and span for the summer months. A total of 297 employees of the sanitary department have been enlisted in the campaign.

"We feel that the city can be made more beautiful and sanitary by a concerted drive to clean and paint it up and are bending our efforts to this end," Mrs. Little said. "We have been promised the unstinted cooperation of city officials and feel fortunate that they are willing and really anxious to enter into the drive in the interest of the health of Atlantans.

"The fine spirit of service which has been demonstrated has encouraged us and we are sure that the mosquito, which last year infested the city to a limited degree, will be virtually eliminated this year by the intelligent and zealous fight against him. Cleanliness is the best way to combat the pest."

OFFICE APPLIANCES SHOW PLANNED HERE

The first exposition of office appliances ever staged in the south will be held next October 3-8, when the Southern Business show will open a display of the most modern office equipment which the present day market affords, according to Sydney H. Haynes, southern manager of the Stephen Greene company, who is in charge of arrangements.

V. W. Shepard is assisting Mr. Baynes with the management of the coming show, plans for which are nearing completion, it was said. Approximately 100 booths of attractive design, laid out with a view to offering equally advantageous locations, will be provided for exhibitors, while the management plans to back the products on display with newspaper and other effective advertising, it was said.

In discussing plans for the exposition Mr. Baynes said: "Any machine, method or device which contributes to health, convenience or speed in a business office is qualified for display and can be exhibited to advantage in the Southern Business Show, which is planned more with a view to educating the public than any direct sales that might result."

Though a former Atlantan, Mr. Baynes has spent the last 10 years in New York, coming to the city last December to take charge of the southern territory for his company. The local exhibition will be built along lines of shows held annually in New York.

AUGUSTA MAN KILLED WHEN HIT BY TRUCK

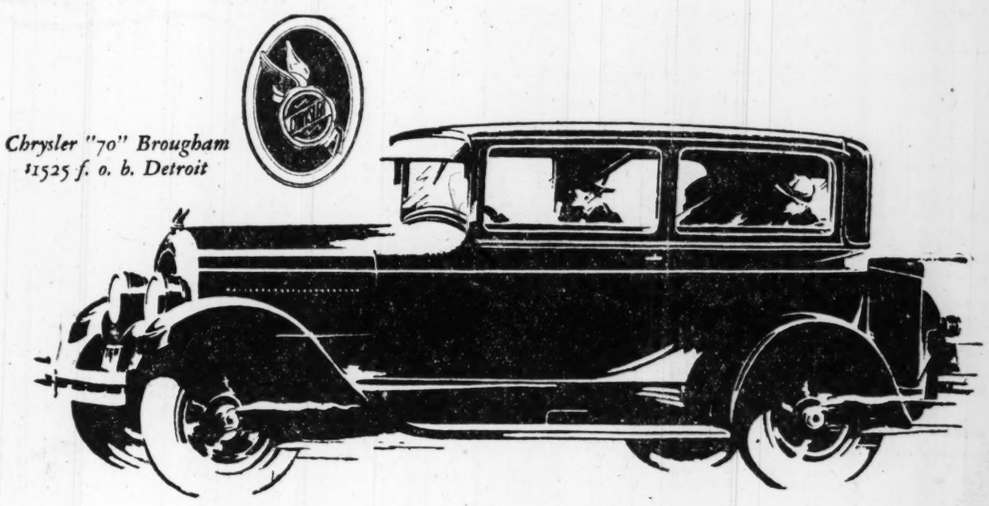

Augusta, Ga., April 2.—(AP)—Frank Baird, 24, was run down and instantly killed by a truck here this morning as he was crossing Ellis street in front of the garage where he was employed.

LOCAL HORTICULTURIST TO LECTURE MONDAY

Norman C. Butts, Atlanta horticulturist, will deliver an illustrated lecture on "Plant Propagation" Monday night at the regular monthly meeting of the Georgia Botanical society in the Chamber of Commerce building at 8 o'clock, it was announced by Miss E. de Graffenried, publicity chairman, who urges all members to be on hand at the meeting.

Pre-eminently today the 70-mile-plus quality car

TODAY, more emphatically than ever the finer Chrysler "70" is pre-eminently the 70-mile-plus quality car of its class—vogue-established and value-established as unique, alone and literally above all competition.

In planning the original "70" three years ago, Walter P. Chrysler and his engineers conceived a smart, swift, fashionable car which has been accepted by thousands upon thousands of enthusiastic owners as a refreshing departure from previous conventional design and performance.

Ever since this Mr. Chrysler and his associates have enhanced the magnetic appeal of the finer "70" to discriminating men and women with the result that today it is as new and as far beyond the ordinary as it was at its introduction.

Sport Phaeton $1495; Two-passenger Roadster (with Rumble Seat) $1495; Brougham $1525; Two-passenger Coupe (with Rumble Seat) $1545; Royal Sedan $1595; Two-passenger Convertible Cabriolet (with Rumble Seat) $1745; Crown Sedan $1795, f. o. b. Detroit, subject to current Federal excise tax.

All Chrysler cars are protected against theft under the Fedco System . . . Chrysler dealers are in position to extend the convenience of time payments. Ask about Chrysler's attractive plan.

Don't Make Common Error; Insure Against Mishaps

Struck down at a street corner in Decatur Friday afternoon, a well-known citizen was so badly injured by an automobile that he died later in the day in a local hospital.

What happens to one may happen to another. You may be standing on the brink of eternity; today or tomorrow may bring disaster to you. The accident wave, growing every day and sweeping every part of the country, respects no persons.

Be prepared! Insure yourself in order to protect the future of your wife and children and to prevent your own income from suffering an abrupt termination.

The Constitution offers you the famous $7,500 travel accident policy issued by the North American Accident Insurance company for the insignificant cost of $1.25 per year. For a fraction of a penny a day you secure this policy, which guarantees payment of sums ranging downward from $7,500 for death resulting in certain accidents set forth; heavy cash sums for permanent injuries, and $10 weekly indemnity for disability resulting from the accidents described in the policy.

A train wreck, a crash of automobiles the onrushing wheels of a speeding car, a burning building—and you may be left dead or mained. Get insurance today at this unparalled low rate.

This $7,500 travel, $2,000 auto and $1,000 pedestrian accident policy is issued only to subscribers of The Daily and Sunday Constitution and immediate dependent members of a subscriber's family between the ages of 15 and 70 at $1.25 per policy per year. Open to both old and new subscribers.

One who is now taking The Daily and Sunday Constitution, or will subscribe for same through carrier in Atlanta or suburbs, or through an out-of-town carrier, or dealer, paying for the paper weekly, monthly or otherwise, is a subscriber and is eligible.

Those taking The Daily and Sunday Constitution by mail, either through a postoffice or rural route delivery, and all those subscribing through the twin-word building contest for one year are eligible by paying $1.25 per year per policy above the subscription price.

In sending application for insurance the applicant must state name in full, give age and occupation. If beneficiary is desired, full Christian name must be given and the relation of same to the insured.

Collar Button Unearthed Here After Big Hunt

Man's eternal search for the elusive collar button—a trouble which began when semi-civilizad men began using thorns and vines to hold their best fronts in place—has ended successfully for one man at least, Prentiss M. Terry, of Louisville, district manager of the Louisville office of the United States department of commerce.

The search has occupied more than three weeks, the time of several department of commerce attaches here, hotel managers and maids, and sympathetic persons of the city.

Mr. Prentiss was a visitor in Atlanta March 17-18 to the southern conference on foreign trade sponsored by Herbert Hoover. The last session ended late and he was obliged to leave Atlanta without the prized clothing accessory. Harry O. Mitchell, of the local commerce department staff, finally found the button and with other trinkets which Mr. Prentiss forgot, it was sent to Louisville.

All Saints Meet.

The young woman's auxiliary of All Saints' Episcopal church will hold its regular monthly meeting Tuesday night at 6 o'clock, in Eggleston Memorial hall. Dinner will be served.

SPOTS IN NEW YORK.

New York, April 2.—Spot cotton quiet; middling, 14.35.

New York, April 2.—(AP)—The cotton market was quiet today, with prices slightly lower under selling supposed to be encouraged by reports of better weather in the south. July sold off to 14.23 and closed at 14:24, the general market closing steady at net declines of 2 to 5 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 2 to 4 points under southern and local selling. Liverpool made a fairly steady showing and there was some foreign trade buying here which absorbed offerings, but demand tapered off on slight bulges and the market eased slightly in the forenoon under comparatively small offerings.

May declined to 14.03, October to 14.47 and December to 14.66, net declines of 3 to 6 points, and the close was at about the lowest.

Clearing weather in the south was considered responsible for part of the selling, but the volume of business was too small to suggest the development of any fresh sentiment or any material change in general conditions.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 177,000 bales, against 72,000 last year, which was regarded as pointing to continued full exports, but which appeared to have very little, if any, effect on the market.

Private cables said some continental liquidation had been absorbed by trade calling and covering on the Liverpool market and a limited demand for cotton cloths in Lancashire from the home trade and exporters.

The report of the department of agriculture on boll weevil survival is expected at the opening on Monday. There was very little discussion today as to its probable showing, but uncertainty as to its reactions on the market may have had a tendency to restrict fresh business.

Reports received from Memphis said crop preparations in that section were two weeks later than last season and there was little prospect of plowing for another 30 days at least in the flooded areas.

PRICE RANGE NARROW AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, April 2.—(AP)—Prices fluctuated narrowly today on the cotton market, the extreme range for the day not exceeding four points. The close was steady, unchanged to 4 points down.

In spite of better Liverpool cables, the market opened unchanged and in early trading eased off to 14.08 for May, 14.24 for July and 14.38 for October, 3 or 4 points under yesterday's close.

The first decline was due to favorable weather in the belt but the disposition to edge downward was held in check for fears of what might be shown by the boll weevil emergence report due Monday.

The market remained dull for the remainder of the session, fluctuating narrowly within the limits already set. The close was near the lows. Exports totaled 50,015 bales.

Bankers Trust Co. Reports On French Foreign Trade

New York, April 2.—France's foreign trade during 1926 resulted in an export balance of 19,924,000 francs, as compared with an export balance for the previous year of 1,650,571,000 francs, according to advices just received by Bankers Trust company, of New York, from its French information service. During 1926 imports of 45,513,430 metric tons were valued at 59,514,725,000 francs and exports of 32,429,146 metric tons were valued at 39,534,649,000 francs. In 1925 the imports weighed 47,443,250 metric tons and were valued at 44,095,362,000 francs, while exports of 30,387,117 metric tons had a value of 45,754,933,000 francs. In each year the weight of the imports was greater than that of the exports, but the value of the exports was the greater.

BY R. L. BARNUM

New York, April 2.—A new high record price for all time was made on each of the first two days of this week followed first by irregularity in oils, industrials, motors and then by a resumption of the upward price movement in the low-priced rails. For the week as a whole, taking the stock market as a whole, speculative sentiment in Wall street is about as badly mixed as it has been in years.

Early in January a new high level was established in the average price of 50 stocks at 139.96. The last week of January, however, saw the price down to 135.82. February saw a reversal of the price movement a steady advance taking place from 138.25 on the opening day of the month to a new high record for all time at 148 on the 28th: March saw the average down to 142.94 followed by a recovery at the close of the month to a new high but with the price movement greatly confused, stocks in one group declining while those in another were advancing.

Traders in the stock market started this year with expectations that general trade would be as good if not better than 1926 and 1925, two of the best years in our history. For January and February there was something more than the usual after-holiday slowing down in general trade, March showed encouraging improvement. Spring trade usually reaches its peak around the end of the first quarter of the year after which there is seasonal slowing down. Considering the exchange quotations at the opening of the year there has been disappointment over the results for the first quarter with considerable uncertainty now existing over the months between now and the time something definite will be known about the year's crops.

Banker's Analysis.

Our largest bank here has at the head of its statistical department one of the best-known economists in the country. In his analysis of the situation at the end of the first quarter of the year made public this week this vice president of the bank in question has this to say:

"Industrial production though heavy in individual lines has not been generally up to the levels of 1926. Business generally is still above the normal and there is nothing now in sight to indicate that it may not go on this way for some time. That it will overtop the record of 1926 seems unlikely in view of the improbability of a further expansion in the building and automobile industries. That it will fall seriously below that of 1926 seems equally unlikely so long as credit supplies continue in their present abundance.

In six leading lines of wholesale trade sales during the month of February were the lowest for any corresponding month since 1922, according to this week's statement from the federal reserve board at Washington. During March there was improvement; but as pointed out in the foregoing bank review as of April 1 while production is running heavy and is still above normal it is not up the 1926 level. This situation with growing realization of over-production of crude and refined oil caused selling pressure of idle funds asserting itself on the declines. There is no good reason to be found why some stocks should advance further from the existing high price level. On the other hand the general situation and outlook plus an abundance of easy money does not warrant any sustained decline in the stock market as a whole. Throughout the month of March the stock market did not say much of anything one way or the other because there was not much to say.

Railroad Stocks.

Good reasons may be found for this week's renewal of interest in railroad stocks. Early this year the stock market outlook for the rails was the best in many years. But that movement started out on the wrong foot. Competitive buying in Wheeling and Lake Erie by eastern railroads and buying of Western Maryland by Baltimore & Ohio started unfounded rumors that this and that low priced railroad stock wes being bought up for merger purposes. These rumors did not materialize and instead the supreme court greatly disappointed speculative Wall street in the decision handed down in Los Angeles and Salt Lake test valuation case. Speculation in the rails which was the most active in years suddenly switched from the rails back into the industrials.

With the government exercising close supervision first of railway stock and bond issues and then of railway mergers based on actual values there was never any real basis for the wild speculations in railway shares that occurred early this year. Railroad stocks as a class, however, are entitled to sell on a higher price level, something that cannot be said of some of the other groups of stocks actively being traded in.

Since the adjustment period of 1920, the retail trade in this country has been in the saddle because it knows the manufacturer has excessive production facilities. This knowledge on the part of the retailers and nothing else accounts for the hand-to-mouth buying policy being followed by trade in general. It also accounts for the continued high cost of living despite the decline that has been going on in wholesale commodity prices since November of 1925.

Unlike steel, copper, automobile, sugar, oil and other industries that might be named the railroads are not suffering either from excessive production facilities or from greatly increased capitalization. During the last eight years no less than $37,536,000,000 new securities have been floated on this market. On this total foreign government issues account for $2,983,000,000, industrial companies $5,570,000,000, public utilities companies $7,192,000,000, state and municipal issues $8,710,000,000. In the meantime the railroads have issued only $3,287,000,000. Moreover since the end of the war only 5 per cent of the new capital raised by the railroads has been raised through sale of stock. The railroads of the country are now earning more on their outstanding stock than ever before, yet railroad stocks as a whole are selling far below the new high for all time established by industrials. On the basis of their earning power and improved credit railroad stocks are entitled to sell higher.

RUBBER IMPORTS BREAK RECORDS

Washington, April 2.—American imports of crude rubber in 1926, valued at more than a half billion dollars, broke all previous records, as shown in a statement issued today by the foreign commerce department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

During the year the United States imported 925,878,000 pounds of crude rubber having a total value of $505,818,000, the average price being 54.6 cents a pound. The total value, which was $76,000,000 greater than in the previous year, is the highest ever recorded for any American import, with the single exception of sugar in 1920. Approximately four-fifths of the total rubber imports came from British possessions.

The chamber's statement, which is based on an analysis of this country's foreign trade for 1926, also shows that coffee imports exceeded all previous high marks in both quantity and value—1,493,315,000 pounds at $322,746,000. Bananas, another tropical product, became increasingly popular in 1926 and eclipsed former records—imports amounted to 56,251,000 bunches valued at $31,694,000. Imports of palm kernel oil were the highest on record, 74,980,000 pounds valued at $7,087,000. The 426,287,000 pounds of cocoa, or cacao, beans was a new high mark. Although the value of molasses was below that of 1925, the quantity, 269,648,000 gallons, has never been equaled. Also the quantity of desiccated or prepared coconut meat is the highest to date—49,959,000 pounds. The imports of cane sugar and wheat, although high, were not records.

"The imports of standard newsprint paper are in a class by themselves—3,701,350,000 pounds, valued at $123,982,000—the only commodity of paper to set new high marks. Imports of wood pulp were also the highest ever—1,546,000 tons, valued at $91,252,000.

STEEL PRICES REMAIN STEADY

New York, April 2.—(AP)—Steel prices were steady during the week and production for the month of March was believed to have been a record. Deliveries against contracts continued liberal. Better buying movement was noted, especially in the western districts. Railroad operations increased somewhat. Fabricated structural steel work remained active and contracts said to involve several hundred thousand tons were reported to be under negotiation. Less apprehension was felt regarding the coal strike.

Pig iron was steady with a slight advance named in the Pittsburgh district.

A better demand for copper was noted. No revival of general buying interest was apparent but the lower price level seemed to bring in a little more inquiry from abroad and considerable business is said to have been booked for April shipment to Germany.

While metal was said to be still available at the 13 1-8 cent level, most of the larger producers were holding for 13 1-4 cents.

Tin was slightly easy early, but turned steady later. Prospects of a sharp falling off in straits shipments during the current month offset the increase in the world's visible supply.

Lead was reduced again.

This brought about a much better demand for April-May shipment.

Zinc was in better demand following some slight downward price revisions. Ore prices were shaded a trifle.

(By Fenner & Beane Leased Wire to The Constitution)

BROKERS' STOCK OPINIONS.

Fenner & Beane—Look for continued liquidation in undesirable issues.

F. B. Keech—Observe that the market is in excellent condition.

Newman Bros. & Worms—Market gives evidence of being less subject to irregularity.

Prince & Whitely—Believe that the rail group will move up again fairly soon.

Henta—Believe stock market will be subjected to heavy realizing sales next week.

DOW JONES REPORT.

Our earnings for first quarter this year will be considerably better than last year, said President Zucker of Famous Players-Lasky corporation, sailing on the Majestic. Net profits after all charges and taxes in the quarter exceeded $2,000,000 or about $3.30 a share on common. There are 574,540 shares of common stock outstanding, in corresponding quarter for 1926 company showed net profit after charges and taxes of $1,649,689, equal to $4.02 a share on the 370,114 shares of common then outstanding. "We intend to produce about 75 pictures this year," Mr. Zucker said.

Chicago, April 2.—In official quarters it is estimated that Stewart Warner, for first quarter, will show minimum net earnings equal to $1.75 a share on 500,990 shares of no-par stock outstanding. Maximum estimate is equal to $2.25 a share. This company, with net of 50 cents a share in final quarter of 1926 and with net of $2.26 a share in first quarter of 1926, minimum estimate for first quarter of 1927, is above dividend requirements.

WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Price movements in today's trading were characteristic of a week-end session. Leaders of the week's demonstrations on the upside were subjected to active profit taking, while further urgent selling came into recent weak spots in the industrial specialty class.

An attempt was made to rally the general list at the start of the second hour of aggressive buying of various standard rails, notably Norfolk & Western and Pennsylvania. However, this effort was defeated by a drive on the motor shares, based on rumors that Ford planned to announce his new models over Sunday. This attack brought about a sharp decline in General Motors, which was followed by quick breaks in Baldwin and other industrial leaders. These developments unsettled the whole market which displayed a heavy tone in the final dealings.

NEW YORK EVENING POST.

Within the first half hour steel had been established at new peak levels above 179 and subsequently had dipped back under the Friday final levels. The opening bulge apparently had influenced large scale realizing by holders who had taken on the stock considerably below current levels. Profit-taking was accelerated by knowledge from fact that the March statement on unfilled business would be out a week from today. Another substantial shrinkage is anticipated probably reaching somewhere between the January loss of 160,890 tons and the February drop of 203,658 tons.

Although there was a disposition on the part of some to use the strength in the Missouri Pacific issues and in Texas Pacific to reduce speculative holdings both stocks appeared to enjoy the strongest kind of buying. The last mentioned issue was once more carried to new high levels. Nothing new developed in the situation here but rumor persists that an early adjustment of Missouri Pacific preferred arrears and the inauguration of dividends on Texas Pacific are early possibilities despite official reluctance to discuss this matter.

NEW YORK SUN.

The position of the majority of stocks were substantially unchanged from yesterday's closing levels at the end of today's session on the exchange. The market was reasonably active but fluctuations, even for a Saturday were unusually narrow.

Another short spurt by United States Steel, which carried it to the highest price in its history, and persistent buying of General Electric, which lifted it to a new peak for the year, lent color to an otherwise drab session, but the strength of these two leaders failed to arouse any sizeable following. There were, on the whole, none of the big declines in the industrial list which were a common phenomenon during other sessions this week.

The action of the rail group resembled the industrial in the conspicuous strength of a few leaders, in some cases only temporary and in others more lasting, and in the apathy or moderate weakness of the other shares.

The effect of yesterday's cuts in California crude and gasoline prices was still apparent in the oil group, which were consistently weak all morning. Several more new low prices for the year were established.

Sugar.

New York, April 2.—With no sales reported, raw sugar was unchanged today at 4.68 for spot Cuban, duty paid, with nearby suggrs offered at that level.

Continued liberal offerings in spots, restricted aggressive buying in raw futures and prices were generally easier under liquidation and selling by houses with Cuban connections. Final prices were unchanged to 2 points lower with approximate sales of 18,550 tons. May closed 2.91; July 3.01; September 3.12; December 3.15; March 2.80.

Refined was quiet and unchanged at 5.85 for fine granulated.

CUSPIDORS LOSE OUT AS TRAVELERS ABANDON 'CHAWIN'

Chicago, Ill., April 2.—Just as old-fashioned "galluses" are coming back for men's wear, it is discovered that the "chawin" traveler" is becoming extinct. The Pullman Palace Car company announces that so few travelers chew tobacco that there is no longer any call for the highly ornate cuspidors.

However, there still remain a few of the men, the same type that built the Panama canal and the western railroads—"the men who do are the men who chew," and the porters on Pullman cars will keep a reserve stock of cuspidors for emergency calls.

Unless there are calls for them, cuspidors will be relegated to the smoking compartments. The company says they have been banished from the palace cars because the sight of them was offensive to many travelers.

Weekly Export Review Of English Cotton Industry

BY FREDERICK W. TATTERSALL.

Manchester, Eng., April 2.—Since a week ago prices have shown little change. No general buying movement in yarn and cloth has shown itself, but most spinners and manufacturers have been well supplied with inquiry and a fair amount of trade has been done. On the whole the sales have been sufficient to maintain the better position of producers. A little uncertainty still exists as to the future level of values. There are operators who hold the opinion that raw cotton rates will go to a lower level. There is some anticipation of American yarns being cheaper if fresh business is withheld. It is recognized, however, that goods bought today are not likely to depreciate in value to any particular extent.

Improved Cloth Inquiry.

During the last few days cloth inquiry has tended to broaden. Manufacturers have complained that most of the offers have been very low, but notwithstanding the difficulties in arranging transactions a rather better turnover has taken place. India has given steady support in bleaching, printing and finishing goods and makers are more favorably situated than a little time ago. Only isolated sales have occurred in grey shirtings. Holidays are now beginning in India and there is a possibility of trade being rather quieter for a few days. Dealers in the bazaars, however, are experiencing good clearances. News of any kind from China has been rather scarce and until the political situation is more settled it is not reasonable to expect trade of any importance.

Demand for Egypt and the Near East has been a little more encouraging and fine goods of various kinds have been sold in fair quantities for several European countries. More promising advise are being received from the home trade, and deliveries from the wholesale to the retail houses are on a free scale. In the weaving towns of Lancashire there is greater industrial activity than for a long time back, unemployment amongst the operatives being considerably reduced during the last few weeks.

Yarns Slightly Irregular.

Owing to the big trade recently done in American yarns the mills in Lancashire are now running about 85 per cent full time. During the last week or two, however, demand has fallen off and some spinners are experiencing a little more difficulty in clearing the large output. Business during the past week has been on a limited scale with a little more pressure for particulars to be declared against contracts on the books. Yarn contract terms are very loose and it is being urged that something should be done to make users take deliveries, according to promises made.

The board of directors of the Cotton Yarn association has now been elected and no time will be lost in putting the scheme into operation. It is understood that the board will be assisted by a strong advisory committee of prominent men in every branch of the industry. When the association begins to function the effect upon the market may be very important.

Crackers Beat Athletics; Cards Meet Yanks Monday

Atlantans Are Outhit By Losers

Tom Rogers and Pete Fowler Hurl for Niehoffs in Last Game.

BY TOM THOMPSON.

Batting away with all the usual fight, Atlanta's Crackers succeeded in downing the Mackian juniors in the second game of a two-game series at Spiller's dell Saturday afternoon 6-5, by staging one of those shoestring last-minute rallies in the ninth inning to overcome a one-run lead, and win.

It wasn't the same slam-bang bust' em out of the lot Crackers that so completely trounced the Athletic Friday, but it was a fighting ball club that made up in fielding what it lacked in hitting, and all this in the face of three Cracker errors.

The game was characteristic of the Niehoffians. They scored twice in the first, the A's scored twice in the third and again in the fourth, and just about set the pace throughout. Incidentally the Niehoffians were outhit, 14-10.

A high wind and a still higher canopy of blue that passed for a sky prevailed. Between these two unavoidable circumstances it was harder to field a high ball than it is to tell what Jim Reed will do next. That wind made plenty doubles out in right field—in fact the bangs that sought seclusion on the goat hill out that way were so numerous that Frankie Zoeller, who can move his heft much speedier than can Welch, was transferred from his accustomed place in the left garden to the bank, while Welch went to left. The As kept Frankie scampering about on that hill as often as Stribling fights.

From right here and taking into consideration the probable acquisition of Billy Rheil for second-base duties, the Crackers look like a strong first division team in the encroaching Southern league pennant race. This observation is based largely on the showing in the two-game series with the Mackians—for the White Elephant aggregation showing here, even though it is not the new pennant machine of Connie Mack, is about the strongest opposition the locals have encountered in their exhibition set-tos.

First Double Play.

The first unassisted double play of the season came in the third inning when Galloway robbed Schwab of a beautiful line drive and tagged Cueto off second.

In the first installment Cueto singled and went to third on Welch's double through short. Haas scored both of them with a right field clout that went for a single, though the center gardener went to second on the throw-in.

The locals went scoreless from there to the seventh inning, while the A.'s piled up their five tallies. Galloway and Wheat counted in the third when three doubles were rapped into the outfield in a row. The former Cracker shortstop doubled to the goat hill. Wheat scored him by doing the same thing and Wheat ran in when Poole put a double in center.

Barbee doubled on the goat hill in the fourth and scored when Perkins pushed a single into left field. Perkins came in when Shores singled to short. Gilbert attempted to handle

STRIB-HERMAN BOUT BARRED IN ALABAMA

Montgomery, Ala., April 2.—(AP)—Governor Bibb Graves Saturday officially banned the Stribling-Herman boxing bout, which was to have taken place in Montgomery Monday, April 11, and was scheduled as the feature number of the program marking the opening for the current season of the schedule of the Southeastern baseball league.

The governor's decision was announced shortly after the noon hour today, following a conference between the chief executive, Attorney General Charlie C. McCall, Laurence Lee, personal legal adviser to the governor; Walter K. McAdory, chief of the state law enforcement department, and a representative of Sheriff John L. Scogin. It is understood that earlier in the day Solicitor W. T. Seibels had notified Sheriff Scogin that the proposed bout would be illegal.

Told to Bar Bout.

At the conclusion of the conference, held in his private office at the capitol, Governor Graves told newspaper men that the law enforcement department and the sheriff's office had been instructed by him that "there will be no Stribling-Herman or other prize fight in Montgomery or elsewhere in Alabama." Governor Graves said that he was taking this action under the provisions of Section 5249 of the code of Alabama.

The section of the code referred to provides that no boxing bout or contest in which a championship is involved, shall be held in the state. That no such contest shall be held where an admission fee is charged to see it, either directly or indirectly—or if any money is bet or wagered on the outcome; nor shall any such contest be held where any one connected with it receives any money for participating in it, or being connected with it.

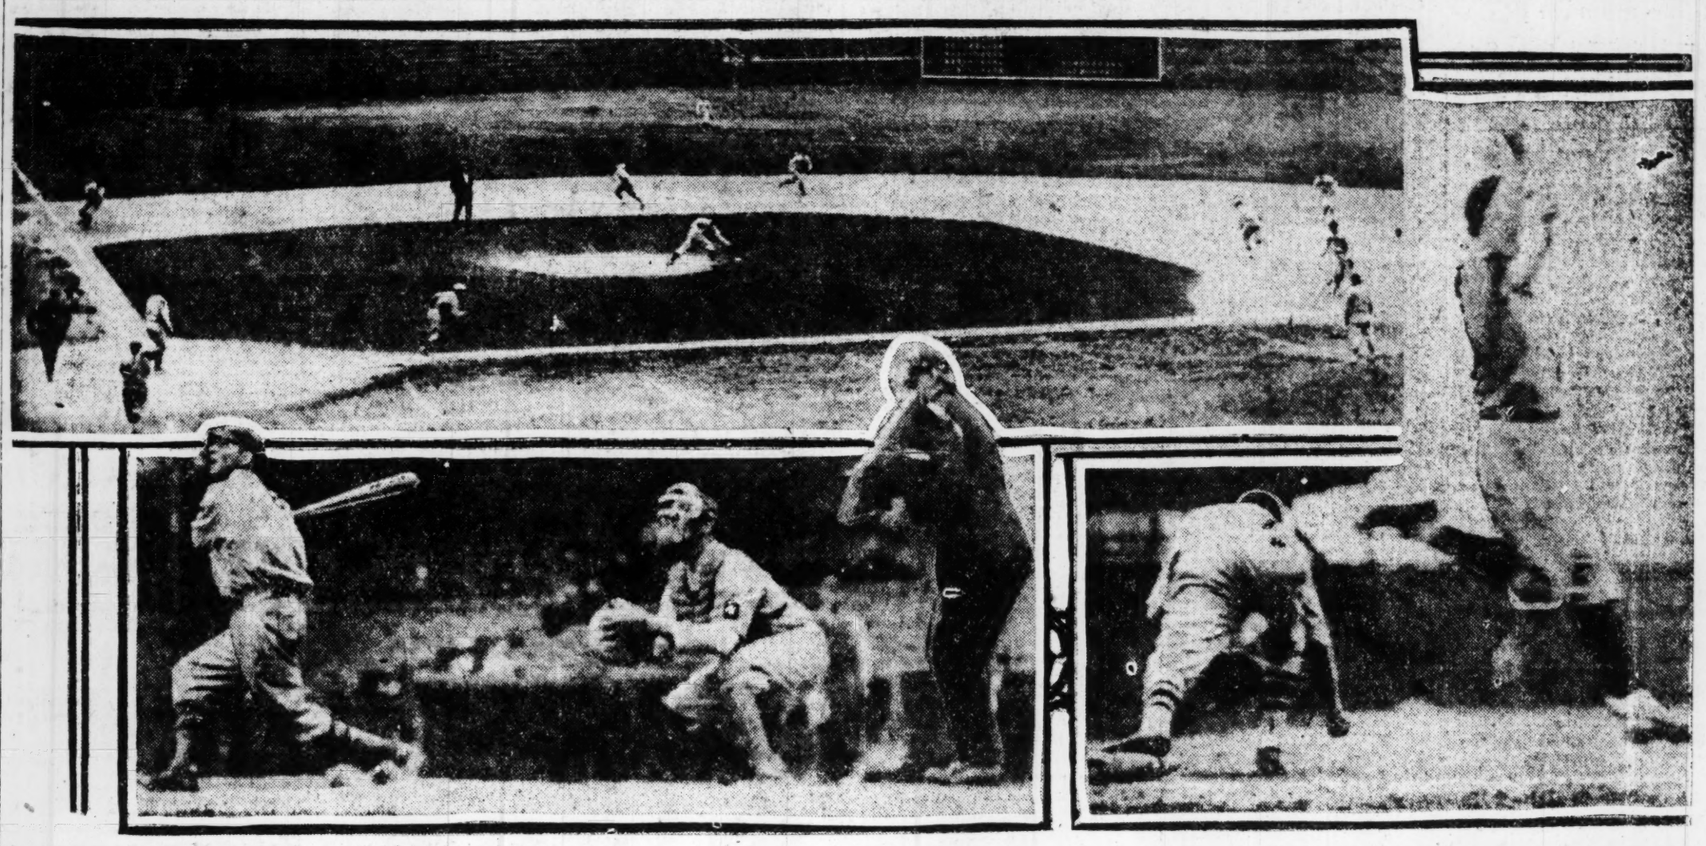

Attorney General McCall, when seen following the conference in the governor's office, stated he had advised Governor Graves that he would be entirely within his rights under the law in ordering that the bout be prohibited.

The action taken by Governor Graves has caused widespread comment among fans here. Boxing enthusiasts expressed severe criticism of the movement.

"Tanks" Grantham, promoter for the American Legion here, stated tonight that the fight would be held at Maxwell flying field, if it could be arranged; if not he would move it to Columbus, Ga.

Major E. H. Jackson, post commander, tonight was using every effort to get the state executive to give his consent to the bout being held at the government reservation.

CRACKERS MAKE IT TWO IN ROW OVER MACKIANS

Boys Hi, U.S.B., Fulton Leading Prep League

BY BEN COTHRAN.

Now that the prepsters who play baseball have gotten used to their new uniforms—and gotten them dirty, aren't scared of the umps any more, they are beginning to figure where they stand, if at all.

Boys' High, University and Fulton High all had easy sailing during the first week and are keeping each other company up on top with percentages of 1,000. G. M. A. got an even break, winning one and losing one.

Among Tech High, Marist, Commercial and East Point, resting uneasily on the bottom, there is some argument as to whose zeros in the percentage column are the roundest. This week is expected to tell a different tale. The Smithies have said so, anyhow.

Week's Schedule.

This week's schedule, especially Tuesday's, will find preppers more evenly matched. East Point and Marist, neither of whom seem to have such a great team, will battle it out among themselves. Boys' High and University will have plenty to fight about when they meet on Grady field. It will probably be the best game of the week.

G. M. A. will likely add another to its won column when the Cadets play Commercial. Tech High will be very busy in staving off the attack of the Fulton nine.

And then, next Friday comes one of those titanic struggles, as the literati—especially scenario writers—are inclined to call them, between Tech High and Boys' High. This great upheaval between the two schools will take place at Rell Jackson Spiller's house of peanuts, pop corn, chewing gum and baseball, out on Ponce de Leon.

Unless the Smithies show improvement this week, Boys' High will have another victory over Tech High in athletics.

The past week has brought out the disturbing fact—doubly so to the prep batsmen—that there are two or three young men in this prep loop that can truly shove baseballs across the plate.

Hits yielded by these gentlemen are about as plentiful as clean linen in a jail. Breezy Winn started off at the first of the week and struck out 10 G. M. A. batters. Which was considered right good. It was. Then came the G. M. A.-Tech High game.

Good Pitchers.

G. M. A. started off with its favorite, Rastus Smith, on the mound. In the first inning it was three up and three down for the Smithies. G. M. A. went to bat in the same frame and proceeded to calmly knock Whitney, the Smithie flinger, out of the box. Tech High sent in a man to pitch by the name of Avery. He isn't a giant by any possible stretch of imagination. And he didn't look much like a pitcher.

"Gee, this'll be easy," said the Cadet batsmen. It was. About all they had to do after that was go up to the plate, and listen until the umpire called "strike three." Young Mr. Avery struck out a total of 16 men. Smith was right behind him, with 13 batsmen having fanned at his disposition.

Arthur McHenry and Pea Green who sometimes exert themselves sufficiently to pitch a ball game for University, are not to be sneered at. More so if you happen to be trying to get a hit out of one of them.

From our angle, it seems as though a good time will be had by all before this prep season ends.

G. M. A. RIFLE TEAM DEFEATS CULVER SQUAD

Defeating the Culver Military academy rifle team by the score of 3,795 to 3,767, the Georgia Military academy team this week closes its individual school rifle shoot with a clean record for the season. Other outstanding shoots won for its perfect record were with the Manlius Military academy, of New York, and the New Mexico Military institute.

The Georgia Military academy team is now representing the fourth corps area in the national rifle shoot. For years, according to Captain McFayden, in charge of rifle instruction, it has been the policy of the school to meet only the outstanding military academies of the country. Scores for the meets were made while prone, sitting, kneeling and standing. The score with the Manlius team was 969 to 957; with New Mexico, of Roswell, N. M., 3,710 to 3,595.

The team shooting with Culver and which will represent the fourth corps area is James T. Hancock, Fort Meade, Fla., 391; Wayne R. Robson, Lakeland, Fla., 389; Ben Smith, Cabiz, Ky., 386; Edward C. Newsom, Jacksonville, Fla., 381; Alfred W. Jones, Dalton, Ga., 379; C. Kenneth Hyatt, Miami, Fla., 379; Jack W. McClure, Palmetto, Fla., 377; Cecil B. Johnson, Geneva, Ala., 374; John Henry Atkin, Vero Beach, Fla., 371; William S. Myrick, Lakeland, Fla., 368; Jeff A. Hedden, Blue Ridge, Ga.; John R. Campbell, Durant, Miss.; Dean E. Armstrong, Lakeland, Fla.; Theo S. Fraleigh, Madison, Fla., and Fussell J. West, Atlanta, Ga.

Lemon City Wins Fla. Track Meet

West Palm Beach, Fla., April 2.—(AP)—Lemon City with a total of 39 points, carried off first place in the official tri-county track meet of southern Florida held here today. Right behind the Aggie cinder artists came the Flying "L" gang of Fort Lauderdale, with 31. Stuart garnered 25 points for third place, while Reaser, of Dania, with eight points to his credit, brought Dania in fourth. Palm Beach high track men were able to grab off but one point in the speedy competition.

Averill, of Fort Lauderdale, jumped into the limelight with a new state record for the running high jump, 5 feet 10 1-2 inches, one inch above the credited state mark held by McDowell, of Gainesville.

Lemon City, Stuart and Fort Lauderdale were even on the number of firsts, each gaining four of the coveted positions.

Parnell, of Stuart, with three firsts in the discus, javelin and shot put, led for individual honors.

Jack Britton Wins Over Art Shekels

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., April 2.—(AP) Jack Britton was awarded the decision over Arturo Shekels in their ten-round bout held at the Pompano race track arena this afternoon.

Britton, twice welterweight champion of the world, is one of the oldest fighters in the ring today. Shekels is a Belgian.

The Atlanta Crackers made it two in a row over the Mackian juniors at Spiller's dell Saturday afternoon, proving among other things that they are rounding into a battling mood and are preparing for a hot race in the Southern league. The top strip shows the Crackers on the way to annexing one of the six runs that won them the game. Cy Perkins is watching the sphere as Schwab clouts a pop fly in the lower left and Schwab demonstrates how far he can reach in the lower right when an out depends on it.

Bert Niehoff, the Cracker manager, is pictured in the appendage. Bert is becoming more and more optimistic over the coming season as exhibition after exhibition rolls past with the Crackers maintaining a brilliant string of victories.

Scrambled or Fried?

For a period that is supposed to be sort of half and half in sports and not particularly productive of news, the past week has given birth to a flock of blooming bulletins and flashes.

The basketball season is passing out of the picture (for which thanks be directed as should be) and baseball is still in its swaddling clothes, but that does not alter the fact that the production of news has been greater than a boom year in the Ford plant.

Some of the principal news events scrambled for your Sunday morning breakfast are as follows:

1. Grand jury finds Irish Benny Cline pulled his punches in his fight (if any) with Milburn Shoffner. Of course that absolves Benny, because there wasn't enough money in the park to "fix" the fight.

2. Judge Landis drops in on Brooklyn and Cleveland teams at New Orleans by airplane. A lot of wind doesn't bother the judge. Why should it?

3. Major Seagrave pushes his flying tank at a speed of 200 and something miles per hour at Daytona Beach and receives a new dime from Mr. Rockefeller. John D. made more than that in profit on the gas consumed.

4. Tiger Flowers beats Soldier Jones and drops $100 to the Junior League, helping to make the big edition successful. Speaking about the big edition—it comes at an opportune time with pantry shelves needing new coverings for the summer.

5. Judge Landis is reported ready to sail for China. It is rumored that the Cantonese sloughed two battles in the siege of Shanghai, but the score is tied new on the rubber game and the judge is waiting for the final bulletin before he sails.

6. Ralph Jones' new song was sung over the radio this week. All

Junior High Nines Open on April 11

The coaches of the junior high ball tossers issued their call for diamond candidates last week and the lot was swarming with lads who never paid any attention to the columns of scandal that was expected to put a damper on the game.

Hoke Smith is farther along with its training than any of the other schools. It also has one of the best chances of winning the rag. With five of last season's regulars to build around it has a big advantage, as the other schools do not have over one or two boys back.

The rest of the team will be made up of boys new to Junior High ball but have lots of experience as they live baseball around the diamonds of Grant Park the entire year.

Joe Brown is hard hit this season. Not any of the last season players are returning. Rutherford will no doubt have a likely looking nine by time for the first game.

In baseball Joe Brown has always been on top or near so every season and will bend every effort to repeat this year.

Bass had 80 lads to line up for the first workout this season, and only one of them was a regular from last season's team. There are several that were on the second string and they may make the grade this season. The squad has been divided into two parts. All seventh graders have been placed to themselves, and the balance are under the care of Coach James, who is trying hard to find the best 20 boys in his squad.

O'Keefe had an unusually large squad to report for the tryouts. Coach Langston has two of his last season's team back on the job. Cape in center field, and Jackson at first. Cape is the youngster who led the league in batting last season, and Jackson also was rated as one of the best hitters in the league.

There is one youngster on this squad that has a good chance of making a name for himself this season. Bobby Nesbitt, who stands about waist high to a grasshopper, is out for custodian of the keystone. Coach Langston remarked that he would give any second sacker in the league a run for his money. He can field and hit the ball all over the lot.

Decatur Junior High school will try its hand at baseball this season. It has been three seasons since a team was put in the league.

A number of the players have been playing sandlot ball for the past three seasons and are not beginners. They will no doubt be strong contenders for league honors.

The schedule follows:

April 11.

O'Keefe vs. Smith at O'Keefe. Umpire, Tubby Wilson.
Brown vs. Smith, at Brown. Umpire, Pack.

Sisters Win Two Indoor Net Titles

Brookline, Mass., April 2.—(AP)—The Misses Sarah and Mianne Palfrey, of Brookline, 14 and 16-year-old sisters, won two girls' national indoor tennis titles here today. Sarah defeated her older sister, 6-3, 6-2, to take the singles crown and then teamed with Mianne to defeat another sister, Lee, and Marie Fensterer, of Englewood, N. J., in the doubles final, 6-3, 8-10, 8-6. Sarah and Mianne already held the girls' outdoor doubles title.

Even the defeated sister, Lee, took some honors for it was her handling of her sisters' drives and volleying with unusual force and accuracy from the fore-court which led the score after the first set had been lost and forced the match through a deuced third set.

Hapeville Defeats Merritts Avenue

Hapeville, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) Behind the tight pitching of Evans, star moundsman, the First Baptist church of Hapeville baseball team defeated the Merritts avenue nine, 11 to 1, here today.

Evans was in mid-season form and hurled winning ball throughout the game, striking out 13 opposing batters in the nine innings. Smith worked the hill for the losers but could not keep the pace with Evans.

Brown Wins.

Paris, April 2.—(AP)—Al Brown, of Panama, won a point decision tonight over Eugene Criqui, of France, former featherweight champion of the world. The bout was ten rounds and was held at the Velodrome.

Babe Ruth Will Play At Spiller's

Many Other Famous Players Will Be Seen on Local Lot.

Headlining a week of stellar attractions on the mammoth baseball stage of Spiller's will be the contest between the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals Monday afternoon.

Following them will come the game between the Giants and the Senators, and then the Crackers will take on Wilbert Robinson's Dodgers from Brooklyn in a two-game series Wednesday and Thursday. The show will end Saturday afternoon with a conflict between the Crackers and the Albany, New York, Eastern league, aggregation.

The games Monday and Tuesday will provide Atlanta fans with an opportunity to see four of the most famous and strongest teams in the two major leagues in action. The names of men that will play ball before Atlanta crowds have adorned tongues of the nation for years.

Many Stars Coming.

For instance, there is Babe Ruth, the king of clout; there is Bob O'Farrell, the young and capable manager of the world champion Cardinals, adjudged the most valuable player in the National league at the close of last season. There are Meusel, Hoyt, Lazzeri, Dugan, Koenig, Jim Bottomley, Tommy Thevenow, the sensation of 1926; Lester Bell and many others, not to mention Frankie Frisch, who went to the Cards in the amazing trade that took Rogers Hornsby to the Giants.

Incidentally, these are about the only changes in the lineups from the series last year. Hornsby is gone and Frisch is in. Of course, Jimmy Ring, with the Giants last year but who went to the Cards in the Frisch-Hornsby trade, may pitch.

But then right behind that will come the big parade of stars that includes Rogers Hornsby and Tris Speaker, Goslin, Rice, Jackson, Lindstrom, Ruel, Judge, Buddy Myer, Bill Terry, Bevo Lebourveau and others.

There will also be two boys of particular interest to Atlanta. Nick Cullop, the lambasting babe who made life in the far-flung left field stands such a menace in 1925, and Bob Reeves, who captained the Georgia Tech team last year.

MANY CHANGES IN LOOKOUTS' 1927 ROSTER

Chattanooga, April 2.—(Special.) Changes in the Lookout roster brought about by the recent unexpected, but none the less welcome, trades made by President Nicklin and Manager Johnson have thrown the dopesters into a frenzy of speculation rivaling the height of the hot stove season. Until the squad settles down next week to the last stretch of exhibition games nobody can tell just how the Lookouts will line up to face the Barons April 12.

The most radical shakeup of all was the just completed swap with the Barons—the trade which sent Elliott (Babe) Bigelow to the Dobbers and brought Johnny Chapman and Fred Coumbe to the Andrews field contingent. Just before that deal came the sale of the veteran Cy Anderson to the Mobile Bears. Fans hereabouts have learned lately to grab the sports sheets frantically as they come off the press lest some big trade slip by in the press of sales, releases and exchanges.

Coumbe, if he shows sufficient class, will oust Young Bob Hipps, the sole remaining firstsacker of the quartet which started out with the opening of the training season. Bob has been doing a good job in exhibition game but considering Coumbe's record, the veteran probably will get the job.

Merry Fight.

The rest of the infield is a merry jumble of star material with each man of a group of five well able to take care of one of the three positions. Tony De Fate has been working, and working well, at third, but Tony is also said to be quite a shortstopper. Thorp Hamilton finished last season at third, but since the opening of the training camp has been playing at short. Dutch Krehmeyer played second all last season; so did Johnny Chapman. Jimmy Johnston has been doing the keystone trick in recent practice tilts.

Batting averages will do the picking in the end for those three infield jobs and the men who can produce the bingles will get the awards.

The Lookout outfield lost a big section of its well-known wallop when Babe Bigelow went south, but if the added points in the team average can be made up in the infield the aggregate figure will not suffer. Eddie Lewis, who worked Dixie hurlers for many a base on balls and Dixie catchers for many a stolen base last summer, is sure of an outfield job. Dixie Carroll, the veteran master batsman, who sliced them through the infield for an average of .370 last summer, is another who is as certain to be out there when the campaign opens. For the third garden spot two youngsters, Brown Braly and Dick Tangeman, are scrapping. Tangeman, who hit .341 in the Sally last season and is meeting the ball well this spring, probably will get the job as Braly, while he is a fast and dependable fielder, is weak at the bat.

Don Anderson and Glenn Turner, carried over from last season, will do the receiving.

Brilliant Field Preparing for Annual Tech Relays

Several Track Marks Are Expected To Fall

BY HOWARD EATON.

A few days more will find the cream of the south and several institutions from the north and east on Grant field competing in the largest interscholastic and intercollegiate relay carnival ever staged by Tech officials.

April 9th is the day set for the teams to strut their stuff. Coach Alexander, the father of the relay carnival, stated that the largest array of college, high, prep and grammar school athletes ever assembled on any southren field will be present for the opening gun at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Several relay records are almost sure to fall before the horde of athletes leave Grant field. Two event winners last year were: Distance medley for colleges, Indiana, first; Mississippi A. and M., second; North Carolina, third. One hundred-yard dash, McPherson, N. C., first; Bridges, L. S. U., second; Pepper, Indiana, third. This year the south boasts of three fast men in Humm, of Tech; McCrary, of Georgia, and Synder, of Auburn. Synder holds the relay record in the 220-yard dash.

Relay a Feature.

The feature event this year will be the one-mile relay, won last year by Mississippi A. and M., which was closely pushed by Vanderbilt. Tech high won the mile relay for high schools. The University of Virginia, which brings one of the strongest relay teams in the country, is expected by a great many people to win the half-mile relay. This team has performed in a number of meets so far this year and has made a fine showing in all of them. Among the stars is Henry Cummins, one of the fastest men in college circles today. He ran the century under 10 seconds several times.

Tickets are on sale at the Tech athletic office for $1, which will entitle the holder to any seat in the stadium. Coach Alexander has arranged the program so that an event is being run off continually, with a running event scheduled for every five minutes during the meet.

The probable order of events and schedule is as follows:

Trial heats in 100-yard dash, 2 o'clock; trial heats in 120-yard hurdles, 2:10; finals in 100-yard dash, 2:20; distance medley relay for colleges, 2:25; half-mile relay for colleges, 2:40; half-mile relay for freshmen, 2:45; half mile relay for preparatory schools, 2:50; finals 120-yard hurdles, 3; quarter mile relay, grammar schools, section A, 3:10; quarter-mile relay, grammar schools B, 3:15; one-mile relay for colleges, 3:20; half-mile relay, high schools, towns less than 5,000, 3:50; half mile relay, high schools, towns more than 5,000, 3:35; one-mile relay for freshmen, 3:40; four-mile relay for colleges, 3:50; one-mile relay for preparatory schools, 4:10; trial heats 220-yard hurdles, 4:20; two-miles relay for colleges, 4:30; trials 220-yard dash, 4:40; half-mile relay for junior high, 4:50; two mile relay for freshmen, 4:55; two-mile special race, 5:05; finals 220-yard hurdles, 5:15; one-mile relay, high schools, towns less than 5,000, 5:20; one-mile relay, high schools, towns more than 5,000, 5:25; finals 220-yard dash, 5:30; sprint medley for colleges, 5:40; pole vault, 2; shot put, 2; discus throw, 3; high jump, 4; broad jump, 5; javelin throw, 5.

2 Conference Track Marks Are Smashed

North Carolina Track Stars Defeat V. P. I. in Meet.

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 2.—(AP)—Two southern conference and one state record were broken here today when the University of North Carolina cinder men defeated the track team of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, 69 to 57.

Pritchett, of Carolina, turned in the outstanding feat of the day when he led a fast field home in the two-mile race in nine minutes and 50 seconds, breaking the Southern conference record by more than eight seconds. At the finish he was more than 200-yards ahead of the second man.

The discus was hurled 141 feet 10 3-4 inches by Lund, of V. P. I., which bettered his own conference record by nearly six feet.

Elliott, of Carolina, broke the state record two-tenths of a second by traversing the half mile in two minutes flat.

Sandlin, of Carolina, was high scorer with 11 points garnered by taking first place in the broad jump and javelin throw and third place in low hurdles. Captain Dan Montague, of V. P. I. was second, winning both dashes.

Crackers Defeat Athletics Again

Shores' knock, but his throw to first was wild and Shores raced to third. However, he failed to touch second and Gilbert tagged him.

Barbee Singles.

Barbee singled in the sixth and scored on Perkins' double. Shores, however, hit into a double play when Fowler grabbed his pop and caught Perkins off second.

Niehoff walked in the seventh. Kohlbecker doubled and the skipper took third. Zoeller sacrificed him home and Kohlbecker scored when Cueto singled to center.

Rod Murphy, pinch-hitting, preserved the ball game and Schwab won it with a couple of singles in the ninth. Sigafoos tossed out Niehoff. Kohlbecker walked. Murphy hit for Rogers and pasted a single into right field, while Hall, running for Kohlbecker, stopped at third. Francis ran for Rod. Zoeller sacrificed in his second run when Hall tromped the rubber after his fly to left.

With the score knotted the A's made an effort to throw the affair into extra spasms by sending in Willis. Willis was pounded loose from his stance in the box Friday, but he went in anyway. He was useless, however, for he promptly walked Cueto, and Schwab promptly ended the fracas by scoring Francis on a single through short.

A Lot of Argument.

There seemed to be considerable argument at one time or another over the performance of Mr. Clark, the robber behind the plate. Mr. Clark did quite a bit of arguing before the day was over, for it was a continuous session with him. When the Crackers weren't telling him he was all wet, Cy Perkins was. Of course both of them couldn't be right, but then they must have been, for it is almost impossible for anyone to be wrong in an argument with Mr. Clark.

Generals Win.

Durham, N. C., April 2.—(AP)—The Washington and Lee Generals made a clean sweep of the two-game series with the Duke university Blue Devils here this afternoon when they scored a 6-to-4 victory. The Generals touched Jones and Johnson, Duke hurlers, for seven hits, which were added to seven free walks for the half-dozen markers.

TECH HIGH WINS FIRST IN RELAYS

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 2.—(Special.)—Tech High, of Atlanta, took first honors in the Baylor relay races held here today, winning three of the relay events, and taking first place in the 100-yard dash.

Boys' High took second place in the events, and pushed the Smithie crew closely in all the races.

In the 880-yard relay, three heats were run off on account of the numerous entries. Tech High ran in the third heat and won with a time of 1:37. This was the fastest by far of the heats, and the Smithie team was awarded first place in that event.

The medley relay, won by Tech High, was the best race of the day. Nunan took the lead for the Atlanta team with the half mile, and it was kept up by Bardwell and Brady.

Summaries.

100-Yard Dash for High Schools—1, Bardwell, Tech High; 2, White, Bessemer; 3, Searcy, Chattanooga Central. Time, 10-3 seconds.

Bainbridge, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—Albany, of the Eastern league, defeated the Rochester International league club here today, 9-8, in the eleventh inning.

WILL PERFORM AT SPILLER'S THIS WEEK

VOL MANAGER PUZZLED OVER 1927 LAYOUT

BY BLINKEY HORN.

Nashville, Tenn., April 2.—Although the opening salute in the new Dixie flag chase must be fired in less than two weeks, James Hamilton, the mogul manager of those Vols, is still remote from any definite conclusions as to what ammunition he will employ in numerous departments. He is pestered by problems behind the plate, on the rubber and in the suburbs. Only on the infield has the home skipper reached any positive opinions. To a large extent the muddled situation has arisen from illness amongst his hirelings and miserable weather conditions which have seriously retarded development of the hired hands. There appears to be very little to choose between several ambitious candidates, and Jimmy Hamilton may be forced to adopt the eeny, meeny, miny, mo policy in order to untangle several of his riddles.

For mit and mask chores Ray Haworth, purchased from Columbus, and Dick Luckie, a native son, are engaged in a scramble. Luckie was a Vol previously, but was so raw that Jimmy Hamilton hung him on a Christmas tree for St. Petersburg, Fla. This spring, working out with the Vols, he looked so improved that Jimmy Hamilton bought him back. Leo Mackey has the first backstopping job cinched. Haworth has an excellent wing, but his hitting ability is doubtful.

A Good Third-sacker.

Unless there should be an eleventh-hour switch in the mental apparatus of Jim Hamilton, his infield will be composed of McLarry at first, Bill Black at second, Johny Bates at short and Chet Fowler on the hot corner. At third the Vols this summer should be several leaps beyond their 1926 form. Last summer, despite various experiments, Hamilton was never able to corral a dependable third-sacker. Bates, of course, is not apt to be as valuable as an inventor or pivot man on double plays as was Buck Redfern last season, although the former Lookout has never been as earnest in his work as he is this spring. Bill Black, secured with Fowler from Minneapolis in the Eddie Kenna deal, not only is a clever keystoner but he is a helpful adjunct with the old stick. Polly McLarry reported this spring in excellent condition and no repetition of his long layoff due to a weak wing, which occurred last spring, is expected.

Seldom have the Vols had brighter box prospects. Choosing the proper sharpshooters is a matter which will seriously test the fortune-telling capacity of Jimmy Hamilton. Of course springtime slab service is not always a dependable index. There was one campaign, for instance, when the Vols had Alten, Friday, Kenna and Lindstrom in the spring and waxed so enthusiastic they began counting their chicks before they pecked the shell. Neither of these four flingers finished that season as a Vol.

Glaser Curve Artist.

Still the sap will always rise in spite of past disappointments, and there is much elation in the Vol camp over the showing of Whitey Glaser, Ernie Alten, Fred Johnson, Whiskers Gilbert, Lefty Fuhr and Earl Howard. There are three other boxmen on the reservation, but none have been as impressive as the gents above. Glaser has the best curve ball in camp and his control is magnificent. This Wilkes-Barre recruit recommended by Axel Lindstrom had pitched eight exhibition games and only one enemy has traveled as far as second. Alten's wing was never so loose as this spring and he is ready now. Gilbert, who was cut adrift last year and toiled in semi-pro ranks, looks better with each trial and his showing has been made under unfavorable weather conditions for the House of David gunner loathes chilly weather. Earl Howard, reinstated after jumping Milwaukee, has performed in most encouraging style, although his stamina is questionable, for he has shown symptoms of tiring.

Duffy Lewis, former Mobile boss, and Red Smith, who started his ball career in Sulphur Dell under Bill Schwartz many years ago, are counted on as outfield certainties. Gil Reese, Commodore halfback celebrity and brother of Memphis Andy Reese, is struggling for possession of the center territory against Poco Taitt, a big kid from Los Angeles. Dutch Veltman, sent here on option by the White Sox, more than likely will be returned. Reese and Taitt are strangely contrasted. Gil is deerfooted on the paths, but his hitting has not been tumultous. Taitt apparently is the better swatter of the two, but he lacks the aggressiveness and the determination of Reese. Both are left-handed batters. Reese drags the ball a great deal. Taitt, when he connects, sends the apple on long journeys.

Different Couch.

The Constitution has been requested to publish the fact that the Bertha Couch who was fined Thursday in connection with alleged possession of two gallons of whisky, is not the Bertha Couch of 133 Chestnut street, N. W.

MILLER J. HUGGINS

Bob O'Farrell, with his World Champion Cardinals, from St. Louis, will tie up with Miller Huggins and his New York Yankees, runners-up in the race for the title last fall, in the first brilliant series of exhibition games at Spiller's field beginning Monday. Prancing the keystone for the O'Farrell aggregation is Frankie Frisch, secured by Sam Breadon in that startling trade by which Rogers Hornsby, the pilot of the champions, went to the Giants. Frisch is at the left above, O'Farrell at the right and below is Miller Huggins, manager of the Yanks.

GOLF STRATEGIES THAT WON

Sarazen Declares Supposedly "Rotten" Shot Which Beat Hagen Was Carefully Thought Out

NOTE: Following is the first of a series of articles of famous golfing strategies by the nationally-known golf writer, Bunker.

BY BUNKER.

Position. That is the object of every shot in golf except the putt to the cup—in other words, to get the ball favorably located for the next play.

Sometimes the try for position becomes great strategy. If successful, the player may gain a decisive stroke on his opponent.

Such an attempt was Gene Sarazen's tee-shot on the second extra hole of his finals match with Walter Hagen in the Professional Golfers' association tournament of 1923 at the Pelham Country club, New York.

Strangely enough, most of the gallery thought Sarazen had made a rotten play. This, incidentally, was the idea of many a crack professional who happened to be following the match.

"Terrible," was the whisper that went around as the ball left Gene's club-head and was seen to take a pronounced hook.

I have Gene's word for it, however, that his play was carefully planned. It did not carry through exactly according to his desires, but the disaster which many expected did not materialize.

Found Themselves Even.

Here was the situation:

Sarazen and Hagen had played the regulation thirty-six holes of the finals, only to find themselves all even.

On the first extra hole, each made a birdie four. Gene sinking a tricky four-foot putt for a half.

Coming to the second extra hole, he felt the time had come to do or die. He prepared to put into execution a bit of strategy he had been pondering ever since he had played the same hole in the previous round.

Get the picture: The second hole at Pelham measures 310 yards. But the fairway, after threading a hollow, followed by a right-to-left slope, for a distance of 285 or 290 yards, bends suddenly to the left, forming a sort of fish-hook.

Following Fairway Safe.

In this angle at the left are some trees and also some houses. The safe way to play the hole is to follow the fairway. But when a player hits a long ball, as does Gene, he is apt to drive straight for the green, a blind shot carrying over the houses for a distance of 250 or 260 yards.

If he succeeds, he will get a three and cut one off par.

"I had tried for the green in both the morning and afternoon rounds," says Sarazen. "In each instance I had attained my object—and a bit more that I hadn't bargained for! The green was slippery and my ball had rolled over and into the trap beyond.

"I finished the morning eighteen holes three up, but Hagen fought his way to a tie in the afternoon. When we halved the first extra hole, my mind already was made up as to the tactics I would use on the second.

"I was going to play over the houses as before, only this time I meant to shoot for the rough off to the left of the green instead of playing to the green.

"Hagen had the honor and elected to take the safe route down the fairway. I purposely hooked my ball far to the left, above the houses.

Had Hooked Ball.

"Now I must admit that the next few seconds were the hardest I ever experienced on a golf course. I had hooked my ball a bit more than I planned and there was some doubt if it would carry the houses and a high wire netting fence separating them from the golf course. If it hadn't, I would be out of bounds—a disaster.

"I felt more comfortable when word came back that the ball was all right. When I came down and found it not far from the spot where I had aimed, and then perceived Hagen's lie, I knew the advantage was all mine.

"Walter had a clean lie in the fairway, but directly behind a bunker at the right of the entrance. Also—and this is highly important—the cup was set close to that bunker.

Shot Won Match.

"The papers the following day said that my next play was a 'wonderful recovery' out of bad rough. But the fact is, the rough where my ball lay was not bad. Incidentally I had a track toward the pin totally unobstructed by any trap.

"I was farther away than Hagen and played first, chipping my ball within two feet of the cup.

"Walter had a hard play to make to clear that trap and still hold his ball close to the pin. He tried just to carry the trap and failed. On his next effort he almost holed his chip out of the bunker—but not quite. My birdie three gave me the match and the 1923 professional championship."

"The new girl tries mighty hard to look young, don't she?" asked Yvonne of the rapid fire restaurant.

"Eh-yah!" replied Heloise, the head waitress. "And about all she retains of her youth is her girlish giggle."

EDVIN WIDE SETS RECORD IN NEW YORK

New York, April 2.—(AP)—Edvin Wide, Swedish distance star, loped to a new world record of 6 minutes and 37 1-5 second in winning the mile and a half run at the annual indoor Elks meet in the regiment armory tonight. The former record, 6:39 2-5, was made by Paavo Nurmi, Finnish ace, during his American invasion in 1925.

Wide made his own pace from the start and was never headed. Willie Goodwin, of the New York A. C., American two-mile champion, finished 70 yards in his wake. Three other local entries trailed a full lap in the rear of the flying Swede.

During his brief invasion Wide now has shattered three of the marks set up by his Scandinavian rival in 1925. On March 19 the Swedish school master broke Nurmi's records for one and three-quarters miles and 3,000 meters at Philadelphia, although he failed to equal the mile and two miles marks in other tests here.

Duval Hi Wins.

Jacksonville, Fla., April 2.—(AP)—Led by Gormley, fleet trackman who was high point scorer of the meet, Duval High, of Jacksonville, today won the invitation meet here. Duval scored a total of 72 points and Hillsborough High, of Tampa, placed second with 29 1-3 points. Leon High, of Tallahassee, was third with 17 1-3 points, Orlando fourth with 15 1-3 and St. Augustine fifth with 7 points.

First Polo Game At Fort Mac Today

The Rangers are slightly favored over the Freebooters to win Sunday at Fort McPherson when the two teams meet in an abbreviated six-chukker match. However, this will be the first game of the season and anything may happen in the way of reversal of form and the dope bucket.

In the following lineup the Rangers have it over the Freebooters in the way of handicaps allowed. These are merely Atlanta handicap, as some of the players have been members of the National Polo association long enough to carry goal handicaps:

Rangers.
No. 1. Lieutenant Childs handicap	1
No. 2. Mr. Christian handicap	2
No. 3. Mr. Clark handicap	2
No. 4. Lieut. Lynch handicap	2
Total handicap, goals	7
Freebooters.
No. 1. Mr. Love handicap	1
No. 2. Lieut. Skelton handicap	1
No. 3. Lieut. Johnson handicap	1
No. 4. Lieut. Moran, handicap	2
Total handicap, goals	5

In polo parlance this means that in all games played under the auspices of the United States Polo association each of the players named would be handicapped the number of goals shown, which would be deducted from the number of goals made in the game by team totals. In other words, if the Rangers score seven goals and the Freebooters four, making a difference of three goals, the Rangers would win, as the difference in goal handicaps is only two. The Rangers would then win by the score of 1 to 0. This is probably as clear as the water in Zodo Smith's famous H2O factory out Luckie street, but as the match is not being played under United States Polo association rules there will be no need of figuring handicaps. So come out and see the game and the announcer will keep you advised as to who is winning and which side is which.

Colonel Jones will referee and he has made it clear to all the players that reckless riding will not be tolerated in this game. But the thrills will be there just the same. The game starts at 3:15 p. m. First Sergeant Herbert M. Greene will be the announcer.

Spiller Expects To Cop 1927 Attendance Cup

While several big league teams prime the Atlanta fans for the baseball opening, Rell Jackson Spiller, owner of the Crackers, is going on his way preparing to rob the Pelicans of the Southern league attendance trophy which the Gate City held during the year they won the 1925 pennant.

In 1925 a 16,000 crowd flocked through the turnstiles at Spiller's field to score a complete triumph over competition in attendance among the Southern league cities. In 1926 this number slumped by four thousand, the stiles registering slightly over 12,000 for the opening game, and New Orleans copped the cup. Whether it's an indication or not, it seems funny that within the past two years the team that took the attendance trophy also took the flag. Perhaps it's the incentive, but anyway Cracker officials are figuring on a crowd upward of 20,000 viewing the first home 1927 appearance of the locals in a league game.

Spiller believes that the fans are going to crowd the park to see that game.

Plans are already going forward whereby blocks of tickets are being sold through various Atlanta civic organizations.

"SOME VERY FUNNY THINGS HAPPENED THEN"—CONNIE

:: SPEAKING OF THE DAYS LONG AGO ::

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, April 2.—Now that Mr. Connie Mack has assembled another major league ball club for himself with a major league pay roll and receipts to meet it, he sometimes permits himself a reminiscent giggle about the lean and hungry years when no high schoolboy within a sleeper jump of Philadelphia was safe from the subpoenas of his scouts You may remark that the principal reinforcements that Mr. Mack has brought up for this year are elderly men and brittle and not long for the major leagues, but as long as Ty Cobb, Eddie Collins and Zack Wheat do play ball for Mr. Mack they will play major league ball, which is a lot better baseball than some of the juveniles will play for some other firms the whole season through.

And when they begin to pant and their legs lose a fifth of a second in getting under way, Mr. Mack will still have the principal parts of a major league ball team to relieve them while they rest.

Well, anyway, for several years it has been a merry habit to jest about the ball teams that used to wear Mr. Mack's heraldic pachyderm embroidered on their shirtings and how they tripped over the bugs and stumbled on their shoe laces and how their gloves fell off. It used to be said that it was foolhardy to let your grandfather or your office boy go near Mr. Mack's ball park because Mr. Mack would send right up into the stands and shanghai them into the team, after which they would be lucky to starve on the ration allowance.

Exaggeration—Maybe.

You may have thought this an exaggeration, and for that matter it was, but it was not entirely fictitious as Mr. Mack himself now admits in the same modestly boastful way that one of the self-made millionaires of this town is said to admit that he had to shoot himself in the foot, to collect the accident insurance that bought the barren Oklahoma acre where he found his first oil well.

"Do you recall," said your correspondent to Mr. Mack recently, "the time that a fellow just happened to be walking by your ball yard and one of your scouts lassoed him with a clothes line and you put him into a uniform and he pitched against the Browns and beat Urban Shocker?"

"Well," said Mr. Mack, "I recall something the like of that, but the man wasn't lassoed. He came into my office and told me he was a pitcher. I didn't have any fellows at the time who even thought they were pitchers so naturally I was interested in this boy and I asked him to come out and show me what he could throw. But he said he wouldn't do that. He said that if I would let him go in and pitch he would wi a ball game for me but he would not even warm up.

"Of course that was very strange," Mr. Mack said, "but so was my ball club and as I figured that we would probably lose the ball game anyway, I sent him to the clubhouse for a uniform and told him he was going to work for us that afternoon. Mind you, sir, for all I know this boy might go out there and throw girl fashion. He told me his name was Bettig and I looked in all the books I could find but I was not run across his name so I decided that if he was a pitcher his name was not Bettig and if his name was Bettig he couldn't be a pitcher.

"Well, my gracious, Shocker was at his best then, but that boy went into the box without throwing a practice ball and beat Shocker in a pitchers' battle, 2 to 1. That was a marvelous thing considering the kind of a ball team he had behind him and after the game I went up into the office and said to our Mr. Shibe, 'Mr.

"Nothing," Mr. Mack said. "That was the miracle. But it was the only one he had in his system and the hitters murdered him the next time I started him. So I paid him off and that was the last I ever heard of him."

"Oh, some very funny things happened in those days," said Mr. Connie Mack.

BECK & GREGG NINE BEATS FORT MAC

Beck and Gregg Hardware company's strong baseball team defeated the Fort McPherson crew, 7-2, in a fast game played on the Fort diamond Saturday afternoon.

Manager Banks, of the Infantrymen, used three pitchers in an attempt to stop the attack of the visitors. Valentine finally turned the trick, and kept the Beck and Gregg boys rather quiet from the time he went in until the end of the game.

Cole and Davis worked on the mound for the winners and let the Doughboys down with a total of eight hits. Their teammates harvested nine bingles at the bat.

Don Armstrong Wins Golf Title

Biloxi, Miss., April 2.—(AP)—Don Armstrong, Aurora, Ill., and Mrs. Dalton Reymond, Baton Rouge, La., hold the men's and women's championships for the Gulf States as the result of their wins in the finals of the Gulf States tournament here today.

Armstrong won his match over Bob Gormley, Mississippi state champion, one up after 37 holes. The title passes to Armstrong from Fred Lemprecht, of New Orleans, who had held it for four years, but who was eliminated in an earlier round.

The match between Armstrong and Gormley was close at the end of the first 18 holes, when Gormley had his opponent two up. Gormley kept the lead in the afternoon round until the last four holes when Armstrong came from behind and tied him.

Mrs. Reymond won over Miss Marion Turple, New Orleans, defender of the Gulf States title, with a score of 4 and 3. The players were even at the 11th hole when Mrs. Reymoned took the lead.

Monroe A-M Wins Over Baby Jackets

Red Barron's Monroe Aggies came back strong Saturday afternoon and defeated the Baby Jacket baseball team, 8-4, after tasting the bitter dregs of defeat the day before to the tune of 7-4.

Mundorff's cohorts were unable to hit in the pinches the offerings of Talley and Pat Barron, brother of the illustrous redheads of Tech fame. Errors were plentiful at the hands of the Frosh while Barron's team failed to make a bobble during the entire fracas.

Hutcheson, Frink, Camel and Mizell were the big stars for the Frosh while Barron, Jones, Miller and Ellis played best for Monroe.

The nine hits of the Aggies, aided by the errors of the Tech Frosh, enabled them to collect the greatest number of runs despite the fact that Mundorff's charges collected 12 bingles.

Fulton Hi Splits Two-Game Series

Barnesville, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—Fulton High of Atlanta and Gordon institute split a two-game series here, Fulton winning Friday afternoon by the score of 7 to 5, while the Gordon boys shut out the visitors, 1 to 0, in a close game this afternoon.

This afternoon's game was one of the prettiest and best seen here in some time. Both pitchers were almost invincible and the few hits they yielded were few and far between.

Tech Loses to Aggies---Georgia Beats Alabama

Jackets Lose Third Straight to Aggies

BY HOWARD EATON.

Tech Yellow Jackets fell before the heavy hitting Aggie team from Mississippi Saturday afternoon for the second time in as many days, 7-5. The ability to hit Carney's offerings in the pinches, ably assisted by several miscues at the hands of the Jacket infielders, proved the downfall of the strong Jacket nine.

The Jackets could not hit in the pinches, although they succeeded in getting McGehee out of the box in the third after scoring one run in the first and two more in the second. Brister, who relieved him, had little trouble with Coach Clay's boys, allowing them only four hits and two runs in the eight.

Coach Clay's charges started out early in the game by scoring one in the first. After two men had been retired, Angley drew a walk and scored on Crowley's double to left field. In the second frame Tech annexed two more runs, making their total three in the first two innings and were unable to cross the plate again until the eighth inning. Moreland doubled to left field. Carney drew a free ticket to first and Smith singled advancing Moreland and Carney. Yoeman sacrificed Moreland home. Angley hit a hot one to third and Carney was safe at the plate on Bates' error.

No more scoring was done by the Jackets until the eighth when Moreland doubled to center field. Carney struck out. Smith flied out to center field. Yoeman hit a hot one to McClelland at second, who made a good stop of the ball but threw it in the dirt to the first baseman, who let it get through him and Moreland and Yoeman advanced a base and scored on a line drive to right field off Angley's bat.

Aggies Score Four Runs.

It looked like Tech's game until the third inning when the Aggies broke loose and scored four runs before being retired. McGehee was safe on Moreland's error. Stuart singled to right and Bates was safe on Crowley's throw to Moreland in an attempt to catch Stuart at second. Moreland dropped the ball. McClelland singled to right field and McGehee and Stuart scored on the play. Stuart was hurt sliding into the plate and was removed from the game with a broken foot. Thompson hit a hot one to Crowley, who made a perfect throw to the plate, but Angley dropped the ball and Bates was safe. The Aggies failed to score again until the eighth when three more runs were annexed by them to put the game on ice for them.

Errors by the Jackets were a big factor in their defeat but their inability to hit the offerings of Brister caused them to drop the second game and the series to the Aggies. Moreland and Angley were the big guns with the willow for the Jackets, each collecting two hits, both of Moreland's swats being of the extra-base variety.

Brister pitched a steady game after relieving McGehee, striking out four men and allowing four hits and two runs. Stuart, McClelland, Nash and Priester played wall for the Aggies.

Tech's Jacket nine journeys down to Auburn next Friday for a two-game series with Auburn.

VIRGINIA NINE TO ENCOUNTER WILLIAMSTEAM

University, Va., April 2.—Dartmouth's track squad and the Williams baseball squad will share Lambeth field with the teams of the University of Virginia through most of next week. The nines of Williams and Virginia will play next Thursday and Friday.

The Virginia track and field men have a week of rest before going to Atlanta next Saturday for the Georgia Tech relays. But Dartmouth's team will not be able to train all week without interruptions, for other engagements have been scheduled in the state. But the squad will have at least four days here next week.

The Williams baseball squad of 16 men is expected to reach here tomorrow night. Three days will be spent in practice on Lambeth field. After meeting the Virginians in two contests the squad will leave for Massachusetts again next Friday night.

Members of the two visiting squads will be quartered in the fraternity houses of the university, for most of the Greek letter organizations have offered rooms to the athletic association. It was first planned to lodge them in the sleeping quarters in the Memorial gymnasium, and some of the men will probably be quartered there.

Dean Walker, captain of the Williams nine, and six of his teammates won letters on the diamond last spring. After leaving Virginia the team will have a week of rest in Williamstown before the next game, April 16, with Rensselar Tech.

Captain Johnny Hushion, of the Virginians, was spiked during the last play of the victory over Bucknell on Wednesday, when he tagged a runner on third base. But the cut is healing nicely and it is not expected to give him trouble in the games ahead.

Garnett, a member of last year's freshman nine, has been a sensation at the bat in the two games played, having secured a triple and four singles in seven times at bat. Cardwell has hit safely four times out of seven.

Coach Neale shifted the batting order for the Bucknell game with such success that it will probably be unchanged when Williams is played. Outside of the box the other eight positions are divided equally between veterans of former seasons and men who were freshmen a year ago.

Walt Misses First Opener In 16 Years

New York, April 2.—(AP)—Thought of opening nominations for major league pitching burdens has occupied managers as the baseball scene shifts from south to east.

One change in the program has been ordered by fate. Walter Johnson, who has pitched the opener in 16 of his 21 years with the Washington Senators, is out for a matter of weeks on account of an injury and Stanley Coveleskie will draw the first assignment.

His opponent probably will be Bryan Harriss, long and lean star of the Boston Red Sox. Cleveland will send Emil Levsen against Chicago with the likely White Sox selection Ted Blankenship.

Connie Mack definitely has decided to order left handed fast ones and curves, only slightly less fast, delivered by Bob Grove against the Yankees, who will doubtless call on Urban Shocker to toss his spit ball opening day.

The St. Louis Browns will lose no time in calling on "Sad Sam" Jones to earn his money and the former Yankee is in a receptive mood to do the first pitching of the year for Dan Howley. Earl Whitehill, southpaw, has an edge in Detroit calculations for the day.

John J. McGraw has made no announcement, but Burleigh Grimes is being prepared for some game and it may be the first. It would not be surprising to see Grover Cleveland Alexander start the season for the Cardinals. He is equal to it after his busiest spring in years. All the Brooklyn pitchers are in shape and Wilbert Robinson can draw a name out of a hat if he chooses, with Dazzy Vance a likely selection. The same situation applies to the Cincinnati Reds with Pat Donahue the probable choice.

The Philadelphia Nationals will be represented by Carlson, their ace, and the Chicago Cubs may choose between Guy Bush and Charlie Root. The Pirates may warm up both Ray Kremer and Lee Meadows but Boston's choice is likely to be Elmer Hearn, ready now.

He Left It.

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 2.—(AP)—August Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati Nationals, said on his arrival today from West Palm Beach, Fla., that salary negotiations with Hugh Critz, infielder, are at an end. He denied reports that Critz had been offered $12,500 a year, saying Critz had been offered $10,000 and that "it was a case of take it or leave it, and he left it."

Coach in Jail

Raleigh, N. C., April 2.—(AP) Otto Wood, champion cross-country man of North Carolina, has been chosen as new head of the North Carolina State college cross-country team, in the April fool edition of the Texnician, weekly newspaper of the college.

Due to this great ability in nationwide work on the wide path Wood was expressly thought the best for the job. Wood is in state prison after three escapes.

State college expects to have a good cross-country team as soon as the new coach is allowed to leave his present residence under care of the state of North Carolina, it is commented.

N. G. A. C. NINE LOOKS FOR BIG SEASON IN 1927

Dahlonega, Ga., April 2.—Rain and bad weather in general has given the baseball squad of Georgia State college very little opportunity to display its ability on the diamond, but with the coming of April the weather man promises better weather, and with this in view, hopes are high for a team stronger than ever before in the Bluejacket camp.

The opening games of the season against the Young Harris aggregation, proved to those who saw the games that Coach Bush has a team that wields a wicked hickory, one far superior to that of last year. Both games were won by substantial margins, the first ending 12-3 and the last ending 6-1.

First base is the greatest problem of the coaches. Walker, last year's receiver, handled this position in fine style during the opening games, but McAbee's catching was off form, and walker has been shifted to his old position behind the bat. McAbee, being a heavy hitter, is being tried at first base. When a man is found to play this position creditably the team should start functioning in midseason form. The infield, with Whelchel at second, Stroupe at short, and Rice at third, all letter men from last year, is already getting down to real business. Rice and Stroupe are exceptionally good hitters, and this strengthens the batting order considerably. Lifsey, a reserve infielder, is doing his part by galloping over the entire infield when there is a vacancy.

The outfield is one of the smoothest and strongest seen on the campus in several years. Knight, last year's left fielder, is up to his old tricks and besides this, is hitting the pellet as an outfielder should. Center field finds Captain "Count" Read, veteran of three years, traveling the garden in splendid style when he is not doing mound duty, and right field is considered the strongest spot on the field, for Ragsdale, former Dallas Hi star, is putting in exceptionally good talent.

With last year's varsity men on hand, and with two newcomers who have displayed varsity ability, the pitching staff is looking above the average. Captain Read is the only southpaw on the squad, but he has turned in several creditable games in practice, and will see duty in the coming games. Malloch and Kennemore, newcomers, pitched against the Young Harris team last week-end, and both turned in wins. Malloch allowed only one hit off his delivery during his eight innings in the box.

Petrels Beat Clemson, 5 to 1, Taking Series

BY ALTON REDFEARN.

Behind the excellent pitching of Joe Hutson, a master craftsman when it comes to fast balls, the Oglethorpe baseballers made it two in a row over Clemson Saturday afternoon when they trimmed the South Carolinians in a one-sided and loosely played game, 5 to 1.

Hutson, like Vaughn, is playing his first year as a varsity pitcher. Last year he had worlds of stuff, but was utterly lacking in control. Coach Anderson, however, seems to have corrected this defect and Hutson should develop into a great pitcher before he graduates. The Clemson batters touched his offerings for but four safe blows, all of them being singles.

Because of the terrible gale blowing over Hermance field, the game was practically devoid of sensational plays. However, Ike Cousins, Petrel center fielder, made a beautiful shoe string catch of a line drive in the sixth inning. Outside of this play, though, nothing was done that would offer anything in the way of thrills. The ragged fielding of both teams may also be partly attributed to unfavorable weather conditions.

Secure But Nine Hits.

Both teams together secured but nine hits, and no one player was successful in getting two hits. Oglethorpe's hits were bunched, which accounts for the huge difference in the scores. Chesnut, of the Petrels, was the only performer to get an extra base wallop, making his only hit good for three bags.

The Birds started their offense rolling in the third stanza when they scored three runs. Hutson, first up, walked. Terrell sacrificed him to second, and Taliaferro looked over four bad ones. Massey beat out an infield hit, filling the bases. Shepherd singled to left, scoring Hutson and Taliaferro, and taking second on the throw to the platter. Cousins singled to center, scoring Shepherd from second, and thus ending the scoring for this stanza.

Petrels Score Again.

The fifth inning found the Oglethorpians making two more runs, which ended the scoring as far as the Petrels were concerned. Shepherd walked, and he pilfered the second sack. Cousins was an easy out, pitcher to first. Chesnut tripled to center and Shepherd scored. Justus flied out to right and Chesnut tagged up and raced home for the last Petrel score.

Clemson's lone run came in the eighth inning. After one man was down, Herron was safe at first on Taliaferro's error. It was a wild heave to first. Sexton singled to right and Herron took third. He scored a moment later when Dunlap beat out a scratch hit to short.

Macon, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—With his entire varsity team of last year lost through graduation, Coach E. E. Folk, Mercer tennis mentor, will have a problem in keeping up the reputation of Mercer's tennis record.

At present there are 11 members of the tennis club, but this number will probably be doubled within the next two weeks, and active competition for ratings in the club will start soon.

Mercer's first meet is scheduled for April 30, with Wake Forest, and will be staged in Macon. Six matches will be played, four of them being singles and the other two being doubles. During the last two years neither Mercer nor Wake Forest has been able to score a decisive victory, both teams having won three matches each year.

Since Folk took charge of Mercer's tennis team, three years ago, the Bears have gained fame on the court. Both last year and the year before the Mercer doubles team, composed of Andy and Emory Heyward, won the state championship, defeating Emory, Tech and Georgia. Last year the team took a trip through North and South Carolina, playing five colleges and winning from four of them. In the S. I. A. A. tournament held in Macon the Bear netmen won second place, being defeated by Furman for first honors.

Mercer will enter its team again this year in the S. I. A. A. tournament, which is scheduled to be played in Birmingham during the latter part of April.

Epworthers Leave For Birmingham

The Atlanta Epworth league all-star basketball team will travel in deluxe style when it departs next Saturday morning at 7 o'clock for Birmingham on the Kansas City Special, riding in a special Pullman.

Since the Southern railroad has announced an excursion rate of $3.50 round trip to Birmingham on April 9, which is the same day of the game, many followers of the team have signified their intention of making the trip with the team. The association has made arrangements with the Southern railroad to run as many special cars as are needed to carry the Epworth leaguers. In order to ride in one of these special cars it will be necessary to notify union headquarters, 6 West Alabama street, at once.

A special meeting of the association will be held next Wednesday at 1101 Georgia Savings Bank building, at 6 o'clock. All leagues intending to enter the volley ball league are requested to have a representative present. Also plans for the track meet will be discussed.

Another Record

Miami Beach, Fla., April 2. (AP)—Gar Wood, veteran motor speed boat builder and pilot, has broken his own salt water record over a mile straight-away course, it was announced today by Odis Porter, A. A. A. timer. The average for the two fastest laps, both with and against the wind, was 80.42 miles per hour. The tests were made yesterday afternoon in the Miss America V, with only the timers and a few of Commodore Wood's friends looking on.

ST. PAUL TEAMS WIN CAGE CUPS

The St. Paul Epworth League boys' and girls' basketball teams were judged the best sports in the Atlanta Epworth League Union Athletic association and will receive the Claude S. Bennett "Sportsmanship" cups.

At the beginning of the season Mr. Bennett, president of the Atlanta Epworth League union, announced that he would give a beautiful silver loving cup to both the boys' and girls' basketball team that was considered the best sports during the basketball season.

The referees, umpires, score keepers, timers, locker room keepers, gate keepers, president, vice president and treasurer of the athletic association were named as judges. Each official was given a special blank form in which he was to keep all records of sportsmanlike conduct. At the end of the season these reports were collected and a committee appointed to compile the reports. The judging was very rigid and included even the conduct of the spectators attending the games.

The officials of the association feel that the St. Paul Epworth League has made a remarkable record in winning both cups. St. Paul has set a high standard for athletics in the association and has made for itself a record far above the average.

'BAMA PLAYS 'GATOR, INDIAN BALL TOSSERS

BY ARNOLD FINNEFROCK.

University, Ala., April 2.—The University of Florida and Cleveland ball clubs will provide the opposition for the Alabama Crimsons this week, with the 'Gators opening a two-day series on Wednesday and being followed on Friday by the Indians.

Reports emanating from 'Gatorland are to the effect that the Florida diamond combination this year is the best in the history of the school, its strong point being a five-man hurling staff, which is said to be unexcelled by any other conference team. Be that as it may, the Floridians will need them all when they meet the Tuscaloosans, who have been hitting quite timely of late.

Friday has been selected as 'A' day, and, with the entire day being declared as a holiday, quite a large crowd is expected to view the numerous sport events scheduled to be held on Denny field. The baseball game with the Cleveland Indians in the afternoon is to climax the day's activities. The game with the Indians has become an annual affair, and because of the Sewell brothers in the lineup, creates no little interest in this section.

Bulldogs Turn Tables On Alabama, Win 7-3

BY ARNOLD FINNERFROCH.

University, Ala., April 2.—Hitting opportunely behind the good pitching of the diminutive Stewart, the Georgia Bulldogs brought a losing streak that had extended over three games to a halt by handing the Alabama Crimson a 7-3 beating here today. The game was a slow and listless affair, with neither club showing the same dash and fire that characterized Friday's battle.

Alabama jumped off to a two-run lead in the opening frame, failing upon Stewart's southpaw slants for five hits before he could get warmed up. After this inauspicious start, Stewart applied the brakes and held the Crimson sluggers in check, save in the fifth, when the giant Pepper drove a triple to deep center and scored when the throw to third got away from Sherlock.

Tom Nash opened the second inning by smashing a Babe Ruth wallop to the scoreboard in center, accounting for Georgia's initial counter. Two errors, a walk, and two hits brought in two more tallies to send the visitors out in front.

Break Deadlock.

In the sixth, with the score deadlocked, Johnson walked after one was out in the Georgia half. Stewart skied to right, but Chaffin doubled to center, scoring Johnson. Chaffin scored a moment later when Typton allowed the throw to the plate to get by him. Two hits and an error enabled the Bulldogs to push two more tallies across in the final canto, to put the game on ice.

Campbell, the Crimson moundsman, was wild and materially aided in his own downfall. His infield failed him at crucial moments. Pepper, Crimson left fielder, was the hitting star of the afternoon, getting two triples and a double out of five trips to the plate. Shiver, Chaffin and Sherlock hit well for Georgia, each garnering two blows.

Promoter Claims Paolino's Money

New York, April 2.—(AP)—Jack Curley, fight promoter, today applied for a warrant to attach the ring earnings of Paulino Uzcudun, the "Spanish woodchoper," who won a ten-round bout from Tom Heeney, Irish-New Zealander, last night.

Curley claimed Paulino owes him $2,000 under an agreement entered into November 24, last, through which Curley was to act as agent for the fighter and receive ten per cent of the woodchopper's earnings.

He said he advanced Paulino $700 for his trip from Buenos Aires to New York and estimated the fighter had received about $20,000 from boxing exhibitions.

Matches For Thursday Night Show Are Completed

Daviscourt To Appear In Preliminary Match

Joe Stecher, world's heavyweight champion wrestler, vs. Jimmy Londos, Greek titleholder and leading contender for the world's championship.

Rough Richard Daviscourt vs. Jack McCarthy.

That is the complete wrestling menu for the show at the city auditorium Thursday night, and judging from Matchmaker John Contos' attitude Saturday he is very well pleased with the bill that he has arranged for Atlanta fans. Contos claims that the card presents more nationally recognized grapplers than any he has offered here.

Contos closed the Daviscourt-McCarthy bout Saturday, thus assuring the fans a fine preliminary card. Daviscourt was bent on temporarily retiring from the game, but Matchmaker Contos prevailed on Rough Richard to return to Atlanta for the scrap with McCarthy, whom Contos claims is just as tough as Rough Richard.

Trained Champion.

McCarthy is a former sparring partner of Wayne Munn, who held the world's heavyweight wrestling championship for a short time. Prior to beating Lewis "Big" Munn had been trained by McCarthy, who in addition to knowing all of the fine points of the game, is capable of retaliating when his opponent oversteps the bounds.

Atlanta fans have shown considerable interest in the announcement that the younger Zbyszko will be on the card, particularly as they know that he is meeting a tough grappler in Browning. The latter was defeated here recently by Paul Jones and will seize upon the match with Wladek as an excellent opportunity to regain lost prestige.

Wladek, who has had the benefit of being trained by his famous brother, Stanislaus, is one of the most powerful men in the game. He weights around 230 pounds and excells in the use of headlocks, which he employs in most of his victories.

Wladek has made but one Atlanta appearance in the last two years, but that was sufficient to make quite an impression on the Atlanta fans. Zbyszko is one of the few grapplers who has not had a crack at the championship in the last few years. He very likely will climax his ring appearance here by a ringside challenge to Stecher.

However, that does not mean anything as Zbyszko has been hurling defies at Stecher ever since the Nebraska boy regained the title. For some reason or other he has seen fit to ignore them.

Londos in Training.

Londos, who is expected to arrive here Monday, has been in New York, where he put in considerable time training for the match with Stecher. It is the first time that the Greek star has wrestled the champion in the last eight months and, according to his own story, he intends to make the most of this opportunity.

The match between Londos and Stecher here early in 1926 was the most spectacular ever staged in Atlanta and from all reports Londos has added skill and strength, while Stecher has done no better than hold his own.

Some idea of the respect the champion entertains for the Greek challenger is reflected from the fact that the former insisted that Matchmaker Contos guarantee him $5,000 for the match here Thursday night. Contos must post a certified check for that amount early this week and it is likely that the check will be turned over to the Atlana Boxing commission for safekeeping.

Tickets for the match have been placed on sale at Chess' place, the Piedmont Hatters and also at the Piedmont hotel cigar counter. Contos reports that he has had several out-of-town orders for tickets and that he will be glad to fill any mail orders that may be sent. They should be addressed to him in care of the Piedmont hotel.

MISS ZINKE WINS CROWN AT AUGUSTA

Augusta, Ga., April 2.—(AP)—Miss Clara Zinke, of Cincinnati, won the women's singles championship of the South Atlantic tennis tournament here today by defeating Miss Elise Cox, of Asheville, N. C., in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2.

Later the Cincinnati girl paired with George Lott, University of Chicago star, to triumph in the mixed doubles event over Miss Cox and Fred Baggs, New York, 6-0, 8-6.

William T. Tilden, II, who won the men's singles championship yesterday by beating Lott, took the doubles title today with his young protege, Sandy Weiner, of Philadelphia. They defeated Lott and Baggs in a fast four-set match, 6-8, 6-2, 6-3, 6-3.

Fort Mac Plays Whittier Mills

The Twenty-second Infantry team meets the strong baseball nine of the Beck & Gregg company Sunday on the Fort diamond, the game starting at 1.45 p. m. The Fort team will line-up as follows:

Simpson or Hunter, first base; Grimes, second base; Fudge or Lassiter, shortstop; Banks, third base; Woodward, catcher; Gunter, center field; Johns of Lassiter, right field; Smith or Tedesco, left field; Campbell, Hill, Colson, Waldrip or Edwards, pitch.

The infantry is officially opening its baseball season Saturday when the Soldiers meet the strong Beck & Gregg Hardware company team on the Fort diamond. The game will be called at 2:30 p. m., with Manager Banks of the Fort team putting in his regular line-up and his best pitchers.

Chicks Secure Giant Player

Memphis, April 2.—(Special.)—Elwood "Mike" Smith, young outfielder and former William and Mary college star, was turned over to the Chicks by the Giants here today. Smith joined the Giants late last season, fresh from college. He is now with the Giants' second team in North Carolina and will report here Wednesday.

McGraw highly praises the youngster whom he sent to the Chicks under optional agreement.

Wee Scot Succeeds Mehlhorn as Cash Tourney Champion

Pinehurst, N. C., April 2.—(AP)—Bobby Cruickshank, diminutive New York professional, has garnered an unofficial golf title—champion of the 1926-27 cash tournament circuit. He succeeds "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, the Texan.

During the past winter, the little Scot has probably played in more tournaments than any other leading professional and found the way almost paved with gold and tiles, netting him more than $11,000 and four championships.

The ordinary golf dub will marvel to learn that Cruickshank in winning the titles carded only three strokes too many to have a record of even fours.

He took the golden Los Angeles open with a 282, going 10 strokes higher to capture the Texas open at San Antonio with a 292. At Hot Springs the little Scottish golfer gained the South Central crown with 296, a relatively high score for tournaments this winter, while here he beat Walter Hagen to the north and south purse with a 285.

With 72 holes of play in each tournament, Cruickshank therefore negotiated the 288 holes in 1,155 strokes. If he had played them in even fours he would have taken 1,152 strokes. His tournament average for the four competitions was 288 3-4 strokes.

The southern open in Atlanta was won by Bobby Jones, amateur, with 281.

Auburn Plainsmen Beat Tulane, 6-0

Auburn, Ala., April 2.—(AP)—The Auburn Plainsmen continued to sweep aside all conference baseball competition when they downed the Tulane Greenies here today by a 6-to-0 score. It was the fifth straight for the Tigers, four over conference opponents, and the other being over the Birmingham-Southern leaguers.

Potter and Lee were superb on the mound, allowing the Crescent Citians only five hits, while Porter was tapped timely for eight.

Sankey, Auburn shortstop, led the batting parade, with three out of four, one a double.

Alabama Wins.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., April 2.—The University of Alabama defeated Birmingham-Southern here today in a dual track meet, the score being 64-52. A slow track worked against the setting of fast time in the running events.

Batesville Loses to Cicero Boys in Finals of National Meet.

Chicago, April 2.—(AP)—Morton High school, of Cicero, Ill., won the high school basketball championship of the nation tonight from Batesville, Ark., by a two-point margin, 18 to 16.

The brawny team from the Chicago suburb, composed of lads named Kawalski, Rondienella, Nystrom, Rezabek and Fencl, ground down the Arkansas quintet in the final game of the tournament and won from a team whose bitter gameness was not enough to offset the burly pace set by the victors.

The Carpenter brother strove valiantly against the Cicero team and with Pickren led the southerners' attack, but long shots by Rezabek, of Cicero, and a pair of easy ones by Nystrom, came opportunely to turn back the first serious threat the south made at a national basket crown.

Batesville led for a few moments at the start, but was not beaten until the final gun, for it rattled long shot after long shot off the backboard in the last seconds of play in a vain effort to tie the score.

ANNUAL TECH CAKERACE WON BY WOOLFOLK

In the annual cross country or cake race held by the Tech Track society Saturday afternoon, Freshman Woolfolk won easily from a large field of entries, clipping almost a minute off the old record. His time was 20:29.

Taking the lead after passing out of the large gate at the north end of Grant Field, he was never headed during the entire struggle that lasted over approximately a distance of three and one-half miles. The winner will be presented with a beautiful gold medal, while each entry that finished in the first 125 will also be rewarded with a large cake each, donated by young ladies of Atlanta.

All freshmen were compelled to run and, in addition to the several hundred freshmen, a large group of upper classmen also participated. It is considered quite an honor to win the cross-country race held annually at Tech and is a feat that is hard to accomplish.

VIENNA HIGH HAS UNUSUAL CAGE RECORD

Vienna, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—The Vienna High School basketball team which went down to defeat Friday night in the national tournament now being held at Chicago by the Cicero High School team of Illinois, has one of the most unusual records of any team represented in the tournament.

Vienna High School has a total registration of 94 students, of which two-thirds are girls. Of the remaining, Coach J. H. Jenkins, who is also superintendent of the high school, had only twelve boys who were eligible to make the team, and of these twelve boys, ten are now in Chicago with the team. Several members of the team are playing their first year.

The team has captured three tournaments in the south this past season, winning the Middle-Georgia association tournament held at Montezuma; the Cotton States tourney, held at Auburn, Ala., and the Georgia State tournament held at Athens. Two members of the squad were selected for all-southern honors at the Alabama tournament, Captain Joe Campbell, left forward, and Theo Raines, center.

During the season the team played 26 games and only lost two, one to Montezuma early in the season and the other was dropped to the Mercer Ramblers, composed of students from Mercer university in Macon.

The school has a faculty composed of five teachers, including Coach Jenkins, J. L. Carlton, Hartwell, Ga., is principal of the school.

NO CHANGE IN MERCER COACH STAFF

BY GEORGE CLARKE.

Macon, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—No change will occur in Mercer university's 1927-28 coaching system.

This announcement was made here Saturday by the athletic board of control.

Coach Moore, who came to Mercer last fall, will remain as head football coach. Moore has developed good teams for Mercer in both football and basketball. Last fall Mercer lost the S. I. A. A. championship by a margin of one touchdown, when Citadel scored a 12-7 victory over the Bears on a fluke play in the last minute of play. Mercer defeated Florida, Howard and Oglethorpe, lost to Georgia and Citadel, and played tie games with Paris Island Marines and Furman. In basketball Mercer ran through a fairly successful season and won second place in the S. I. A. A. tournament in Charleston, S. C.

Coach Mosley will again act as athletic director of the university, with Johnson having charge of freshman basketball and baseball, and Blair having charge of freshmen football. Mosley will coach the Bears in baseball.

Slowing Up.

The world is going slower
As it wanders in its track.
And here's an item proving it,
"Croquet is coming back."

WRESTLERS COMING HERE

The gentleman about to stand on his head is Champion Joe Stecher, who will meet Jimmy Londos in the main match of the Thursday night wrestling show to be staged at the auditorium. He is applying the figure "4" scissors hold on some unlucky victim. The handsome bone-crusher standing on the right is Jim Browning, well known to Atlanta fans, having defeated Rough Richard Daviscourt here. Browning will meet Zybszko in one of the preliminary matches. Jimmy Londos is the smiling gentleman in the lower lefthand corner, and Rough Richard Daviscourt is shown next to the little Greek champion. Daviscourt will meet Jack McCarthy in the other preliminary match. This show promises to be the best ever staged here.

Ban Johnson Ready for Job

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Excelsior Springs, Mo., April 2.—Ban Johnson has recovered his health and announced that he was in old time fighting trim.

When the 61-year-old president of the American league left here for Chicago two months ago suffering from neuritis, he made a wager with John Ehmke, a close friend who resides here, that he would return later to remain until cured. Johnson met Ehmke and collected the wager.

The baseball official came here late in January and for several days was confined to his bed in the Ehmke home.

"I am a new man," Johnson said. "I feel like a boy again."

Johnson said he had not decided when he will return to Chicago.

ONE BIG MEET FOR SWEETSER THIS YEAR

Asheville, N. C., April 2.—Jess Sweetser, who won the British amateur golf championship last year, will not return to England this summer to defend his title, he said here today.

He told friends he will enter only one major tournament, the national amateur championship. He was prevented from competing in this event last year by a break down following his victory in the British amateur event.

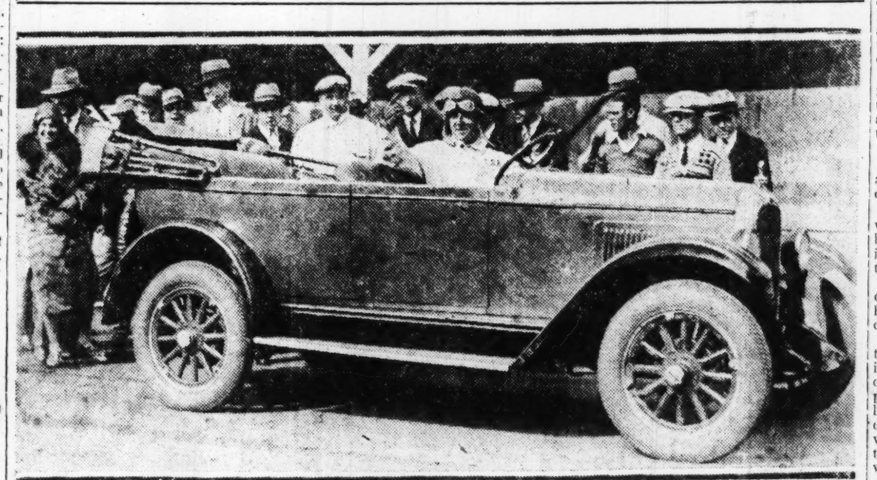

Sweetser came to Asheville last fall and has been recuperating in the mountains of western North Carolina.

Preparations Made For Big 10 Meet

Madison, Wis., April 2.—With the announcement of the program of events for the Big Ten outdoor track and field meet to be held here May 25 and 27, plans are already being made to entertain hosts of celebrities who will be attracted by the games and the coaches' meetings that have been scheduled.

Director George Little, University of Wisconsin, who with A. A. Stagg and Major John Griffith, has been appointed by the conference directors to manage the meet, is busily engaged with committee appointments. It is the wish of the Badger athletic chief to afford the visitors an entertaining and varied program during their three days' stay in Madison.

Travis Jackson Rests Normally

Memphis, Tenn., April 2.—(AP)—Following a quiet day of progress, Travis Jackson, shortstop of the New York Giants, was resting normally tonight in the Methodist hospital here after an appendicitis operation last night.

Travis appeared cheerful throughout the day during his waking hours and was regarded as "doing well," according to his attendants, who continued to believe his recovery would be reasonably rapid. The player was visited today by his mother and other relatives from his home in Arkansas. He will be out for sometime.

Detroit Selected.

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—Detroit has been selected as the starting point for this year's balloon race for the James Gordon Bennett trophy. The race will begin July 4.

Heydler Will Ban Rajah If Stock Is Not Sold

New York, April 2.—(United News.)—Originating as a financial difference between ball player and employer, the "Hornsby case" has developed into a complicated situation that threatens the stability of the National league.

The situation, which might be considered by a fan to be just one of those holdout things, is taken so seriously by John A. Heydler, president of the National league, that he today called a special meeting of the club owners to be held in Pittsburgh next Friday.

Heydler, at this special meeting, will ask the club owners to decide if the "unwritten laws" of baseball give him the right to rule that Rogers Hornsby cannot play for any club other than the St. Louis Cardinals as long as he owns stock in the St. Louis club.

If the club owners, including Sam Breadon, Hornsby's former employer, cannot bring about a settlement of the dispute the case will have to go into the civil courts and therein is the threatening situation.

"Everything that possibly can be done will be done to settle the Hornsby case without having it taken to court or appealed to the commissioner's office," President Heydler said today in an exclusive interview with the United Press.

Very Complicated.

"The case is very complicated," Heydler said. "I have decided to instruct my umpires to rule Hornsby off the field in every game of the regular schedule in which he appears with the Giants if he has not at that time disposed of his St. Louis stock.

"John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, has stated that he will seek an injunction to restrain any interference with Hornsby's services on the grounds that the constitution and by-laws of the league do not vest me with that presidential authority.

"I will admit that I am not, in so many words, vested with that authority but I do contend that there are 'unwritten laws' of baseball that are observed religiously. For instance, there is no clause in the constitution to prevent one club owner from having a financial interest in another club but the 'unwritten law' against syndicate baseball is iron bound.

Injunction Probable.

"I will admit also that the New York club might secure an injunction which would permit Hornsby to play with the Giants until the court had decided the case.

"But here the serious complication arises—suppose that several weeks, more or less, of the playing season had passed before the court decided and that the decision was given in my favor. All of the games in which Hornsby played could be protested and you can imagine the tangle that would result in deciding what was to be done with those games."

Another possible complication was brought up when it was mentioned that an easy way out of the situation would be to call off the trade which sent Hornsby from St. Louis to New York for Frank Frisch and Jimmy Ring.

"I am positive that that cannot and will not be done," Heydler said. "It would disrupt the personnel of practically every club in the league because practically every trade, sale and deal that was made during the off-season had at least an indirect bearing on that St. Louis-New York transaction.

Try and Do It.

"Sending Hornsby back to St. Louis, regardless of the moral effect it would have on the players would give Cincinnati a chance to call off the Kelly-Roush deal, New York to ask Henline back from Brooklyn and so many other problems that makes one dizzy to think of them.

"This Hornsby case is simply a difference between two parties which is threatening the interests and the investments of seven other parties. The differences in this case cannot be settled over long distance telephones or in newspaper columns and I feel sure if we can get together around a table they can be adjusted with satisfaction to all parties concerned.

"Hornsby, as a New York player, a former St. Louis player and manager and a minority stockholder in the St. Louis club, has support for his stand that he will not dispose of his stock at a sacrifice. Sam Breadon, as president and majority stockholder of the St. Louis club, also has arguments in his favor.

Settle In Conference.

"In my opinion, the whole case would be settled in a conference which would decide what would be a fair price for Hornsby's St. Louis stock and what additional compensation he deserved as the manager of the St. Louis world's champions last year."

When Hornsby accepted the management of the St. Louis club he was under a contract and he did not receive any additional salary for acting as the manager.

Heydler said the story that Hornsby had not paid for his St. Louis stock and that it was a bonus gift was not correct.

"Mr. Breadon went on the notes by which Hornsby received the money to buy the stock but, according to the information at my hand, Hornsby met the notes and the interest.

"In the public discussion of this case, like in other similar cases, it has been said that organized baseball considers itself a law unto itself.

"But baseball laws are not bigger than the state or the government. For instance, as far as baseball rules are concerned, Sunday baseball can be played in Philadelphia and we would like to see Sunday baseball in Philadelphia, but when a test of the law was made last year in Philadelphia the courts ruled that Sunday baseball was against the law.

"What I have said is merely in support of my action and is only the opinion of an individual. I am not taking the case too arbitrarily on my shoulders and I want the club owners of the league to decide."

"GOTTA HAVE SOMETHING"—HORNSBY.

Memphis, Tenn., April 2.—(United News.)—"If the St. Louis club wants to get my stock without paying me cash let it trade me the Houston club of the Texas league," Rogers Hornsby, second baseman of the New York Giants, said here today.

In these few words Hornsby stated his case while the National league club owners were making arrangements to meet in Pittsburgh next week, at the call of their president, to settle the Hornsby case.

"I have 1167 shares in the St. Louis club and the St. Louis club controls minor league clubs in Houston, Syracuse, Fort Worth, Danville and Austin.

"The suggestion that I should accept $60 a share for my stock never will be accepted by me. I think it is worth $105 a share and I have received an offer of $80 a share from New York brokers.

"I am willing to be fair and if the St. Louis club wants to be fair we will call it square and I will take the Houston club."

GRAY TIES NICHOLSON AT GUN CLUB

Gulf-To-Coast Golfer Missing; Folks Worried

Mobile, Ala., April 2.—(AP)—Doe Grahame, the Mobile boy who is driving a golf ball to the Pacific coast, has dropped from sight somewhere in Texas, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Grahame, of Crichton, are worried over his safety. Doe was in the habit of writing or telegraphing his parents every day or so, and kept in touch with the Mobile Register, but since March 22, when he telegraphed from Houston, Texas, nothing has been heard from him.

That Doe and his companion, "Happy" Kirby, who is volunteering as caddy, are languishing in jail in some Texas town is one theory advanced. But, theories or no theories, the fact remains that Doe hasn't been heard from in more than ten days.

Grahame has attracted national attention by his spectacular bid for fame.

Pinehurst Golfers Defeat Florida

Pinehurst, N. C., April 2.—(AP)—Pinehurst golfers won the sixth annual team match against Florida for the sixth consecutive time here this afternoon by a score of 14 to 7.

Among the victorious pairs was Parker W. Whittemore, of Boston, and Richard A. Jones, of New York, former junior metropolitan champion, who defeated John Dawson and Ira Couch, who played for Belleair, Fla., two up. Whittemore's score was 70, with 13 one-putt greens.

Gardiner White, former amateur champion of the metropolitan district, and William C. Fownes, Jr., Pittsburgh, former national champion and now United States Golf association president, won two points for Pinehurst by defeating B. Warren Corkran, Palm Beach, and Fred Knight, Bellelair, former north and south champion, one up.

Daring Driver Will Climb Stone Mountain in Whippet

:: PUBLIC INVITED TO WITNESS SPECTACULAR TEST ::

One of the most daring and sensational exploits ever attempted in Atlanta will be staged at 3 o'clock this afternoon when Chick Murray, nationally-known stunt driver, will try to climb Stone mountain with a Whippet four stock car. The stunt will be free to the public and a big crowd of onlookers is scheduled to watch the daredevil pilot attempt to negotiate the steep slopes of the world's greatest rock in his stock Whippet.

The Stone mountain climb will be the third of a series of speed, power and endurance tests carried out here under auspices of Willys-Overland, Inc. In the preceding tests Mr. Murray established a new stock car record of one hour and 53 minutes from Atlanta to Macon and a dirt track record with the same car at Lakewood.

The Stone Mountain event will strain to the utmost the resource of both the pilot and his Whippet, for not only does Mr. Murray plan to climb the slippery sides of the rock where scarcely a trail is to be found, but when the top is gained he will drive his car to the bottom of the giant monolith without assistance, a supreme strain on both man and brakes.

"We'll make it—the Whippet and I," Mr. Murray said Saturday. "If anything on wheels can negotiate the terrible climb, he Whippet can."

Willys-Overland officials echoed Mr. Murray's confidence in the ability of their car to surmount the greatest rock in all the world, and joined with Mr. Murray in issuing a general invitation for the public to be present along the course and watch the test of the Whippet's power and endurance.

Let's go some place.

All agreed?

That's fine; now, where shal lit be?

Why not see the acres and acres of beautiful apple blossoms in Habersham or the flower gardens of Charleston? Both trips may be made with ease and pleasure unless the roads are wet, and even then the inconvenience of mud will not be so great as it might be to many other places that might be suggested.

Either trip will afford a feast for the eyes that can be found at no time but the spring time.

No greater sight can be found within a days round-trip drive from Atlanta than is afforded by the gorgeous apple blossoms that now cover the hills of southern Habersham county. You can drive for miles, scarcely losing sight of one of the greatest blossom spectacles to be seen anywhere.

Before you start, get a copy of The Constitution's motoring of the southern mountain section. In it you will find personally compiled motorlogs that point the way at every option, and sound a word of caution as you approach possible dangers.

From Cornelia the road is hard surfaced through Demorest to Clarksville. It passes through several orchards just as beautiful as those you will have seen by the time you reach Cornelia. If you don't care to take a basket the hotels in Gainsville, Cornelia and Clarksville will not disappoint you. They offer good old American plan dinners that are real dinners, no matter if you do say lunch.

Magnolia and Middleton Gardens near Charleston are the objective of many motorists coming to The Constitution's Travel Information Bureau. They are going to Augusta via Madison or Athens, thence to Summerville, where the right fork takes one to the Gardens and the left fork affords the best road into Charleston if your purpose is to visit the city first. These routes, as well as routes via Savannah and other points are logged in The Constitution's Atlantic Beach Motorlog. No matter how you plan your trip it shows the way. Get your copy before leaving Atlanta.

In Charleston there are many points of interest. Ask the board of trade if you seek them all. The art exhibit, the Citadel, Folly beach and many other points give you just so many more reasons for wanting to visit this historic old city that, for all its quaintness and relics of antiquity, is taking on many aspects of the thriving modern city of more recent origin.

Last Sunday the South Carolina filling stations were open. They probably will remain open in the future, but if you fill up before you leave the red clay hills of Georgia, there's nothing to worry about, for you will have an ample supply for the trip into Charleston and for a long joy ride after you arrive.

An early start and good driving will put you into Charleston the first night. A day in and around Charleston, then to Savannah for the third night and back to Atlanta via Macon will be a most enjoyable four or five-day trip.

In Savannah ask the board of trade or motor club for points of interest if you can spend some time seeing Georgia's biggest port city and her environs. Savannah is no mean place for interesting sight-seeing. There's Bonaventure with flora that cannot be passed over lightly; Tybee, Wilmington Island, Isle of Hope, Thunderbolt and what not that you should see. Make it a five-day trip and spend the extra day "doing" Savannah and you will have no regrets.

The two motorlog folders referred to in connection with these trips may be had free by personal application to the travel information bureau of The Constitution, or at many points along the routes given, as well as at the Atlanta firms listed below. If you write for either of these folders specify the one wanted, inclose 25 cents in stamps and address your letter to the travel information service of The Constitution.

DODGE ANNOUNCES NEW MODEL SIX

Detroit, March 30.—(AP)—Production of a new six-cylinder Dodge automobile, to sell for $1,650, will be begun next month, according to a statement today by Edward G. Wilmer, president of the company. The machine will be produced in a plant which has just been completed, Wilmer's statement said.

The statement follows:

"Although sales and profits during the first two months of the current year have shown a reduction as compared with the same period of the previous year, the company's earnings for this period were in excess of all interest charges, dividend requirements on its preferred stock and usual reserve for depreciation.

"Since March 1 dealer deliveries have shown a steady increase, while cars in dealers' hands have shown a constant decrease.

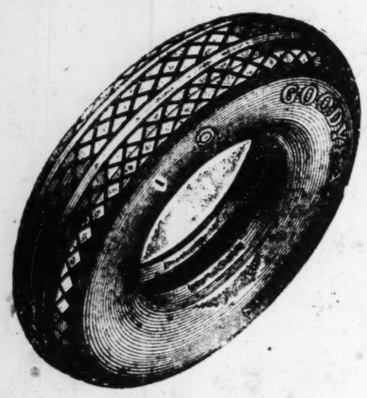

"Production of the four-cylinder car on which important improvements have been made now is 600 daily.

"The new six-cylinder job, the price of which has been announced at $1,650, will go into production next month in plant number six, just completed, and the company is already assured of enthusiastic dealer reception for the new product.

"Sales and shipment of commercial trucks continue most satisfactory."

Buick certainly ought to have a fine ball team this year. During the stove pipe league we noticed quite a number of prominent amateur ball tossers were added to their payroll.

FORD DEALERS HERE ARE READY FOR DEMONSTRATION WEEK

APRIL 2ND TO 9TH TIME FOR PUBLIC TO TEST NEW CARS

Dealers in This Territory To Participate in Move To Boost New Ford Cars.

Designation of the period from April 2 to April 9 as "demonstration week," during which time the general public will be invited to ride in and drive new Ford cars of every type has been announced by I. B. Groves, manager of the Atlanta branch of the Ford Motor company, in a communication to all dealers in the territory served by the Atlanta branch. In his letter to a prominent Ford dealer in this city, Mr. Groves declared that "we want the public to know about today's Ford car; to know the merits of the best car the Ford Motor company has ever built."

Dealers in all sections of the Atlanta branch are preparing to have everything in readiness for the big event and expect it to be one of the most successful undertakings in the long history of the Ford enterprise.

The local dealers have a number of demonstrators of every type on hand at the present time, but they are planning to make additions to their stocks and want every citizen in this community to take advantage of the opportunity to ride in and drive one of the new Ford cars. Ford dealers in this city announce that their firms will keep "open house" throughout the week and invite the public to inspect these places for the purpose of seeing at first-hand the company's splendid facilities for furnishing complete service to Ford owners in this section.

"There are no other strings to this invitation to drive a new Ford car," declared one of the local Ford dealers. "A person may consider that he knows the Ford car. He may have been a Ford owner for years and may think he is familiar with the splendid satisfaction which the Ford gives, and yet, unless he has made it a point to examine the Ford card as it is built today, to drive it and note its improved performance to relax in it over rough roads and experience the increased comfort which it affords, and to learn of the many recent improvements, he does not know the Ford car."

Many of the new Ford car features are obvious —balloon tire equipment, wire wheels, a choice of colors in pyroxyline finish, improved upholstery, etc., but owners of Ford cars are amazed at the increased power resulting from the new vaporizer, the smoother engine operation, the increased gasoline mileage, the improved riding qualities and at the way this car handles and performs in traffic and on the open road.

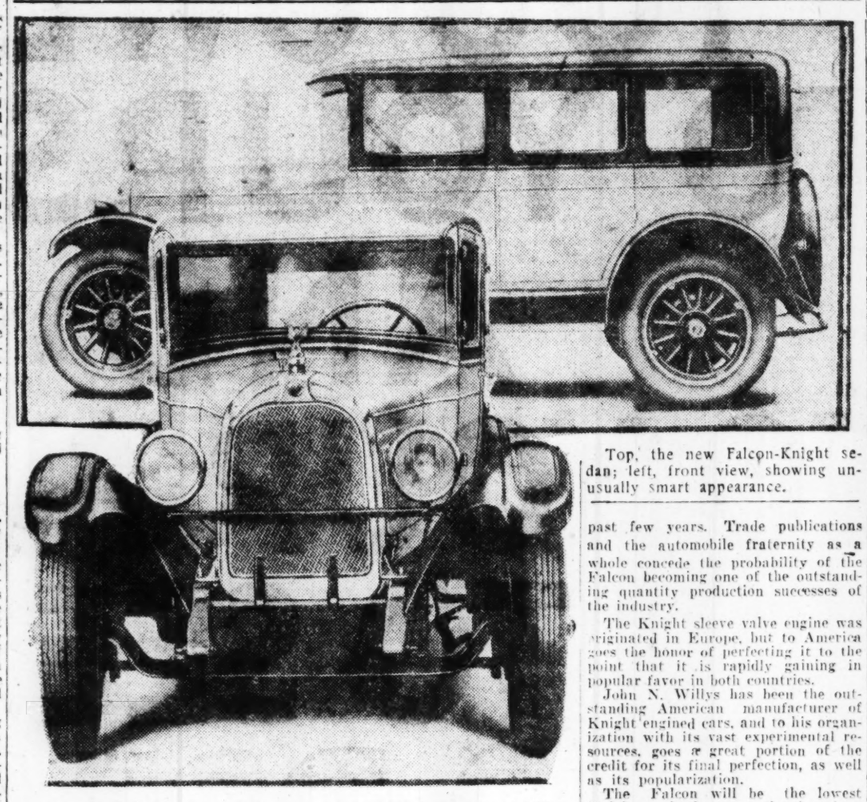

Atlanta dealers will be glad to furnish additional information covering "demonstration week" for today's Ford cars.

INSURANCE COMPANY OPENS AGENCY HERE

The Commonwealth Life Insurance company, of Louisville, Ky., is opening a state agency at 1108 Citizens and Southern Bank building for the purpose of organizing throughout Georgia, it was announced Saturday by Frederick T. Newell, secretary of the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. Judge Wallace Brown, Kentucky state senator, will act as state agent.

"The company has been watching the progress of Georgia and has a great deal of faith in its future," Mr. Newell said. "Judge Brown has visited Atlanta on several occasions and has chosen this city as his headquarters and will bring his family here at an early date."

Something New in Motordom--The Falcon-Knight Six

Falcon Motors, Inc., composed of three former officials of the old Dodge Brothers organization and John N. Willys, America's outstanding champion of the Knight sleeve valve engine, has announced the Falcon Knight, a six to sell in the $1,000 class.

John A. Nichols, Jr., for a number of years vice president of Dodge Brothers, is president of the new company. Forest Akers, sales manager, and most of the other officials were associated with him in his former connection before the Dodge heirs disposed of their interests in Dodge Brothers.

It is understood that while Mr. Willys has substantial holdings in the new company that the actual management will be in the hands of his associates. It is said in trade papers that the purchasing power of Willys-Overland, Inc., and the new company will be pooled in order to secure the greatest buying power for Falcon Motors, and for Willys-Overland.

Production of the Falcon Knight is now well under way and it is understood that the company is being besieged for dealer franchises from all parts of the country, though as yet no official national announcement has been published.

One publication quotes President Nichols as saying that careful survey has revealed a great potential market for a Knight engined six in the $1,000 field and that his company is to meet it with a dependable car that combines fleetness, quietness, body comfort and good appearance.

The Knight engine has made great advances in popular favor within the past few years. Trade publications and the automobile fraternity as a whole concede the probability of the Falcon becoming one of the outstanding quantity production successes of the industry.

The Knight sleeve valve engine was originated in Europe, but to America goes the honor of perfecting it to the point that it is rapidly gaining in popular favor in both countries.

John N. Willys has been the outstanding American manufacturer of Knight engined cars, and to his organization with its vast experimental resources, goes a great portion of the credit for its final perfection, as well as its popularization.

The Falcon will be the lowest Knight engined car on the American market, but local automobile men who have seen and driven it state that it is sturdily built and an astonishingly good performer.

30 NEW MARINES HOPING FOR ACTION

Thirty men, the greatest number to leave Atlanta in one day since the war, will be transferred to the marine corps recruiting station Sunday morning. The local marine recruiting office has been swamped with applicants since recruiting was resumed on the first of the month, it is said.

All of the men asserted that they were coming into the marine corps at this time on account of the trouble in China and the hope of seeing action. Many have been on the waiting list for several months.

OUTLOOK BRIGHT, SAYS A. R. GLANCY

The 1927 business horizon remains bright, especially from the standpoint of the automotive industry, it was declared last week by A. R. Glancy, president and general manager of the Oakland Motor Car company, upon his return from an extended trip throughout the United States.

Assisted by five members of the factory executive staff, Mr. Glancy conducted a series of sectional meetings at key cities for the Oakland dealers organization.

"My answer to numerous queries as to my opinion on the business outlook for the remainder of the year is to point to the fact that we have invested $15,000,000 in plant facilities to take care of our increasing production," said Mr. Glancy. "It requires confidence in the future to spend that sum.

"I believe the present year presents a greater opportunity to automobile dealers than any other year in the history of the industry. They may not necessarily sell more cars, but they have the best opportunity ever presented to stabilize their business and to establish themselves securely for the future.

"In this connection, I am preaching to them the doctrine of scientific merchandising. We have had plenty of science in the design and manufacture of autofmobiles. We still have need for more science in selling them.

"The automobile business has also reached what might be termed the 'service era.' Gradually it is developing the elements of greater courtesy and consideration toward car owners; better equipped service stations; efficient accounting systems and honesty in advertising. For instance, in reference to advertising: while we manufacturer six cylinder cars we make them stand upon their own merits instead of boosting them by invidious comparisons with the fours or making derogatory comment upon the eights."

Mr. Glancy stated that the 1927 production of his factories will be about 200,000 units. He emphasized, as illustrative of the industry's stability, that the Oakland is not interested in selling 200,000 cars merely for the purpose of making a record.

"I wish to build and sell only the number of cars which can be handled at a profit to our dealers and ourselves," he declared.

Mr. Glancy takes issue with those who predict a European trend in American cars. He asserted that "the shoe is on the other foot" and that the European manufacturers are learning from America not only how to design but also how to produce motor cars. He pointed out that almost without exception foreign manufacturers at the leading European automobile shows exhibit a larger car in addition to their small line of vehicles.

Brakes and Breaks

Another nitch has been cut in the big sales gun of "Ed" Cauthorn. You remember last month he received a medal for his February sales on the Hupp "8" and finished that month if we remember right in third place. T. E. Cauthorn his father has received word from the Hupp factory that "Ed" has gone even higher and finished March in second place with a comfortable lead over his nearest opponent and within striking distance of the top. Next month "Ed" make it first place and get yah picture printed by the morning effort.

Al H. Bailey has no need to worry over business matters when its a vacation he wants. We didn't know until the past week that "Al" has a son, but on my usual round the row I called on the Bailey company, for my ads (yes you know that's where our living comes from). Low and behold I thought the place had changed hands but was agreeably surprised when I was introduced to "Al" Bailey, Jr. Well anyway he has all the earmarks of his dad's good business ability and "Al" can take a few more weeks if he desires and rest assured that his business is being well taken care of.

Wonder what Mr. Durant will announce? Everybody seems to think that we newspaper people could grab out of the air what he is planning to make public next Thursday. The conclusion I have jumped at is, "He will concentrate his efforts on the Star car and I might add here it's a mighty good one, too, in which event he will be entering an entirely different price field. Take it for what it's worth!

This is national Ford demonstration week. Everybody is invited to drive the new Ford car of today. I don't know of any manufacturer who is putting more quality into their product than Ford. It is really the best car they have ever built and a short drive will convince the most critical. It offers such features as the hot spot manifold, for quick starting, a new improved carburetor that gives at least 25 per cent increase in mileage, a prettier body line, wire wheels and balloon tires as standard equipment, and the pyroxylin finish in a variety of colors—in fact everything to be desired.

Last week we told you about Chick Murray and his record breaking Whippet. Since that edition of the south's standard newspaper, this speed demon, fanatic or what not has smashed the world's dirt track record for 225 miles. This latter record was accomplished here on our own Lake-Wood track, his time for the full 225 miles was four hours and forty-four minutes a record we believe will stand for a long time for any small stock car.

Today the Overland company are inviting the public to come out to Stone Mountain and witness Chick in his attempt to climb this hazardous hill of a mile and a quarter in five minutes, personnally I have my doubts as to its ability to negotiate it in that length of time for you know there's no roadway at all up the mountain and his route will take him over the bumps as they come, however, if he does succeed my hats off to the Whippet.

This week the public is invited to attend the open house of the Ernest G. Beaudry company, formerly the Beaudry Motor company, Atlanta's oldest Ford dealers. This occasion is in celebration of the acquisition of entire control of this company by Mr. Beaudry. He has dressed his entire building to a queen's taste. We honestly believe there's not a speck of dirt to be found anywhere. Those of you who visited the Ford plant here in January know what a wonderfully clean place that is. Well Mr. Beaudry certainly has carried out Ford's idea of keeping house.

You'll never know the fun they're havinguntil you drive a Flying Cloud!

YOU'LL never know the fun that owners have when handling a Reo Flying Cloud until you try one out. You can't realize its pleasure no matter what other cars you may have driven.

Watch one as it gaily slides through traffic. There's a catlike agility in the way it ducks and dodges through openings. Now it shoots ahead like a tornado on the warpath. Softly and surely it hesitates as its Velvet Stop brakes close down, quickly it swings this way and that way as the chance to make progress comes.

Try one out on your roughest road to know the comfort of its riding. Push the throttle to the floor on your longest straight-away road if you wish to float along at hurricane speed. Pit it against your steepest hill and find that at last high-speed has been combined with great power.

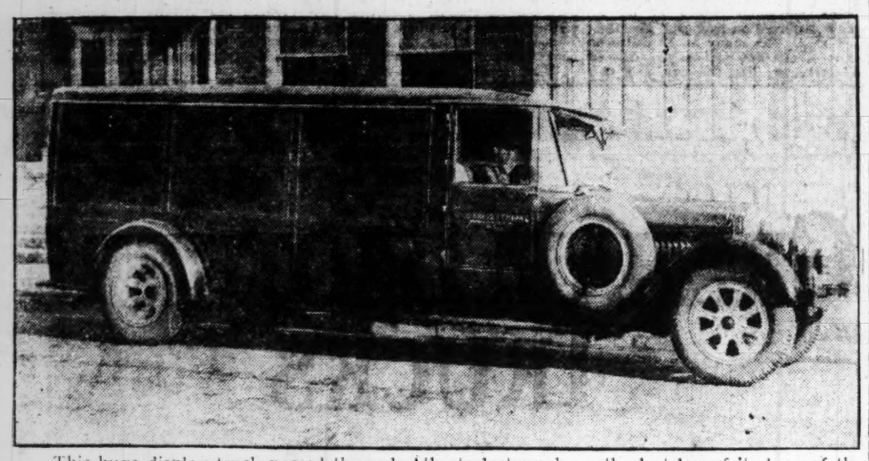

Indeed, test a Flying Cloud in any way you desire, in your most critical mood. Then you'll know the fun that Flying Cloud owners are having every day of their lives—the pleasure of Flying Cloud performance.

Be sure to try one out

NO OTHER AMERICAN CAR LASTS AS LONG AS REO—NOT ONE

Ohio Brass Company's Display Truck Equipped With Seiberling All-Treads

This huge display truck passed through Atlanta last week on the last leg of its tour of the country. So far this truck has covered 27,000 miles and, according to its driver, has the original set of Seiberling all-treads, which look none the worse for such experience.

LA SALLE ATTRACTS CROWDS TO SHOWROOM

Details of body design which have in the new LaSalle produced an effect which is thoroughly distinctive are attracting the interest of visitors to the show rooms of the Atlanta Cadillac company.

While a ride in the car demonstrates the low center of gravity in the chassis itself, the effect of lowness and fleetness is faithfully carried out as well in the appearance.

Sturdiness and fleetness are suggested in the front by a number of devices. The radiator, distinctly of the racing car type, is built high and deep and is surmounted by a radiator cap which is low, broad and graceful.

The headlamp assembly adds further to this effect. The lamps themselves are very large, of the bullet-nose type and the lenses are held by very narrow rims, or bezels, giving the effect of great size. They are mounted on sturdy nickel-plated brackets running down to the frame members and are tied together with a horizontal bar in which the LaSalle monogram is worked in outline.

The contour of the radiator and hood, twelve broad louvers on the hood instead of many narrow ones the running board only 15 inches from the pavement, and the top line of the car when standing at the curb on a level with the eye of a person of average height, are all factors in producing the effect which has already aroused the enthusiasm of spectators.

The two-tone color distribution is novel. The darker colors are used forward from the line of the front pillar instead of according to the conventional horizontal distribution.

Of the six body types composing the new LaSalle line, each is a separate and individual creation. Back of the cowl the differences are marked, and one could easily drive two or three of the different body types of this make and still feel that he was using three distinct cars. This applies to colors, to body, top and roof lines, and to the slope of the rear deck in Victoria, coupe and convertible coupe.

For the wheelbase length, the interior body dimensions are particularly generous. The outside breadth of the body at the windshield is slightly greater than the Cadillac, though the total breadth is a fraction of an inch less. Extremes meet in the contrast of the two-passenger convertible coupe or the roadster, and the five-passenger sedan. Skillful arrangement of the details of the former two give an impression of a close-coupled car much smaller than it really is, while, in the five-passenger sedan, the lowness of the roof line and the length of the body reveal the actual roominess of the seating capacity.

A new device, known as a "crease," or windbreak, is used for decorative effect in many details. It begins at the front of the radiator cap on the center of the radiator shell and is carried out at the tips of the fenders, front and rear, on the nickeled shells of head and cowl lamps and on the tail lamp. On the cowl the device appears as an arrowhead design, beginning as a point at the center of the junction of hood and cowl, and curving backward as a raised portion of the cowl until the curve meets the windshield.

BEAUDRY ACQUIRES ASSOCIATES' HOLDINGS

Ernest G. Beaudry, pioneer dealer in Ford automobiles in Atlanta and one of the best-known executives on "Automobile Row," Saturday announced that he has assumed full control of the Beaudry Motor company, which concern he has headed for 11 years, acquiring all interests of his associates in the business.

Mr. Beaudry's announcement means that he is now in business for himself alone, and henceforth will conduct the Beaudry company as his own entirely.

The same personnel which has been connected with the company's home at 169 Marietta street—many of whose members have been with the company since the day it opened—will be retained. Recent improvements to the business and installation of new and modern machinery and equipment gives it one of the most efficient service stations in the Atlanta district. The display rooms are among the finest and most modern in Ford's southern organization.

Mr. Beaudry is the oldest Ford dealer in point of service in Atlanta. He received his appointment 11 years ago, after having been sales manager for the Ford company's Atlanta branch, in which position he won the distinction of increasing Ford sales in this territory over 300 per cent in two years.

WHIPPET ROADSTER IS POPULAR WITH THE YOUNGER SET

The appeal of the Whippet sport roadster—the Collegiate—with the younger set is held partly responsible by Willys-Overland officials for the unusual sales recorded throughout the country for this model, a 1927 addition to the Whippet line. Since the Whippet Collegiate was first introduced it has assumed a position of leadership in the light-four classification.

Unusual smartness places this model in a distinctive position in the four-cylinder field. Its lines gave an air of raciness and dash and its general appearance and construction throughout has a special appeal to the younger generation.

The Whippet Collegiate has power, speed and worlds of pickup and "pep" to meet all demands of city or country driving. It is built on the low-swung Whippet chassis, which provides safe driving at any range under all conditions through a low center of gravity. As an extra safety factor the car is equipped with four-wheel brakes, providing a security not found in any other American-built, four-cylinder car.

The compact motor is noted for its fuel and oil economy in addition to speed and power. It will travel 30 miles on a gallon of gasoline and is capable of a speed of 55 miles an hour and better.

Unusual roominess is another feature of the Collegiate. The front seat is 41 inches wide and 17 1-2 inches deep with 34 1-2 inches of space from the driver's seat to the clutch and brake pedals. The steering column is adjustable from 8 3-4 to 10 inches, moving forward toward the dash or to the rear toward the seat to suit the convenience of the driver. The doors are 22 inches wide.

In the rear deck is built a sporty comfortable rumble seat for two extra passengers. This seat is 43 inches wide and 14 1-2 inches deep, with a high back set at the proper angle to provide maximum comfort for the occupants. When not in use the rumble seat may be folded to its invisible place.

Willys-Overland officials declare the Whippet Collegiate is proving one of the most popular models of the Whippet line and anticipate a steady production throughout the year to meet the demands of dealers and car buyers.

JORDAN COMPANY DIVIDEND DECLARED

Directors of the Jordan Motor Car company have declared the regular 1 3-4 per cent quarterly dividend on the preferred stock, payable April 1 to stockholders of record at the close of business March 28.

According to Edward S. Jordan, president of the company, business has been steadily increasing each week since January 31 when the price reduction on the line eight series went into effect.

The factory is reported to be building 50 cars a day and this schedule will be increased to 80 early in April when production on the new little custom Jordan gets under way.

Jordan reports orders for the new series as well as for the present models, in sufficient volume to keep the factory at capacity for the next 90 days.

TO STUDY PESTS IN SOUTH GEORGIA

Insects affecting pecan trees and truck crops in south Georgia will be the subject for special study this spring at the state experimental station at Albany, H. J. de la Parelle, assistant entomologist, said today.

Mr. de la Parelle said he will spend the coming week in south Georgia, in getting this work under way and in making a survey of sweet potato bed inspection work.

A. M. E. ZION CHURCH DISTRICT MEET HERE

Mid-year conference and convocation of the Eighth Episcopal district of the A. M. E. Zion church will be held at Franklin Memorial church, 153 North Boulevard, Wednesday, with Bishop Wallace, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Bishop Kyle, of Winston-Salem, N. C., as principal speakers.

A large delegation of preachers and missionary workers from all parts of the south will be present. Rev. A. M. Goodwin, pastor of the church, is in charge of the reception committee.

The Finest Eight Performance without Penalty of High Cost

UNTIL the coming of the Hupmobile Eight, this most luxurious form of motoring entailed both high first cost and prohibitive cost of upkeep.

Hupmobile changed all previous conceptions of eight-cylinder performance with a straight-eight of elemental simplicity, designed to give superior smoothness on long fuel mileage.

Thus Hupmobile removed the last obstacles which had prevented thousands from driving an eight, demonstrated its superiority over the higher-priced sixes, and won the largest straight-eight following in the world.

The only way to appreciate the vast difference between Hupmobile Eight and lesser types is to drive this Eight yourself.

FRANKLIN MAKES IMPRESSIVE RUN

Eighteen miles the hour in low gear from Buenos Aires, Argentine to La Platte and return in six hours and ten minutes is the record recently established by M. R. Fresendo, dealer for the Franklin Automobile company in the South American republic. The run was made along the marshy ground that borders the mouth of the Platte river.

Carlos Santiago, official observer for the Argentine Automobile club, who was third passenger in the car, declared the run "a brilliant test in every way. The motor was operated at great speed," he said, "over roads that were in poor condition, yet at no time did the engine overheat or labor in the least." To demonstrate his confidence in the statement Mr. Santiago placed his hands on the housing over the cylinders as soon as the car was brought to a halt on the return to Buenos Aires.

"The cooling system of the Franklin has a perfect equilibrium," was the report of George Vopelius, well-known South American engineer, who was delegated by the Automobile club to examine the engine at the end of the run. He declared it to be in perfect condition, showing not the least sign of over-exertion and stated that with the Franklin car it was possible to prove that "the harder the work the better the cooling."

Poor roads in South America make endurance and cooling tests a matter of great public interest. The Buenos Aires-La Platte run is one of several being competed in by Franklin dealers. A Franklin car was winner in the famous 1,500 kilometer endurance and economy run held recently in Uruguay.

We greatly appreciate the Junior Chamber of Commerce awarding the prizes to the golfers last week and not carrying it over, our job wasn't half as bad the past week.

NASH EMPLOYEES OWN MILLIONS OF COMPANY'S STOCK

Seventeen million dollars' worth of Nash motor stock is owned by employees of the company. This was revealed yesterday and it was pointed out that none of this stock includes that owned by the directing heads of the company. Practically every foreman in the Nash plants and hundreds of men who work on the "bench," including many salaried employees, those employed on a time basis and those employed on the basis of piece work, are included among the company's stockholders.

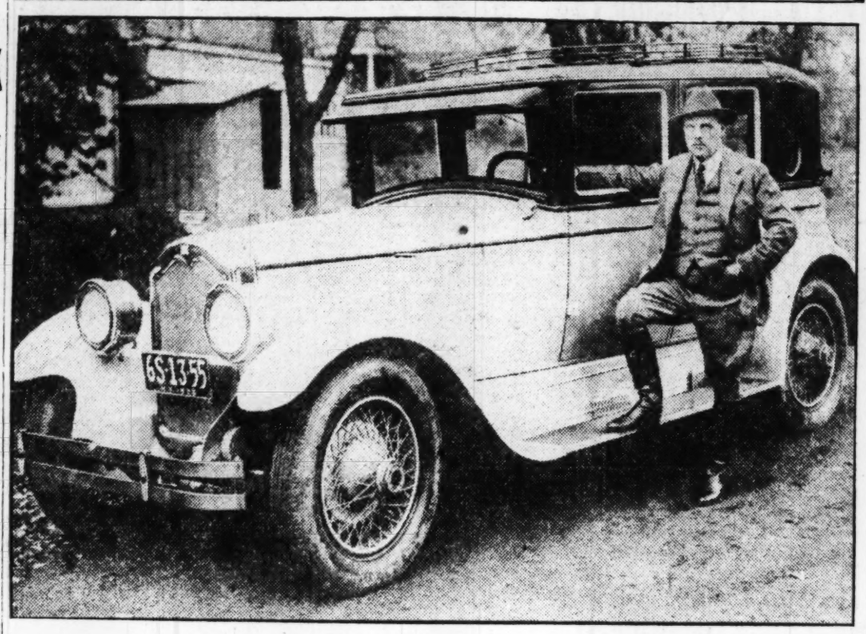

These members of the great Nash Motors organization, most of whom work on the actual production of the car itself, have a primary interest in the success of the company and in the quality of the product they are building.

It is pointed out that while at no time has an employee of the Nash Motors company been urged to buy stock the officers and other directing heads of the organization have been pleased with the habits of sound living and thrift which have made possible the purchase of most of the $17,000,000 worth of stock on the part of employees. Ever since the Nash Motors company was organized, over 10 years ago, C. W. Nash and his associates have encouraged the purchase of homes and habits of thrift.

The employees have a club at each of the company's plants for social and athletic activities. Membership in these clubs is popular, the clubs comprising about 90 per cent of all Nash employees. They have their own motion picture machines, their orchestras and, with the aid of the company, maintain a band. The Kenosha factory, to illustrate, is divided into 50 wards, each ward selecting a representative to the advisory council, and the advisory council elects a board of directors of 15 members; the directors then appoint various committees in charge of the different activities of the club.

The Nash Motors company maintains, for the benefit of its employees, an athletic field, tennis courts, club house and baseball field with grandstand and bleachers, having a seating capacity of 6,000 people.

Colonel Powell Selects Buick for Round the World Trip

Over ancient trails fraught with danger, through hub-deep sand under a sun which shows no pity for man or car, a man, his wife and daughter are blazing trails which never before showed the tracks of an automobile tire. This man is Lieutenant Colonel E. Alexander Powell, noted American war correspondent, author and globe-trotter.

Colonel Powell left America with his family on a trip which will take them all over the world. It is probably the most pretentious automobile tour ever attempted. The Powells will avoid the well marked trails and beaten paths, for all three members of this family are innoculated with the spirit of the wanderlust and also with the desire for exploration.

They spent the winter visiting the islands in the eastern Mediterranean, including Crete, Cyprus, Rhodes, Malta and Corfu. What material Colonel Powell gathers there will be included in a book entitled "Mediterranean Moorings." The trip and the writing of his book will take him through Finland, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Latvia, Lithuania, Esthonia and others of those newer countries. The book will grow as the party proceeds by motor from place to place. Colonel Powell's car, a 1927 Buick brougham, is specially equipped with a typewriter and table, as well as many other conveniences so necessary on a long, arduous tour.

The itinerary also includes a trip by automobile to Constantinople and thence by ferry across the Bosphorus. The tour will then take them down through Turkey and Syria to Damascus or Jerusalem. From there they will drive across Arabia to Bagdad and then through Persia and on to India. They intend also to drive entirely across China and there sail for California, completing a trip entirely around the world, traveling by automobile while on land.

"Dangerous?" said Colonel Powell just before leaving on the long trip, "not a bit of it. I've found that as one goes along his way if he is halfway courteous he is not likely to be disturbed. As for our car, we know that no matter where we go we will be in reach of approved factory service, and anticipate nothing but pleasure on the tour.

"Just because men have yellow, brown or black skins they are not different at heart from other men. I have met all kinds, and find that people are much alike. The people of all countries are kind and hospitable when treated courteously."

Colonel Powell is one of the best equipped men in America to undertake this long automobile tour. Always an inveterate traveler, he has had his share of adventure and has acquired a thorough cosmopolitan training. Besides his work of writing travelogs, he was the only correspondent allowed with the German army during the world war. He has the record of being the only man to drive from Paris to India, crossing the Sahara desert. He is also the first man to drive a car from Mexico to Alaska, accomplishing this feat in 1913. His European and Asiatic trips often inflict great hardships on his car.

LARGEST SHIPMENT OF HUPPS MADE

Evidence of the rapidly increasing sales volume of eight cylinder cars was recently displayed in a shipment which included 79 Hupmobile Straight Eights driven from Detroit to Chicago by the sales organization of the Gambill Motor company, Hupmobile distributors for the Chicago territory. This shipment valued at $175,000 is part of the $2,278,680 order placed by Gambill at the time of the Chicago Automobile show.

The procession of new cars which included all models from sport roadsters to limousines in various color combinations were driven through the Detroit business district with police escort.

The group of Chicago dealers were guests of the Hupp Motor Car corporation at lunch where they were addressed by DuBois Young, president and R. S. Cole, general sales manager.

"This drive-away of straight eights indicates the truth of our prediction made several months ago," Mr. Young told the gathering. "Sales of eights are increasing each month while the Hupmobile eight retains the leadership among straight eights it has enjoyed since its introduction. The change in buying which has made a decided swing to eights has necessitated price reductions in the high priced six cylinder field and it will continue to do so.

"We anticipate the greatest year Hupmobile has ever known. We see a contined strong growth in both the six and eight cylinder fields and believe our dealers are bound to receive a greater portion of business in both fields than ever before."

PIERCE-ARROW DESIGNS NEW CLOSED CAR

The steady increase in city traffic has developed a new body design for motor cars—a close-coupled five-passenger body which can be maneuvered through dense traffic with ease and yet which is roomy enough for long runs across country without fatiguing driver and passengers.

The ease of handling of this close-coupled type of car is remarkable. Women prefer it for its ability to maneuver through dense traffic and the facility with which it can be parked. Its short turning radius enables one to turn around in a narrow street without backing.

Among the most distinguished designs of this type are three which have been developed by the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company. One is a two-door type which has the close-coupled smartness of the coupe with ample roominess for five. Doors are wide and spacious so that passengers may enter the rear without disturbing those in front. It carries a price of $2,995 at Buffalo.

The second body style is the four-door type, which is a new and distinctive interpretation of the conventional five-passenger sedan. Factory price is $3,250.

The third car is the new Club sedan, Pierce-Arrow's latest offering. Many style elements have been combined into this car which make it unusually smart and attractive looking. A built-in trunk at the rear, which may be painted the same color as the exterior, adds a unique individual touch. The price of this car is $3,300 at Buffalo.

HOLLAND TIRE CO. ENJOYS GOOD TRADE

The Holland Tire Co., Inc., exclusive distributors of Kelly-Springfield tires in Atlanta, through John H. Holland, general manager, announces that since the opening of the concern on February 15 the company has opened in excess of two hundred new accounts.

"Of course," Mr. Holland said Saturday, "all of these people did not buy Kellys for the first time. Some of them have been steady users for the past 15 years, or more, but all of them were acquainted with the wonderful wearing qualities of these famous tires."

The Ivy Street Garage building, where the Holland Tire company has leased two stores facing Ivy street and Exchange place, offers to patrons of this concern probably more modern and up-to-date facilities for application of tires and their repair than any other place in the south. The Ivy Street garage is said to be the largest modern storage garage in the world, accommodations including large and spacious waiting rooms and writing rooms, checkrooms, telephone booth, a department for checking packages for patrons of the garage; a washing, polishing, vacuum cleaning department and a greasing and alemiting service under supervision of a trained factory man who thoroughly understands the lubrication of cars.

"No particular brand of oil or grease is forced on patrons," Mr. Holland said. "As many as 12 different kinds of oils and greases are carried in stock, so that the customer can have his own particular kind of lubrication applied.

"While I am only interested in the sale of Kelly-Springfield tires, the other departments are owned by the Ivy Street Garage company. In making the selection of a location for an up-to-date tire store, I feel that I am extremely fortunate in getting quarters in such an elaborate building designed especially for the comfort and convenience of the motorist.

"The repair department for the vulcanization of tires and tubes now being installed will be complete in every detail. New and modern machinery of the very latest design will handle every size from the largest to the smallest.

"The Holland Tire company's green trucks are already a familiar sight around the streets, and 'Holland service' is a slogan that this firm intends making as unvarying as sterling."

"... all the advantages of Oakland's super-precision construction, plus the rich beauty of New Colors in Duco"

In this great era of industrial precision, Oakland manufacturing processes stand out as a marvel of the day and age. Not in the entire history of the automobile has any car of its price embodied so many super-precision processes—so many practices previously used only in the manufacture of the costliest cars.

Piston pin bushings diamond-bored to limits of three ten-thousandths of an inch! Piston, ring and rod assemblies balanced to fifteen one-thousandths of a pound! Main bearing seats aligned to two and one-half thousandths of an inch! A 100% hardness test on axle shafts.

And the list could be extended almost indefinitely—for Oakland is going to unheard-of lengths to make certain that the Greater Oakland Six continues to be the finest built car of its price in the world.

Merely on the basis of such scientific accuracy, the Greater Oakland Six would constitute the outstanding value in its field. Yet today's Oakland Six is winning an entirely new measure of popularity, offering all the advantages of Oakland super-precision construction, plus the rich beauty of new colors in Duco.

These original color combinations were developed in cooperation with Dupont, the world's leading automotive color authorities. They lend refreshing smartness to every Oakland body. They introduce into their price field a new note of modishness and luxury—one that you will instantly mark the moment you see the car.

Two New Parts in DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CAR Tell Important Story

NOTICE THESE TWO PICTURES

The small part is a new exhaust valve—now used on all Dodge engines. Also on all fine aeroplane engines. Made of alloy steel, containing silicon and chromium, it costs four times as much as the valve it replaces.

The other is Dodge Brothers new five-bearing crankshaft. Made of costly chrome vanadium steel. One of the finest shafts in any engine.

—EACH TELLS AN IMPORTANT STORY—

The small part typifies hundreds of similar refinements made by Dodge Brothers during the past two years . . . endless detailed improvements, never spoken of, rarely observed by the layman, but vitally important in their total effect on performance and dependability.

With the new crankshaft, many other major improvements could be listed. A new silent-type clutch. A new two-unit starting system. Smarter and stauncher body design. Bright new colors. Comfort-tilt seats. New silent-type muffler. New steering ease. Softer pedal action. New air cleaner. Improved engine mounting. New design propeller shaft, differential, axle shafts . . . and many others.

Drive the car now! Experience its new zest and flexibility—marked ease of operation—pronounced comfort—and the striking new smoothness and silence of the motor at all speeds!

Board's Hearings Give No Solution To Radio Problem

Reduction in Number of Stations Seems Only Possible Way Out of Present Air Chaos.

BY FRANK HINMAN.
(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, Ill., April 2.—The new federal radio commission, created by congress to clean up the much-muddled radio situation, today apparently is no nearer a solution of the problem than it was last Tuesday when it sat down in Washington, D. C., with representatives of all branches of the radio industry from all parts of the country. For three days it listened to recommendations and suggestions from lawyers, radio engineers, manufacturers, station owners and listeners and when all the talk had subsided, this was the situation:

(1) There are too many stations now broadcasting in the United States.

(2) No solution was offered as to how the number of those stations could be reduced.

All Fairly United.

The four commissioners present, Vice Chairman Eugene C. Sykes, J. T. Dillon, H. A. Bellows and O. H. Caldwell, had outlined a list of subjects for discussion on the part of the gathering, subjects on which they frankly admitted they wanted the views of the radio industry.

From the outset it was fairly apparent that all branches of the industry were pretty much of a unit on most of the subjects. The question of widening the broadcasting band to make room for additional stations was opposed with hardly a dissenting voice. The proposition to reduce the frequency band between stations, the suggestion that there be a general reduction in power and the idea that chain broadcasting could be carried on the same wave length met the same fate and at last the commission threw up its hands in despair.

Commissioner Caldwell summed up the position when he said, shortly before the conclusion of the morning session on the third day:

"Gentlemen, for three days the members of the radio commission have listened to your counsel with a great deal of interest and a great deal of appreciation. You have discussed these technical subjects from many angles, but you seem to lead to but one conclusion—at least if we are to accept the ideas of you men who sit here—and that conclusion is that the number of broadcasting stations has got to be cut down.

No Solution Yet.

"You have advised against all these different propositions and have defined the problem from all sides, from the listeners' standpoint in the requirement of good radio service. But, if your advice is to be taken by the commission on all these various points, you will see that you have cut off all avenues of escape for the solution of the present problem of 733 stations, except a reduction in the number of stations that may broadcast.

"Therefore, gentlemen, if your advice is to be followed on all the preceding points, what have you now to say on this question of cutting down the number of stations? How would you advise the commission to start going about it?"

And the gathering had practically nothing to offer.

One man, the representative of an accessory company, suggested that a large number of the stations could be relegated to the two lowest wave bands, which, he said, could be dedicated to chaos, but he neglected to prescribe a method by which the stations to occupy this radio ash heap could be selected. Another revived the question of widening the broadcasting band beyond the range of the present-day receiver but the majority had nothing to say, and, as a result, the commission is just where it was when it started its public hearings.

TO TELL OF TORTURE BY SAVAGE MONGOLS

One of the most dangerous and adventuresome trips in modern times will be the vicarious experience of Eveready hour listeners on Tuesday evening, April 5, when James L. Clark, assistant director of the American Museum of Natural History will give the first public account of the Morden-Clark expedition through the mountain fastnesses of Turkestan, Mongolia and lower Siberia in search of the ovis poli and other rare animals.

Not the least of the adventures which Mr. Clark will recount was the capture and torture of himself and William J. Morden by a band of savage Mongol soldiers who are now causing much trouble to the soviet army officials who first equipped and inflamed them. The two Americans, who were the only pure-blooded white men in the wilds of central Asia at the time, were stripped of all their possessions.

Their wrists were bound by heavy rope as tightly as the combined strength of several men could make it, and in zero weather, steaming water was poured over the knots to make them tighter. Back to back, they were trussed to a pole and left to suffer for hours while their captors discussed means of killing them.

Morden and Clark agreed that if either survived he would look to the welfare of the other's wife, and Clark made a vow that should he lose his hands he would never return to America to be a burden on his family. Only the timely arrival and intervention of soviet officers saved their lives but both men still suffer from injuries to their wrists.

ARNOLD WILL ADDRESS ATLANTA ROTARIANS

Frank A. Arnold, director of development of the National Broadcasting company, of New York, will address the Rotary Club of Atlanta at its regular meeting Tuesday at 12:30 o'clock, at the Capital City club. His subject will be "Development of Radio Broadcasting and Its Relation to the Advertising Field."

For some time Mr. Arnold has been serving as a member of the national radio committee of the American Association of Advertising Agencies. In his present capacity with the National Broadcasting company he is continuing his interest in linking up with other established forms of advertising the opportunity afforded for advertising through the medium of radio broadcasting.

Mr. Arnold also has been a conspicuous members of the American Association makes his visit to Atlanta of more than ordinary significance.

During his stay in Atlanta Mr. Arnold will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest E. Dallis.

NEGRO SPIRITUALS; HILL-BILLY TUNES

Hill-billy music and negro spirituals—here is a program of real American music that will delight every lover of humorous, plaintive folk melodies. Like so many other novel and artistic concerts, it will be given in Maxwell House Coffee hour, Wednesday, April 6, from 8 to 9 p. m., central time, from WJZ New York; WBAL Baltimore; WBZ Springfield, Mass.; WZBA Boston; KDKA Pittsburgh; KYW Chicago; WHAS Louisville; WSM Nashville; WMC Memphis; WSB Atlanta.

Rex Schepp, world famous as a player of plucked instruments, will play the banjo just as it is played in the far corners of the Blue Ridge. Vernon Dalhart and Carson Robinson will sing the lilting spirituals which critics say are America's most truly representative music, including the beautiful "Golden Slippers." Robinson will give a new whistling specialty, "Whistle-itis."

The concert will also be notable for the first performance of David W. Guion's "Pickaninny Dance," played by the Maxwell House Coffee Concert orchestra, Nathaniel Shilkret, conductor. Request numbers will have a prominent place on the program.

Balkite Program on Dreams

As it is said that "dreams are stuff that life is made on," the Balkite hour of Wednesday evening, April 6, to be broadcast through WEAF and other stations of the Red Network of the National Broadcasting company at 9:30 o'clock, eastern standard time (8:30 o'clock, central time), will be based on "Dreams" as an episode in the "Cycle of Romance."

Set Building Made Easy

The Constitution's Quality Tone Receiver

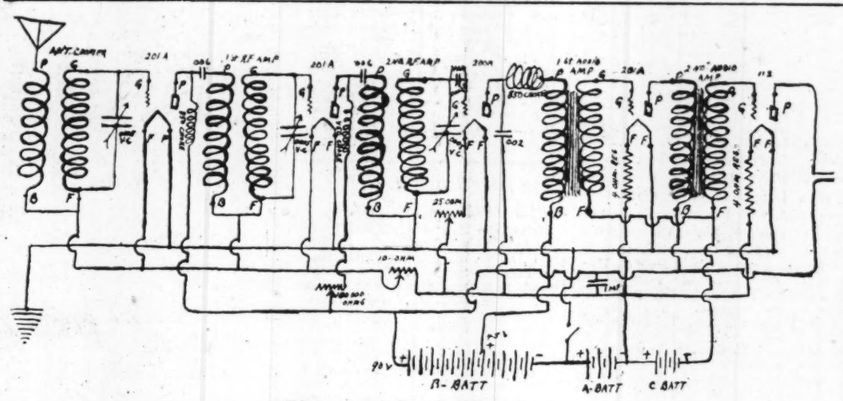

Diagram of Quality Tone Set

BY WILL H. SMITH.

The continued popularity of radio frequency circuits was demonstrated the past week by the response with which The Constitution's Quality Tone receiver, as published in the columns of last Sunday's radio page, was met by a score of home constructors in Atlanta.

It is a well-known fact that the receiver constructed in the home workshop compares favorably with the receiver built in the well-equipped factory, especially when the various units are assembled to get the greatest possible ease in construction.

The Constitution's set was designed for the average builder and every detail was so arranged as to make assembly of the parts an easy matter for the most inexperienced layman. One does not have to be an expert radiotician to put the Quality Tone receiver together if the instructions to be published in these columns are carefully followed.

Often the home constructed set will perform in a manner superior to that of the manufactured receiver. The commercial receiver has the advantage only of appearance, for invariably the various parts are mounted on a subpanel and the wiring concealed. This point is emphasized in The Constitution's set.

It has been the view in designing this receiver to incorporate all the very desirable features usually found in a factory-made set in an excellent tuned radio frequency hook-up which may be easily constructed by the average radio fan.

The circuit used is a standard tuned radio frequency design using two stages of radio frequency amplification, a detector and two stages of transformer coupled audio amplification completed with the introduction of a standard output transformer. A few changes have been made in the interest of better selectivity and reception.

The primary of the antenna coupler is not grounded, and one .05 Mf. by-pass condenser is placed between the 90-volt "B" battery lead and the negative filament in order to by-pass radio frequency current and keep it out of the batteries.

The accompanying schematic drawing of the revised circuit embodying the changes will give the average builder an idea of the workability of the design and the advantages to be gained by the changes made in The Constitution laboratory. The unique arrangement of the antenna coupler allows greater selectivity and eliminates interference and induction noises from nearby power equipment to a great extent.

The condenser will by-pass any excess radio frequency current which may be present in the radio frequency transformers and prevent them from causing interstage coupling and affecting the very sensitive grid circuits which are in the vicinity of the transformers.

With the addition of the Hilco choke coils the circut will meet the average exacting conditions under which most fans must operate in obtaining any fair sort of reception. These choke coils, recently designed by the Atlanta Hilco corporation, offer a tremendous advantage to the home builder that has not heretofore been available. Many manufactured sets have incorporated in their design choke coils similar to the ones now being marketed by the Hilco company.

Any of the parts used in The Constitution's Quality Tone receiver can be obtained in Atlanta. In fact, the parts used in The Constitution's laboratory were picked up at the Garvin Electric company, distributors for Silver Marshall products.

Every set building fan is urged to get a kit of parts for the Quality Tone receiver and join with the editor of this department in building up this remarkable instrument. Summer time is an ideal time to prepare for the great things in store for radio this season. Complete wiring instructions will be published in ensuing issues of this page beginning next Sunday.

SEARS-ROEBUCK TO BROADCAST OLD HOME TOWN

A radio presentation entitled: "The Old Home Town," will feature the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation hour on WSB Monday night from 8 to 9. Description and musical selections appropriate to the theme will be included to make the program unique and at the same time appealing to the majority of radio listeners. Marquis M. Smith will give descriptive announcements, and musical numbers will be by the Foundation Four quartet; Paul and John, the "disciples of harmony;" Ralph Richardson, saxophonist and singer, and little Miss Bertha Arrowwood, soloist. The new "scrap book" feature by Marquis Smith will also be included in the broadcast.

Dr. Joe P. Bowdoin, of the Georgia state board of health, will speak on the Monday noon dinnerbell R. F. D. program with the subject, "The Young Mother." Other speaking attractions of the week include Mrs. R. F. Whelchel's Housekeepers' Chats at 10 a. m. daily; "Hiram Doolittle," farm philosopher, on Wednesday noon, and "Farm Experience Corner," by George C. Biggar, on Friday noon.

Noon musical attractions on foundation programs for the week include, Ralph Richardson, saxophonist-singer; C. S. Brook, singing guitarist; Paul and John, harmony team; Roy S. Baxter, xylophonist; Dewey Burnet, old-time fiddler, and Marquis Smith, baritone.

GIGLI WILL SING ON CHAIN TONIGHT

Beniamino Gigli, famous Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera company, will broadcast from WEAF and 18 connected stations Sunday, April 3.

Since his radio debut, Gigli has been besieged for advice by singers seeking radio careers. The lure of quick fame is now sending thousands to broadcasting stations throughout the country, as it has for years led the screen-struck to Hollywood.

Born in 1890, Gigli sang for ten years in the boy choir of the largest church in Recanati, Italy, his native town. He studied under Professor Rosati in the Rome Conservatory, and made his operatic debut at Revigo, near Venice, in 1914, as Enzo in 'La Gioconda."

His fame quickly spread through Italy, and he sang in Turin, Palermo, Bologna, Naples, Rome, and finally at the goal of all Italian singers, the Scala of Milan. In the summer of 1920 he was engaged for the Metropolitan Opera, New York, where he made his debut in "Mefistofele."

HOYT TO ADDRESS RADIO ENGINEERS

Francis E. Hoyt, inventor, experimentor in radio and electrical lines, who has just recently opened laboratories in Atlanta, will be the principal speaker at a meeting of the Atlanta Association of Radio Engineers to be held Wednesday night at Vaughn's tea room.

The meeting, which is the regular monthly session of the organization, will be preceded by a dinner at which time plans will be outlined and steps taken to enlarge the Atlanta group to 35 members when application can be made for membership in the National Association of Radio Engineers.

The Atlanta organization has been instrumental in bringing a number of prominent radio men to the attention of local fans and is deserving of the support of all those engaged in the radio industry in the city.

Mr. Hoyt will discuss "Rectifiers and the Hall Effect" in his talk before the association Wednesday night, stressing particularly the recent invention perfected in Macon that is said to do away with tubes and batteries.

AD AGENCY IS NAMED BY SPARTON COMPANY

Captain William Sparks, president and general manager of the Sparks-Withington company, Jackson, Miss., announces the appointment of Brooke, Smith & French, Inc., Detroit national advertising agency, as advertising and merchandising counselors in the marketing of Sparton radios and Sparton motor car horns.

The demand already established in the 26 years that Sparton horns have been on the market, and the remarkable popularity achieved by Sparton radios during the past two years will be increased by a comprehensive advertising campaign in national magazines, newspapers and other media.

Radio, Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow??

BY M. O. MOSTELLAR.
Garvin Electric Co.

M. O. MOSTELLAR.

Our radio editor asked for just a story this week; just a story to impress upon the minds of radio listeners the real value of radio today—to tell of yesterday—and to just dream of tomorrow, because nothing seems improbable in this greatest of all wonders.

Only a few years ago radio was an unknown thing. Then came the first wireless—just a few dots and dashes made by crude electrical instruments. People laughed and said, "Only another joke." But it was not a joke.

Then came the wireless telephone. Few people tried to use or invest in the affair, thinking it was only a fad. But time developed many wonders—a cereal box—some wires, a chip of crystal and many hours of labor and finally he had accomplished a great thing; he had built a radio set. From that day until now radio has advanced in strides—advanced more than any other industry ever before in so short a while.

Even in 1922 there were few tube sets in existance—they were home-constructed, as were many of the finest receivers of today. At first the loud speaker was unknown, the head phones were then practically the only means of reproduction; and the fan would sit until the wee hours of the new day straining the ear, to hear some weak signal.

Today we walk into the modern home—in one corner of a room we find a beautiful cabinet. Someone says, "Turn on the radio." As the switch is turned there pours into the room a living orchestra, you can just see each player—so clear—so real. With one movement of the hand we have some great executive giving a lecture; another turn and we have the blow by blow story of a fight. Imagine hundreds of thousands of people crowding into the fight hall but comfortably at home they can all hear it.

Do we really appreciate radio? Do we really give it credit as we should? The answer surely is—No. If we do appreciate this greatest of all wonders to whom do we give the credit? We must give it to the fellows that built their own sets—the fellows that spent sleepless nights studying—changing, rebuilding. A large percent of all the improvements of the set of yesterday to the wonderful set of today were made by the same set builders at home. To them we owe the credit, but we can not forget the great laboratories, the manufacturers, because they have given utmost support to the experiments, to the builder and to the person who can not build their own.

Today every boy, every man can own some kind of a radio, from the perfect crystal set to the most powerful "super." We want to encourage them to own a radio—it is educational, as well as the greatest source of entertainment available today.

To make it a greater pleasure, a greater fascination build your own radio set. It may seem quite a deep subject at first but once started you will find it the most fascinating work in all the world, because always it is shrouded in a deep mystery. There is something completely unexplainable about it. So why don't you build a radio set? Why don't you share some of the pleasure, some of the things you will learn, some of the greater things in radio, that you can discover, and give to "tomorrow" a greater, a more perfect radio?

At the same time the extensive trade representation enjoyed by Sparton products is to be broadened through an aggressive campaign of territorial development and sales promotion.

Although 1926 was the first year in which Sparton radios were actively marketed, the company has already attained a position among the ten leading manufacturers in the radio industry. Sparton horns for motor cars have long enjoyed extensive use, both as original equipment on many fine cars and through retail dealer sales.

Capitol Program.

The recently increased orchestra of the Capitol theater, which is heard each Sunday evening through WEAF and associated stations of the Red Network of the National Broadcasting company at 6:20 o'clock, central time, has been responsible for a flood of appreciative letters to Major Edward Bowes. It is believed that the Capitol Grand orchestra, which is heard by the radio audience each Sunday evening under the direction of David Mendoza, is the largest theater orchestra in the world.

When the Band Starts Playing!

Whether it be the Capitol Theatre Orchestra in New York, or Fiddlin' John Carson's coterie of old-time musicians playing "Pop Goes the Weasel"—you'll be mighty glad if you have a radio receiving set this summer. Not only that you may hear local programs, but also these wonderful chain-broadcast entertainments from distant stations through WSB.

There'll be music and speeches, sermons, songs, boxing and baseball details and results . . . a host of amusement for every member of the family!

Use your radio this summer. Keep open house to those friends who have not yet purchased one. And, if you care to, you might tell them that "The Power Company" carries a full and complete line of radio receiving apparatus—that the time-payment terms are liberal!

Chapter Meetings

PETER COFFEE.

Peter Coffee chapter, D. A. R., met with Mrs. W. L. Harrell, the regent, with Mrs. Chauncey Foote presiding. Miss Julia Bass gave a brief history of "Our Nation's Capitol;" Mrs. Foote gave a reading on "Continental Hall, Our Dreams of the Future;" the "Spirit of '76 in Bronze and Marble" was read by Mrs. Sheldon, and extracts from the speech of President Coolidge delivered at the last National D. A. R. congress were read by Mrs. MacDonald.

OCONEE.

Tuesday afternoon the Oconee chapter, D. A. R., of McRae, were the guests in Lumber City of Mrs. Hamilton Willcox and Mrs. Ben Harrell at the home of Mrs. Willcox. A St. Patrick's day program was arranged by the hostesses. Miss Emily McArthur played a solo, followed by Mrs. John McLeod, who sang. Mrs. Douglas McArthur gave a reading and Miss Urquhart rendered a piano solo.

HAWKINSVILLE.

Mrs. N. A. Jelks was hostess to the Hawkinsville chapter, when Mrs. L. A. Jordan, regent, presided.

Mrs. J. L. Mims was elected regent's alternate to attend the state conference. Plans were perfected for a flower show to be given the latter part of April. The chapter has sponsored the planting during the winter and spring of hundreds of trees, shrubs and flowers.

On the program, in charge of Mrs. E. E. Moore, was Mrs. L. A. Jordan and Miss Lillie Martin.

"Training in Citizenship." "What America Means to Me." "What I Hope to Mean to America" and "Americanization" were subjects also discussed by members. Miss Janie Scarboro was also on the program.

JAMES MONROE.

James Monroe chapter held its March meeting with Mesdames Charles Brown and L. B. Alexander. Mrs. Hugh Hardin, the regent, presided. After the business meeting she announced that the chapter would have a chair in the new Constitution hall. This was made possible by the generosity of Mrs. R. P. Brooks. The program was in charge of Mrs. J. L. McGee. Mrs. J. P. Sutton gave a splendid talk on "The History of Individual Liberty." An original essay, "Music in the Colonies," was read by Mrs. Mary Ponder Hatch. This will be sent to the state chairman of historical and literary reciprocity. Mary Williams gave a reading.

KNOX—CONWAY.

Knox-Conway chapter, D. A. R., met St. Patrick's day with Mrs. George T. Betts. A resume of important features of the past few months was reviewed. Mrs. John A. Ewing, regent, presided, and the meeting was opened with Scripture reading by Mrs. J. W. Long.

Corresponding Secretary Mrs. George T. Betts reported every letter had the courtesy of reply. All financial obligations of the chapter have been met and Mrs. C. G. McKenzie reported a nice sum on hand for general work.

A map of the county defining all places of historic interest of the present and former periods of this section's history, plainly marked, has been dispatched to the state chairman of marking historic spots in Georgia. A tree for each member of the chapter has been planted on the school grounds. And the D. A. R. magazine received, as reported by the respective chairmen Mesdames C. H. Bishop and Chester Clark. A history of the county is being compiled, and one or two articles will be published weekly in the local paper.

Application has been made to the government for a marker for the grave of Rev. William Pate, the only known revolutionary soldier buried in Turner county and one of the earliest settlers of this section. At a meeting of the descendants at the old burial ground the committee on marking historic spots, Mrs. L. W. Green, chairman, was present and presented plans for making of this sacred spot a historic shrine. A stone will be erected and the plot enclosed by the descendants as a consequence. The unveiling, with appropriate ceremony, will take place soon. Mrs. L. W. Green was appointed to represent the chapter at the D. A. R. state convention in Thomaston.

SUNBURY.

Sunbury chapter, D. A. R., met in the home of the vice regent, Mrs. W. H. Quarterman, who presided over the meeting.

Through the generosity of the regent, Mrs. Henry Pledger, three attractive markers have been erected. One commemorates the intersection of two old Indian trails; another the intersection of the old Milledgeville road and Bankhead highway; while the third marks the site of an old fort. Five hundred choice fruit trees have been presented the mill village in Winder, and a box with materials valued at $27 given Ellis Island.

The following papers from the lending bureau in Washington city were read: "America Before 1492," Mrs. J. T. Strange; "Kenmore," Miss Icie Smith; "Sunbury," Mrs. W. H. Quarterman.

SERGEANT NEWTON.

Sergeant Newton chapter, D. A. R., met with Mrs. Walker Combs. Mrs. O. W. Porter, regent, presided. Reports were made by Mrs. J. E. Phillips, treasurer. Mrs. R. A. Norris, delegate to the state convention, was instructed to ask that the contributions required for the honor roll be reduced. The change in the constitution as to raising the dues was tabled until after the Thomaston convention.

The following nominating committee was appointed to report at the May meeting: Mrs. J. C. Upshaw, Mrs. W. D. Travis and Mrs. R. P. Lester.

On the program arranged by Mrs. Walker Combs was Mrs. W. Trox Bankston. The hostesses in charge were Mrs. Walker Combs, Mrs. A. L. Loyd and Mrs. W. Trox Bankston.

Camp Fire Executive Secretary To Attend National Conference

Miss Mary Louise Holland, executive secretary of Atlanta Camp Fire, left the city Saturday en route to Buck Hill Falls, Pa., where she will attend the national conference for executives, meeting with some of the most noted leaders and with Camp Fire executives from all over the country. After six days in the Pocono mountain region, the conference will adjourn to Camp Fire's national headquarters in New York city for three days. Following the conference, a camp directors' course will be given under the leadership of Dr. Elbert K. Fretwell, of Columbia university, at Bear mountain in Palisade Interstate park. Among camp experts to assist in the course will be Charles F. Smith, Mrs. William Gould Vinal, Fay Welsh, E. Lawrence Palmer, and others.

The regular monthly meeting of the girls' council will be held at Camp Fire headquarters Monday, April 4, at 2:30 o'clock. Every council representative is expected to be present wearing a white middy and black tie, and carrying a note book and pencil and a written report of past activities.

The regular monthly meetnig of the board of directors will be held Tuesday, April 5, at 12:30 o'clock in the basement clubroom of the chamber of commerce. The president of the board, Mrs. Norman Sharp, requests that every member be present if possible. Reservations should be made by calling Camp Fire headquarters, Walnut 3577, by Monday.

Due to an extra meeting in March, because of the grand council fire, the committee of awards will not hold a meeting in April.

Several places are still open for the swimming course at the Y. W. C. A. in the Camp Fire class. Any girls interested can find out particulars by calling headquarters.

Mrs. Harry Hall gave an interesting lecture and demonstration in first aid at the meeting of the Swannanoa Camp Fire group of Decatur Junior High school, Tuesday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. J. Howell Green. Swannanoa has voted to sell vanilla extract and earn money to go to the summer camp of Camp Fire at Toccoa Falls.

Akiuphapi, of Highland school, held its first hike Saturday. Miss Marguerite Steedman, guardian of the girls, taught them to make candy apples. Wieners were roasted over the camp fire.

The Dejohi Camp Fire group of Decatur Junior High school gave a play, "The Returning of Rosalia," Saturday night. So well was it presented that they have been asked to repeat it. The girls were given a candy pulling at the home of Dorothy Busch Tuesday afternoon.

The Wetomachick Camp Fire Girls of E. P. Howell school gave a candy pulling at the school Thursday and cleared over $11. Miss Long, the guardian, has opened a savings account for the group and all money saved will be used for camp.

The Tems-kwah-ta-wah Camp Fire Girls of East Point accepted the invitation extended to them by Miss Pauline Trimble, director of the Tekedah camp for girls in Gainesville, and attended the camp exhibit at Rich's. While there they enjoyed the wonderful stunts put on by North and South Carolina and Georgia camps as well as the pictures from Camp Dixie and a very interesting lecture by Professor Sutton.

Agnes Lee Chapter Gives Valuable Books To Decatur Library

Mrs. W. A. Ozmer, president of Agnes Lee chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, announced that a valuable collection of books has been contributed by the chapter to the Decatur library. These will be placed on the Cora Holleyman bookshelf which was instituted by the chapter a year ago. The volumes presented to Agnes Lee chapter and turned over by it to the library are of great historic interest, are beautifully bound and will be an addition to the library.

Of particular interest are the gifts from former United States Senator, Rebecca Latimer Felton, of one of her own productions written after she was 82 years old, "Country Life in Georgia in the Days of My Youth," and "Awheel and Afoot in Europe," by Miss Mary S. Lockwood. Mrs. John S. Prather, of Brookhaven, has donated three volumes of "The Confederate Veteran" for the year 1921-22-23, which will be especially appreciated.

Mr. Mobley, one of Decatur's beloved veterans, also contributed some books of historic value.

Just The Washday Help You Need

Right at your door
On time, every week!

The modern businesslike way of handling your washing is simply to turn it over to the laundry route man. He brings right to your door the services of an institution that has done more than any other to take the drudgery out of the business of housekeeping.

No worrying with washwomen; no costly motor trips to take the washing "out;" no lugging of bundles to street car line and side street washing places; no calling for bundles; no delays in getting your laundry back; no uncertainty about quality of work. The laundry route man brings you a service that takes care of the whole job—always dependable, never failing.

Modern "quantity production methods" have brought your laundry's services down to such low cost levels that every family purse can afford them. Just pick up the phone and call your laundry. The route man will attend to all the rest.

Fat Is Not In Fashion

All styles call for slenderness, short skirts in particular. And most women, as you see, are meeting that requirement.

The easy, pleasant way is Marmola Prescription Tablets. They act by correcting the cause. No abnormal exercise or diet is required.

People have used them for 19 years. They have told and shown the results to others, and the use has grown. Now, in these days of slender figures, people are using Marmola in a very extensive way.

You see the results everywhere. Perhaps your own friends can tell them. If so, they will say that Marmola brought none but good effects.

Try this time-tested method, so widely employed today. Simply take four tablets daily and watch results. Stop when you reach proper weight. A method used by millions, and for 19 years, must be both right and effective. Learn, for your own sake, what so many know about it.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

SPRING time is really breath-taking. There is in every one's heart the desire to get out in the open and enjoy the many wonderous sights that are to be seen only at this time of the year.

Last Sunday I rode on the top deck of one of Atlanta's double-deck coaches and it was truly glorious. One specially beautiful sight along the ride was the dogwood in full bloom. The parks and drives were full of both the pink and white variety. The budding flowers of every hue and the myriad-colored birds, it is all so glorious that it makes one glad to be alive. I felt as though every breath I inhaled was a sort of tonic. I didn't realize that just resting lazily in a comfortable seat and riding along in the sunshine could make one feel so wonderful. And when I arrived at my destination I really felt refreshed and full of vitality.

Attractions that the top deck offers are too numerous to relate, but some of the things of interest along the different bus lines are the Ansley Park Golf Club, Morningside, Boulevard Park and the Governor's Mansion. Then should you care to ride the top deck of one of Atlanta's coaches to church you may do so for the bus lines either pass by or are within easy walking distance of quite a few churches, including the Baptist Tabernacle, First Baptist, Sacred Heart, First Methodist, All-Saints, North Avenue Presbyterian, St. Marks and Christian Science. You are missing a treat if you don't take the ride on the top deck of a coach to church.

Every Sunday and all through the spring and summer the double-deck coaches will be used in place of the single-deck coaches. These big busses are large and roomy and will seat 60 passengers, so there will be lots of room for everyone. Don't fail to take this ride today on either the Morningside or the Highland and Virginia lines—and I'm sure that you will agree with me that there is nothing that you would possibly enjoy more.

"Reversible Pile on Face," taking place with this as a novelty is "Pile on Face," which is transparent crepe of a complicated weave, which comes out silver on one side and gold on the other. Novelty fabrics and jacket ensembles contribute interest to spring dresses.

AT the Fifth Avenue Linen store you will find rare old linens from the looms of masters at the art of weaving the fibre of the flax. Tapestries resembling those woven by the celebrated Gobelins of France, rich in all the rare old colors that blend so well in a tapestry, such as can be bought at the Linen Store, will be just the correct thing to add the needed touch to an incomplete room.

Should Milady be selecting her trousseau, this is the place to find the dainty laces and linens. Everything to make the new home she is to have a joyous place to live in. Then last, but not least, the piquant Japanese kimonos of gorgeous silks and satins, with their myriad-colored designs and their graceful flowing sleeves. What bride-to-be could resist the desire to buy these entrancing things? The Fifth Avenue Linen Store has established a name for itself in Atlanta for it's dependability, and now they are having an unusual sale of everythnig in their store for ten days, so why not avail yourself of the opportunity to buy wonderful things at very attractive prices during this period.

SPRINGTIME in all its glory prevails in the flower shop of Weinstocks, 8 Peachtree Arcade—entrance. The exquisite flowers of every variety are gracefully arranged by expert hands for any occasion. The shoulder corsage is the latest creation in the arranging of flowers for Madamoiselle's evening gown.

Easter is almost here and for Easter the lily is the most desired of all flowers. Why not remember some one who is dear to you and make this day a joyous memory for them by sending a beautiful basket or corsage of flowers. Call Weinstocks—WAL. 0908—and engage your flowers early.

WE all know that it is hard to find correct shoes for the growing girl, but Stewart's have just the right shoes for her. A girl at this age is just at the stage in life where she must not dress too old and yet she is not just a mere child any longer. So in order to have her appear dainty and graceful one must use taste and discrimination in selecting the correct, yet comfortable, footwear.

Stewart's have displayed in their window styles that are taken from the graceful sandals of ancient Greece, and yet are up-to-date and the correct thing for the chic girl of today. These shoes are of patent leather and have blond and lizard saddles and heels. The price is $7.00. The wise mother will appreciate and understand the value of these shoes.

I WANT to tell you of a feature of Rich's store that will be of interest to anyone who can appreciate good values. It is the line of CAROLYN dresses, wraps, kimonos and lingerie. The silk lingerie is exquisite, of beautiful material that will last, and is priced from $5.00 to $16.95. This underwear is from $2.00 to $5.00 cheaper than other makes of the same quality.

In the Medium Price Shop the CAROLYN dresses are "ultra chic" and of fine material and workmanship, in keeping with the standard that M. Rich & Bros. live up to. These frocks are $39.50 and the CAROLYN wraps are $49.50. The "Miss Carolyn" dresses are $25 and the "Miss Carolyn" coats are $39.50. These dresses and coats are sold from $5.00 to $10.00 less than other dresses of same quality of other makes. The Carolyn kimonos are priced at $16.50.

Rich also carries the Carolyn line of dresses and coats in the Sub Deb Department. The Carolyn, Jr., coats are priced at $39.50 and the dresses at $25. These are wonderful dresses and coats and can be appreciated all the more when you know that they can be sold cheaper than others of the same quality because it is the result of group buying. There are forty stores in America that belong to the Carolyn group and one stylist is selected from each store to pass on the styles before they are bought and they must come up to the Carolyn standard in every way or they will be rejected. These styles are passed upon once a month.

Oconee Chapter Makes Plans for Memorial Day

The March meeting of the Oconee chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, was held at the home of Mrs. W. T. Simmons on Church street and assembled a large number of members of the local chapter with several visiting daughters from other cities.

The president, Mrs. Bashinski, was in the chair. The singing of "Dixie" in concert was a feature of the opening exercise and the usual preliminaries followed.

The president's report showed continued activity along all lines of endeavor sponsored by the U. D. C.'s, and much individual work done by the president for her organization during the last month. Splendid reports came from other officers and standing committees.

Plans were made for entertaining veterans and legionnaires on Memorial day. The requirements of the star chapters were read, the red silk flag with its gold star bearing evidence that the Oconee chapter had reached its goal.

The assembly voted to sponsor an entertainment by Mercer Glee club April 1. Notes of appreciation were read from other organizations, veterans and shut-ins for especial courtesies from the U. D. C.'s.

The program of the afternoon carried a clever one-act play given by five children from Miss Florence Simmons' grade at Johnson Street school. The March program from the yearbook gave the following numbers: "Jefferson County;" "Greensboro, a Lost Town;" "St. George Parish, a Nest of Royalists," Mrs. Jule Green; "Burning the Infamous Records With Fire From Heaven;" "The Old Slave Market," Mrs. J. W. Ward; music, selected, Mrs. Hughes Lord; "Distinguished Residence of Jefferson County," Mrs. Kendrick Moffett.

The Oconee chapter, U. D. C., has for many years manifested a lively interest in the preserving and transmitting undiminished the brave deeds of the southern soldiers. The knowledge of the school pupils has been greatly extended by the writing of essays yearly. Every pupil is required to write a essay this year. The subject is "Memorial Day: Its Origin and Its Meaning." The U. D. C.'s is sponsoring this essay in an effort to stimulate an interest in the study of history among the young people of the southern states.

Toombs Chapter Elects Officers.

The Robert Toombs chapter, Toomsboro, Ga., elected officers recently with the following result: President, Mrs. Victor Davidson, Irwinton; first vice president, Mrs. W. H. Freeman, Toomsboro; second vice president, Mrs. H. E. Stephens, Toomsboro; recording secretary, Mrs. Levi Cason, Toomsboro; registrar, Mrs. A. C. Todd, McIntyre, Ga.; corresponding secretary and treasurer, Addiegene Cason, and historian, Mrs. P. M. Jackson, R. F. D., Toomsboro.

Gresham Chapter Indorses Mrs. Bankston.

At the regular meeting of the James M. Gresham chapter, U. D. C., of Social Circle, Mrs. P. Trox Bankston, of Covington, was unanimously indorsed for state president, Georgia division, U. D. C. At this time Mrs. Bankston's efficiency and long service in the cause were greatly praised.

Calhoun Chapter Holds Meeting.

The hospitable home of Mrs. John A. Neal was thrown open to the members of the Calhoun chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, who held its March meeting at its president's home Tuesday afternoon.

The program, the subject of which was "The Blockade Runner," was of unusual interest and included an instructive paper on the subject of the program read by Mrs. Neal, with a clipping touching on this read by Miss Mamie Saxon, while Miss Bai Hall gave an interestinf talk on "The Blockade Runner." Delightful music was furnished by Mrs. T. W. Skelley and a vocal solo, "Take Me Back to Killarney," by Mrs. J. H. Paschall, was a pleasing close to this enjoyable program, which was followed by a short business session, including several topics brought up for discussion and decision.

State President Honored

Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, popular state president of U. D. C., who has received the signal honor of being appointed matron of honor for Georgia at the Confederate Veterans' reunion in Tampa, Fla., April 5 to 9.

Un Mot Ici, Est Bien

Mrs. J. J. HARRIS, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

Our division president, Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, continues to have honors showered upon her. Never at a loss for a word, at all times she is well poised, delightful in repartee, and scintillant in wit. Ever and anon the state editor receives a gentle admonition from our president not to exploit her but to bring out the work of the organization of which she is so justly proud. But a few items of interest regarding the activities planned for her are not amiss. She visited Bainbridge officially, and while there was entertained most elaborately by the United Daughters of the Confederacy, the Woman's club and the Daughters of the Revolution. Besides these functions many complimentary entertainments were given for her by friends. The same week she visited Vienna, where a reception was tendered her in the community house by the chapter after a meeting when she made an address. She made the record of six addresses in one week.

Mrs. McKenzie Honored.

She goes to Albany, April 26, and following will make visits to Thomasville, Quitman and Waycross, where she will deliver memorial addresses. The first week in May she goes to Barnesville and Hawkinsville. She has had 16 invitations to make Memorial day addresses. A crowning honor is that she has been made matron-of-honor for Georgia to the Confederate Veterans' reunion, which will be held in Tampa. She will speak at the official dinner given Wednesday evening at the reunion and will represent Georgia at that time. While in Florida she will make official visits as Georgia president to Jacksonville, Tallahassee and Miami, after which she will be a guest of honor at the P.-T. A. state convention, which will be held in Macon. She attended the biennial council of the Federation of Women's Clubs held in Albany last week as a guest of honor.

Our division registrar, Mrs. Harry Craig, of Augusta, calls attention to a few points which might facilitate the work of the chapter registrars. A careful study of the following points will help the chapter registrars along the lines necessary to get immediate return of papers.

Requirements: (1) Give full name of ancestor; no initials. (2) Maiden name and husband's name. (3) Letter of company. (4) Number of regiment. (5) State of enlistment. (6) Do not send stamps; send money order or check. (7) Division registrar does not issue certificates, nor does she supply application blanks, but is ready and anxious to help any chapter work on 100 per cent registration.

Music Club Convention.

It was the state editor's privilege last week to attend the state convention of Music clubs which was held in Milledgeville. While within its hospitable gates, which opened wide to receive a vast throng of musicians and music lovers, many beautiful festivities were anjoyed. Luncheons and teas were the order of the days, honoring the visitors by the Milledgeville Music club, Kiwanis, P.-T. A., Service Star Legion and American Legion Auxiliary, and the patriotic orders of Daughters of the American Revolution and United Daughters of the Confederacy. Mrs. Hatcher, president of the Milledgevillle hapter, spoke most delightfully of the chapter's activities.

It is of interest that Mrs. Hatcher's uncle, Charles Manley Stedman, who represents the tenth district in congress, fought for four years under the beloved leader, Robert E. Lee. Mr. Stedman has been reelected to congress and has the honor of having received more votes than any of his predecessors.

Mrs. S. G. Lang, Sandersville, sends a beautifully written article on the life of Colonel Lee Warthen, a most beloved veteran of Washington county, who has joined the immortal band on the other shore. We are greatly indebted to Mrs. Lang for this contribution and feel sure that it will be read with great interest by the members of the Georgia division.

Historical Literature.

Mrs. Ellison Gilmore states with justifiable pride that it has been necessary to have a second lot of historical literature printed. This means that our state has definitely decided to try for the Raines banner next year.

Miss Lillie Martin, who is indefatigable in historical work for the division, sends in the following important announcement: "Every Monday night at 8:45 o'clock, M. D. Boland will speak on 'American History From the Southern Viewpoint,' from station KMO, Washington. These talks are given in response to many requests from people who have heard Mr. Boland and they have said that they would like to hear more of the southern viewpoint."

Georgia Division Expresses Sympathy.

Sorrowing over the untimely death of Lee Trammell, Madison, the Georgia division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, desires to express its utmost sympathy and deep regret to Mrs. Trammell, an honored member of the executive board.

Miss Josephine Humphries who attends Wesleyan college in Macon, spent several days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Humphries on Fulton avenue.

Mrs. John D. Humphries entertained Tuesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Hale, wife of the Methodist minister. About forty ladies of the church were invited.

Miss Wilhemina Colley entertained Mrs. James D. Fulgham Tuesday at her home on Georgia avenue.

Mrs. O. D. Ashcraft has returned from a visit to Baltimore, Md.

D. B. Johnson has been confined to his home with influenza.

Mrs. Brown Tyler is visiting relatives in Newton county in the memory book.

Miss Sallie Mae Sockwell was appointed to write a resolution to Miss Millie Rutherford, commending her faithful work and expressing regret at her resignation.

A letter was read from the Fulton chapter indorsing Mrs. W. Trox Bankston for state president. By a rising vote the Covington chapter unanimously indorsed Mrs. Brankston, and a committee, composed of Mrs. C. A. Sockwell, Mrs. J. C. Upshaw and Mrs. R. A. Norris, was appointed to send out resolutions asking other chapters in the state to indorse and support Mrs. Bankston.

A number of new names were presented for membership. Mrs. Luke Robinson, Mrs. E. M. Piper and Mrs. Walker Combs were appointed a nominating committee for officers.

At the close of the business session the meeting was turned over to the entertainment committee, with Mrs. C. A. Sockwell, chairman, who presented the following interesting program: Violin solo, Mrs. James Carter Anderson, accompanied by Mrs Harry Davis at the piano; Bulloch county, Mrs. C. A. Sockwell; history of Archibald Bulloch, Mrs. E. S. Stevens; violin solo, Mrs. Anderson accompanied by Mrs. Harry Davis.

Mrs. Long Writes Biography Of Col. Richard Lee Warthen

BY SALLIE M. LANG.

The subject of this sketch, Richard Lee Warthen, was born in 1827 in Washington county, near the little town of Warthen, which town was named for his father. The boyhood of Mr. Warthen was spent in this county. When old enough he attended Oglethorpe university, at which time this university was located near Milledgeville, Ga. He represented Washington county in the legislature of Georgia, afterward the district in the Georgia senate.

While in the legislature Mr. Warthen and Captain Seaborn A. H. Jones introduced the bill for appropriation of money to erect the monument to Georgia's first governor, Jared Irwin. This monument now stands on courthouse square, in Sandersville.

Valiant Soldier.

He was a veteran of the war between the states, being a member of Stephens' battalion; afterwards he was adjutant general, Carswell's staff, Georgia militia.

In 1877 the county of Washington was represented in the constitutional convention by Mr. Warthen and Dr. H. N. Hollifield. Mr. Warthen practiced law in Sandersville from 1849 to 1876, when, on account of ill health, he retired from practice.

For many years Mr. Warthen lived on his farm, five miles north of Sandersville, on the Warthen road. His overseer looked after the household needs, as Mr. Warthen never married. From the farm he rode to and from his law office in Sandersville on horseback. A few years after his return from the war between the states he moved into the city of Sandersville. Here he built an office from Washington county hand-pressed bricks. This building is now standing on the south side of the public square. In his room here he passed away in April, 1914. This office-home building will long be preserved as an historic landmark of the earlier days of Washington county; as this property was purchased in June, 1925, by the Transylvania club, to eventually be used by that club as a public library.

Earnest Student.

A quiet, reserved, yet genial man, Colonel Warthen was an earnest student. He read and studied much of his time and was a source of accurate far-reaching information to all who approached him for inquiry. Farming and nature in all phases interested him deeply. Early in life he became greatly interested in the preservation of natural forests and reforestation. He knew the value of trees to climate and soil.

Mr. Warthen was one of the first citizens of Washington county to realize the value of pecan nuts and other nuts indigenous to this soil. Today the money from the pecan crop in Washington county is of enough cash value to be reckoned on as with potatoes, beans and corn.

All his life Colonel Warthen was a man of frugal habits, teaching the lesson of saving. He was liberal to those who sought his help in procuring an education, believing most profoundly in the broadened intellect to make good citizens and build up the county, the state and the nation. An upright man, a good citizen, a valiant soldier rests on the other side awaiting the coming of those he left when he answered the long call.

Covington Chapter Indorse Mrs. Bankston For State President

The regular monthly meeting of the Covington chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, was held at the library Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, Mrs. W. Trox Bankston, president, in the chair.

Mrs. R. E. Everitt reported several papers sent and demit sent to Miss Maggie Webb, former active member of this chapter, now of Atlanta.

Mrs. Mac Pope, treasurer, reported $73.64 balance in treasury. Mrs. W. T. Thomas reported several baskets of fruit sent, aid given an old colored veteran and one floral offering sent.

Mrs. R. F. Taylor, chairman of the picture show committee, reported $40.05 realized on the "Winning of Barbara Worth" and on motion the corresponding secretary was instructed to write a note of thanks to T. F. Ware, owner of the Star theater, thanking him for his cooperation.

Mrs. Fitzhugh Lee was introduced as the new chairman of the founders' roll of the Stone Mountain memorial, succeeding Mrs. Fitz Heard, resigned. It was decided to enroll all living

Georgia President's Report Made Before Albany Council

BY MRS. A. P. BRANTLEY,
President Georgia Federation.

At the close of another year as your president, it gives me pleasure to present to you a review of the accomplishments of that period and to sum up for you the progress of the Georgia federation during this busy year.

Since my last report to you I have attended six district meetings, a meeting of the program committee in Albany; have made visits to several clubs by invitation and attended the meeting of the southeastern council in Charleston in November. I have held the two regular meetings of the executive board and several meetings of the advisory and finance comittees. In May I attended the biennial convention of the general federation at Atlantic City, attending there two meetings of the executive board of the general federation, two conferences of state presidents, served on the nominating committee and attended every meeting of the convention during every day I was there, including the beautiful and impressive memorial service on Sunday afternoon. These meetings were constructive and inspiring and one could not fail to be impressed with the high esteem in which the work of the federated clubs is held, being represented, as it was, by members from the Pacific to the Atlantic ocean, from Alaska to Florida, and a number of foreign countries. Our president, Mrs. Sherman, again gave evidence of her ability as a presiding officer and inspired all who listened to her deliberations with a high regard for her executive ability and a realization of her fairness and justice.

Visits Model Home.

In October it was my pleasure to visit the model American home, at Riverdale, N. Y., by invitation of the New York Federation of Women's Clubs, and the New York City Federation, who sponsored this exhibit. The following two days it was my privilege to be the guest again of these two organiaztions at an art pilgrimage through the American wing of the Metropolitan Art gallery and the Grand Central galleries. These pilgrimages were followed by folk songs and folk dancing at the Town Hall, where luncheon was served on the first day, and on the second day at the Commodore hotel, followed by the visit to the Grand Central galleries On this ocasion Georgia extended congratulations to the New York State and City Federations for this forward step along cultural lines and it is my hope that before the close of this administration my wish may be gratified and such pilgrimages will be given by the Georgia Federation, in conjunction with the Atlanta and Savannah women's federations, through the Telfair Art gallery, of Savannah, which has for years exerted such a wide cultural influence, and through the High Museum of Art, in Atlanta, which even in its beginning gives promise of a widespread influence. With these two splendid mediums geographically situated as they are, we may reasonably hope to see a love of the beautiful in art grow in our state, and especially do we hope the young people and the children may be included in the plans of these institutions in the future. Two weeks later your president spoke by invitation at the regular meeting of the New York City Federation, a gathering composed of 2,000 thinking, earnest women. At this time she extended greetings and good wishes from Georgia Federation. After the association of these days with the New York clubwomen and the many courtesies extended by them, there was a feeling of being as much at home, almost, as with the clubwomen of Georgia. In this work we realize that no matter from how far we come, and what may be doing locally in the great things of the federation we are united.

The board meeting in Washington in January was full of interest and instruction. The meetings were held in our headquarters, which is a splendid home. All clubwomen are welcomed there. In addition to the regular sessions of the board, which were held morning, afternoon and evening, I attended three conferences of state presidents, which proved very instructive and helpful. In carrying on this work and fulfilling these engagements, approximately 7,000 miles have been traveled, 800 letters and cards written and the better part of days too numerous to mention spent. We are so constantly being asked by organizations and enterprises to indorse every sort of work, that letters must be answered very carefully, as it is our plan to adhere to our own important work, although we have always cooperated where it is desirable to do so.

Most of the departments of our work are functioning well at this time, but we still have resignations which are a drawback, and I again remind clubwomen of the importance of weighing well the responsibility of a chairmanship before accepting it, and, having done so, to do their best and work to the end. The chairman who writes her president after a few months that she had hoped to "carry on, but now finds it wholly impossible to do so," is a great disadvantage to the work.

The reports of the chairmen of the various departments and endowments speak for themselves. The student aid, under the able leadership of Mrs. H. B. Wey, continues its good work with increasing results from year to year.

State Headquarters.

State headquarters, at 560 Chamber of Commerce, Atlanta, with a capable secretary, continues to be of value to our work and clubwomen are urged to avail themselves of the many advantages to their work offered through this central agency. The decision of the executive board to continue the Ella F. White memorial fund was a valuable step, being intended, as it is, to finance the federation, and it should meet with the hearty support of every club member—for as our work grows and expands our needs are correspondingly increased and we are still limited by our income.

Great interest is manifested in the work of the federation from every standpoint, and we have reason to believe that never has there been more active interest than at this time. That we are increasing in membership and strength is indicated by the number of new clubs federated during the year just ended. Most gratifying is the increasing interest in the Tallulah Falls Industrial school, which is our greatest achievement in the past and will continue to be the object of our most earnest endeavors in the future. It is an accomplishment so worth while that we are not only proud to call it ours but feel that it is a rich heritage to bequeath the clubwomen of the future, feeling sure they will realize its value to humanity and continue to carry on this splendid work. The completion, within a few weeks, last fall, of the Passie Fenton Ottley endowment fund of $30,000 was a substantial evidence of the faith the friends of education have in our school and the two splendid entertainments given for this fund in September and one recently for the school, both netting a substantial sum of many thousands of dollars for our school, brings to us very clearly the fact that this greatest asset of Georgia Federation is appreciated by others than our members.

Georgia continues strong in her relations to the general federation, being represented on the executive board, and through her universal membership which is being so largely represented in the biennials. This year we have contributed $100 to maintenance of general federation headquarters and have made the final payment on our indebtedness to general federation headquarters, which was made possible by the generous responses of individuals and clubs, partly in response to a final appeal from your president that she might enjoy the last year of her administration without any debt over our organization. This was highly appreciated.

Makes Recommendations.

In conclusion and for your earnest consideration, I make the following recommendations, some made previously, but which I hope may continue to prove valuable. Study the year book, that you may be informed on the vital points of our work. Read the official club page, that you may know what is happening every week. Continue to cooperate with all authorized agencies in furthering the illiteracy campaign. Support the Ella F. White fund. Continued and never failing interest in the financial support of the Tallulah Falls Industrial school, and a heart interest in this great humanitarian work.

Continued efforts in behalf of the rural woman by county federation and other means for her help and interest. Intensified interest in club extensions. Junior members, the hope of clubwomen for the future, should be one of our strongest appeals—next to the American home—these two departments being the foundation of everything good we try to accomplish. District club institutes and district citizenship institutes—in addition to our club institute at the University of Georgia. I further recommend each club to start one piece of community work each year.

Finally, study the club work from every angle, work for it in every way, love it and interest everyone you can in it. Cultivate the spirit of the federation and let us make this last year of our work together one of great constructive effort. I appreciate more than I can express the loyalty of the clubwomen to me, and thank them for their ready compliance to my requests at all times and for their many evidences of good will.

Generous Gift For Tallulah.

The eighth district is in receipt of a check for $25 from the firm of Michael Brothers, of Athens, to be applied to Tallulah maintenance, for which they are most grateful.

Michael Brothers is one of the pioneer firms of Georgia, and have ever stood ready to assist in the advancement of every worthy undertaking in the district and state at large. They have ever been the friend of education.

Supt. Land Speaks To Jackson Club On "Education"

A program on "Education" featured the meeting of the Jackson Woman's club. State Superintendent of Schools Land was the principal speaker and received a cordial welcome from his former home. He spoke on different phases of public school work, the teachers of the county being present as well as a large number of visitors and a representative group of club women.

Superintendent Land emphasized the importance, not only of accredited high schools, but of accredited elementary schools and pointed out the needs of advancement along educational lines in Georgia. Mrs. Orr, of the state department of vocational education, and Professor Cannon, of Georgia Tech vocational education department, gave talks. Mrs. R. H. Hankinson, of McDonough, who was a guest, commended the club of its interest in education and cooperation with the teachers of the county.

A social half hour was enjoyed with the hostesses, Mrs. Ida Hendrick, Mrs. W. B. Thompson, Mrs. J. M. Leach, Mrs. W. F. Malaier, Mrs. Bert Carmichael, Mrs. Victor Carmichael, Mrs. J. L. Lyons, Mrs. S. S. Copeland, Mrs. M. P. Lane, Mrs. T. H. Nolen, who served a delicious salad with iced tea.

After the minutes of the February meeting had been read the secretary read the annual report as it was read at the sixth district convention of the federated clubs, in Griffin, on March 19. This report was applauded for its work along a greater number of lines than any other club of the district and won the silver loving cup for having accomplished the most outstanding contribution to the community during the year. This contribution was the free provision of toxin anti-toxin administered to over two hundred white children and 103 colored. In addition to the contributions mentioned in the report, $33 were sent to the Ella F. White endowment fund, which is a worthy cause of the federation.

Ninth District Executive Board Met at Gainesville

The executive board of the ninth district met at the Princeton hotel in Gainesville, March 15, and in the absence of the president, Mrs. J. E. McElroy, the first vice president, Mrs. Hiram Flanigan, presided. Fourteen members responded to roll call, each chairman giving a brief report.

Mrs. Myron B. Allen, chairman of the year book committee, reported that year books were finished and mailed to each officer and chairman in the district; that year books contained all the information that it was possible to get the clubs and past officers and chairmen to furnish the committee. That information was obtained through requests from members of committee to all clubs and past officers and chairmen. If any club was left out of the directory it was because the committee could not hear from that club. A rising vote of thanks was given committee.

Mrs. McCurry, chairman of Tallulah Falls, reported that only eight clubs had sent contributions to Tallulah thus far, amounting to $57.50. She urged clubs to send in contributions at once.

Mrs. M. B. Allen, president of Hoschton Women's club, was called upon for date the Hoschton Women's club would want to entertain the district convention. Mrs. Allen and the Hoschton club members that were present retired from the room for a discussion and returned with report that they preferred to confer with the club before offering any date.

Mrs. Arthur DeLaperriere moved that we set a special day for the conventions. Motion seconded by Mrs. Hubert Yow and carried. Mrs. DeLaperriere made a motion that we hold our fall conventions the Wednesday after the first Sunday in October. The motion was seconded by Mrs. J. J. Harbon. Motion carried.

Mrs. J. E. Johnston reported that the Canton Woman's club is the only club in the ninth district sponsoring a Harmon play field. She offered literature to any club interested in this playground. Mrs. C. E. Pittman complimented the secretary on her accurate minutes. The members of the board agree with Mrs. Pittman.

Bainbridge Club Appoints Committee.

The lot offered by J. M. Simmons in Simmons extension to the Bainbridge Woman's club for a clubhouse has been accepted and the following building committee elected: Mrs. J. M. Simmons, Mrs. Otis L. Bell, Mrs. Z. B. Subers, Mrs. C. S. Hodges, Mrs. G. T. Tonge and Mrs. John E. Donalson. Mrs. A. B. Conger is president.

Cash donations are being offered the ladies and to give immediate boost to the treasury Manager McCorry, of the Albany (N. Y.) baseball club, whose team is in spring training here, will stage a game Thursday afternoon on the diamond at Centennial park with another visiting team. E. Blumenstein, of the Kiwanis club, is cooperating with Manager McCorry and the Woman's club to make the game net the ladies several hundred dollars. The clubhouse plans will call for a seating capacity of 200 guests, consulting rooms, kitchenette, etc.

Mrs. Hines Prepares Article On International Relations

Mrs. W. L. Hines, of Calhoun, seventh district chairman on international relations, whose excellent article is reproduced upon today's club page.

BY MRS. W. L. HINES,
Seventh District Chairman on International Relations.

In fulfillment of the trust bestowed upon me by Mrs. Charles B. McGarity, president Seventh District Federation of Women's Clubs, I wish to impress the importance of a study of international relations, a subject so vital at the present time to the lives and property of the whole world.

In quoting from Mrs. A. O. Granger, state chairman of international relations, we feel that the subject is explained in a nutshell, when she says: "One of the new questions of our lives is the attitude which we as women who wish to be helpful to our fellow citizens must bear toward our neighbors in other lands." These same neighbors are coming to our land in great flood-tides and we are told that their striving after better conditions in many instances, is pathetic in their earnestness to adapt themselves to our American customs. Thus we see that American ideals can be made helpful when directed through channels of kindness and good-will.

The biennial council of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs held in Albany, March 29, gave out the theme of the program, "Information Is Inspiration," a well-chosen topic, and I am sure when all clubwomen become informed on international relations, we will become mediums of inspiration. The newspapers and magazines are giving thought, time and space to suggestions and to the reviewing of convention proceedings. Our women's colleges and institutions of learning throughout this country are interested. It should be the united effort of all nations and people to "establish and maintain peace; no one wants war." Ignorance, prejudice, petty judgments, political complications and narrow conceptions of national interest obstruct unity of effort.

There has been prepared a number of leaflets internationally made comprehensive so that committees can scan the list in making a choice for study. Suggestions consist: First, contacts mainly non-political—treats of health, safety, the security of women and children, navigation, icebergs, Red Cross, postal service, etc.—all so interesting.

Second, international organization in special fields—commerce, Rotary, Kiwanis, international professions and technical bodies, surgeons and physicians, League of Women and international sports, etc.

Third, foreign students and other educational contacts.

There are foreign students at both West Point and Annapolis, not to speak of our own G. M. A. at College Park, Ga., and other institutions elsewhere, and we know that our students go to foreign countries.

Fourth, philanthropic, religious missions—denominational missions at home and in foreign fields, schools and hospitals.

Fifth, subject treats of trade and commerce. The second part of an outline for study has contacts mainly political. It consists of present-day diplomatic and consular service. The existing treaties and conventions of the United States, the International Court of Justice, the League of Nations, etc.

Then come the problems of the Pacific on the Philippines, Japan and China. These leaflets are recommended by a committee on "cause and cure of war." The Pan-American policy is a study of the manner in which the law in Latin-American countries differs from American and English law. The League of Nations—leading to the cooperation by the United States in all undertakings pertaining to the elimination of war without forming any "entangling alliances" as a very wise and just person warned in the long ago. As to how clubs are to find out about all this—we are instructed to make full use of local and state libraries. Secure information on our foreign trade from the chief clerk of the department of commerce, and to the diplomatic service from the chief clerk of the department of state, Washington, D. C. Write the World Peace Foundation, 40 Mt. Vernon street, Boston, Mass., for catalogue No. S, and supplement.

List Available.

This will give a list of publications available at reasonable prices. Our national president of Women's Clubs wants every club to possess at least one copy of "The Statistical Abstract of the United States," to be had from the public printer, Washington, D. C., for 75 cents. This is said to be a storehouse of exact data on many subjects, including our foreign trade, our debt and debt settlements, the cost of American wars and many other items of interest, including our outlays for war and peace. I hope the clubs will order and study this.

I also give a list of titles of pamphlets of great helpfulness which can be had for the asking, from Mrs. Rufus C. Dawes, chairman department of international relations, 1800 Sheridan road, Evanston, Ill., or from our Georgia chairman of international relations, Mrs. A. O. Granger, Elizabeth street, Atlanta, Ga. Write for the following leaflets:

"Proposed Outline of Study," "Intelligent Patriotism," "Steps Toward Preserving Peace," "The International Ice Patrol" (all so very interesting), "For the Healing of the Nations"—a joint program of the department of international relations and of public welfare.

I trust that these suggestions may be of help to the clubs in their study

State President Gives Response To Welcome at Albany

In giving the response to the address of welcome at the second biennial council at Albany last week, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, state president, said:

"This council of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs marks a red letter day in our distinguished history of many notable days. It was in this cultured and preeminently progressive city of Albany that much of our most far-reaching clubwork was inaugurated and here leaders commissioned to stand within the gates of public opinion and speak for us in the great departments of woman's work in the federation. And so we have come from the near and far reaches of this vast commonwealth of Georgia to take counsel together in our work for humanity.

"Many of us have known and long loved you, beautiful Albany, so lovely in your hospitality, so fair in your fascinating environment, so rich in the graces of heart and mind and soul that truly make your city great. It means much to be welcomed into the midst of such a people. It is with a recognition of great indebtedness that we remind you that our club history has its roots deep down in the records of this fair city, drawing from this fertile soil of your heart and brain rich elements of federation life.

"It is a great privilege to represent this evening this great organization you are so signally honoring in these noble tributes from organizations and citizenry of world-wide sympathies. It is inspiring to receive this hearty appreciation of the service of the federation and to receive your handclasp in cordial good fellowship. Your words of welcome have interpreted the spirit of the federation in terms of your own sense of its usefulness.

One might wish to be an inspired club Beethoven to weave all these wondrous harmonies of mankind so eloquently voiced tonight by these gifted speakers of welcome into one matchless symphony of the woman's soul in its highest expression of sacrifice through service to humanity. And would I not love to enshrine for all time the charming motif of your beautiful welcome to the hearts and homes of Albany."

Dallas Institute Was Helpful To Georgia Clubwomen

BY MRS. ALONZO RICHARDSON,
Director for Georgia in General Federation.

The club institute held in Dallas, March 18, was productive of much that was fine and helpful for the clubs represented. The institute was held in the beautiful little Dallas club home, presided over by Mrs. McGarrity, district president. Representatives from Dallas club, Beulah and other near-by communities were present, each bringing that which was helpful along lines of club activities. As has been said before, it seems that in each district there are community needs which are so surely and adequately met by the organized women that it is an inspiration to go to these meetings, see these efforts which are so highly successful.

Every phase of club work was discussed, the director presenting the general federation and afterward answering any questions regarding state and general federation assistance and program. Mrs. Farmer presented concrete plans for help for the rural women and Mrs. W. C. Jarnagin gave explicit instructions as to "how," "why" and "when" club publicity is "news" and is valuable, with definite instruction as to the manner of its presentation in the most acceptable way to the newspapers.

The reports from Beulah, a rural club, were especially notable, in that two very charming junior delegates were present, with the report of the consolidation of three schools, made possible through the efforts of the clubwomen; the plan now under way to build a teachers home, up to date in every respect, which will also be used as a model home. Misses Campbell, of Beulah, were these charming sisters representing their junior club. Their enthusiasm, guided by the sponsorship of the adult club, has already borne fruit in splendid achievement, with the promise of much more.

The afternoon closed with a delightful social hour, bringing together the visitors and Dallas women in an informal way, which in reality was a continuance of the club institute.

Many district institutes are planned, we are informed, and in the opinion of the director, there is no better way to increase club interest. The definite instruction, definite plans given at these meetings, mean not only increased interest but increased efficiency. The institute at Dallas was typical of what such meetings can mean to a district, and Mrs. McGarrity deserves all praise for its inception and conduct.

Crawford Club Holds Thrift Meeting.

The Crawford Woman's club announces that the proceeds of the play given by the husbands was $35, total on hand $54.29. A motion was made that the treasurer pay $50 on the clubhouse note, which brings the total indebtedness down to $250. The corresponding secretary, Mrs. L. Carter, was authorized to purchase new song books for the musical department. Mrs. Wise Hansford is a new member. The subject for the meeting was "Thrift," prepared by Mrs. L. L. Whitley and Mrs. J. F. Mayo.

A number of articles were on display, the most interesting of which were the hand crocheted rugs made by Mrs. R. O. Smith and Mrs. L. Carter. The program was as follows: "The Habit of Economizing," Mrs. Blanchard; "Thrift of Time," Mrs. Comer Perry; "Living at High Pressure," Mrs. J. F. Wilson, and "Thrift Resources," Mrs. Jake England.

Mrs. L. Carter and Mrs. Jake England served a thrift luncheon, consisting of everything used in the preparation of the luncheon consisted of home products.

The Crawford Woman's club served a plate luncheon to Oglethorpe County Teachers' institute, held March 11, in the school building, serving the county board of education, the trustees and faculty of Crawford High school.

Mrs. Sherman's Council Speech Reproduced on Club Page Today

The following address was delivered by Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the general federation at the second biennial council of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs, held last week in Albany.

"At the outset of this administration in 1924 I announced that the keynote of the administration would be the American home. I have at all times held it up as the nation's most important industry; the industry for which all other industries are run; the industry from which the nation must draw both raw materials and the finished products of its citizenship. Our first effort was to find out whether the machinery in this great industry is all that it should and can be. To do this a nationwide home equipment survey was conducted by the club women. The president of the United States, Secretary Hoover and Secretary Jardine gave public and private endorsement to this great project. The survey covered nearly 8,000,000 of our urban homes in sections of every state in the union.

Family Life Embellished.

"While I take deep joy in the revealed increase in the embellishments of family life, the more radios, the more library facilities, the more telephones, the more wired homes, I am amazed and dismayed at the revelation that the primary essentials of efficient home making, running water and the fundamentals of household sanitation, proper sewage and drainage disposal lag so far behind in the march of progress. Over 8,500 incorporated towns, or 40 per cent, are without public sewer systems while less than 10 per cent are without library facilities. Some of these sewerless towns have populations of from 25,000 to 50,000. Now we do not want fewer libraries, but we do want to outlaw the outhouse. More than half of our urban homes have automobiles and telephones. Phonographs and pianos are in nearly half the homes, and the radio in nearly a quarter. I, in no sense, decry these conveniences and pleasures, but I am declaring for more bath tubs, washing machines, water heaters, flush toilets and kitchen sinks with running water.

Incorporated Towns.

"There are approximately 4,000 incorporated towns of under 5,000 population in the United States that have no water supply. In these towns there are over 1,000,000 homes into which the water carried for ordinary family use amounts to at least 20,000,000 tons a year. Who is carrying it? Is not the great industry of the American home sadly out of proportion with other industries when there are nearly 2,500,000 urban dwellings in this country in which every home maker has to do her work without the convenience of a kitchen sink with running water, where there are over 2,500,000 dwellings without any flush toilets, where there are nearly 4,250,000 dwellings without stationary wash bowls with running water and over 4,500,000 without bathtubs? When nearly 3,500,000 families are without the indispensable assistance of electric lights, when in over 6,333,333 homes the old fashioned flat iron is used instead of the comparatively inexpensive electric iron. Remember these are the homes in incorporated cities and towns and do not include the isolated farms!

"Only a third of our homes have electric vacuum cleaners, only a third have stationary laundry tubs, not a quarter of the families have electric sewing machines, ranges, ironers, dishwashers and refrigerators are conspicuous, chiefly, by their absence. If every home maker in our 26,750,000 families received $15 a week for her services, the amount paid out as wages in the home workshop would be well over a million dollars a day. Services worth more than a third of a billion dollars is given freely to our American homes. Wages are neither asked nor expected, but are not these home makers entitled to the benefits of the time and labor-saving devices which modern science and discovery have made available?

"Notwithstanding this tremendous service contributed unceasingly to the welfare of the nation by the home makers, they are listed in our census as having no occupation and no record is taken of the sort of equipment with which our homes, the workshops of the greatest industry of the country, are supplied. We are asking the next congress to have the 32,333,333 women now classified as having "no occupation," added to the 7,500,000 women who are considered gainfully employed, and that they be designated as home makers. We are further asking that facts on home equipment also be listed in the census.

Urban Survey.

With the urban survey completed we are ready for our next step, the "follow-up" campaign; the object of which is to remedy some of the defects revealed by the survey. While the leadership for this campaign will remain in the hands of the club women, its success is dependent upon its being a 50-50 cooperative effort on the part of men and women. It is necessary to have the interest and efforts of the men who manage and operate the publicly and privately owned utilities, who manufacture home equipment, who have the scientific and technical knowledge, who are officials of the urban communities and of the public press. The summary of the survey in each state sent to the president of that state Federation of Women's clubs, reveals what the conditions in that particular state are with regard to such community facilities as public water supply, water protection, public sewer systems, public garbage, ash and trash collection, gas, electricity and public libraries. It shows the home equipment with regard to water, plumbing, heating, gas and electric connections, including the various sorts of gas and electric labor-saving devices and it shows the family equipment of automobiles, telephones, pianos, phonographs and radios. Each state's report may be compared with that of the country as a whole or with that of neighboring states where conditions are similar. On the basis of this report the president of the state federation having called together a cooperating committee of men and women, plans are made for definite lines of work and of objects to be accomplished. The campaign is mapped out and action started.

"Vitally important as are all these facts and figures and plans concerning the physical equipment of the home, they and all that the General Federation of Women's clubs is doing or will do toward remedying the conditions that the survey has revealed, are merely a means to an end, the real objective being the raising of the mental and spiritual standards of the American home. Spiritual values and material equipment are so closely interwoven that to pull them apart is to destroy the fabric. No home, rich or poor, can produce the kind of citizens we need, unless the heads of the home, both men and women, have the time and strength and unshakable purpose to give to their children mental, moral and spiritual leadership, as well as proper physical development.

The American Child.

No woman who does not organize her home, so that the labor and drudgery of it is done well, but with the least possible amount of her time and strength, can fill her proper place in her family or in the life of her community. The more of her time that can be saved from meaningless drudgery, the more can be spent on the development of the home's chief product, the American child.

Mrs. Crapps Suggests Program On Illiteracy Campaign

The Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs is waging a campaign against illiteracy in Georgia. It is the duty of every club not actively engaged in this campaign to get into it. The field for work is great and active workers are needed.

Mrs. Crapps' Committee.

The state chairman of the division of illiteracy, Mrs. S. T. Crapps, of Fort Gaines, together with the following chairmen, is making a splendid beginning. The roster includes: the first district, Mrs. John Redd, Waynesboro; second district, Mrs. L. H. Browning, Norman Park; third district, Mrs. A. R. Ware, Unadilla; fourth district, Miss Bessie Jenkins, Chipley; fifth district, Mrs. A. G. Helmer, 11 Arthur street, Atlanta; sixth district, to be supplied; seventh district, Mrs. C. M. Harrie, Eton; eighth district, Mrs. R. L. Giles, Ocford; ninth district, to be supplied; tenth district, Miss Alma Videtto, 1252 Fifteenth street, Augusta; eleventh district, to be supplied; twelfth district, Mrs. Fred Whatley, McRae.

The following "suggestive program of work" is in the hands of the district chairmen. "This program can only be a success as the district chairmen, the local clubs and the individuals in the local clubs of Georgia make it a success. Will you do your part?" says Mrs. Crapps.

Suggestive Program.

Organization—(a) It is the duty of each district chairman of illiteracy to appoint in every club in her district a local chairman of illiteracy. (b) It is the duty of each local chairman to cooperate with the district chairman in conducting the work of illiteracy locally and to make regular reports to the district chairman.

Administration—(a) Each local chairman shall call on the county school superintendent for the following information: (1) Name and address of every county teacher, both white and colored. (b) Ask each superintendent to request the county teachers for their cooperation by: (1) having each teacher furnish the age, name and address of each child not in school in their vicinity between the ages of 6 to 18, but more especially between 8 and 14. (2) Having the teachers help to create sentiment against illiteracy by personal appeals. Note: While we have laws requiring school attendance law without public sentiment cannot be enforced. Stress this motto:

"It is not a shame not to know.
It is a shame not to learn."

(c) Each local chairman shall cooperate with her local paper by giving special articles for publication. Public sentiment can be created by writing articles and publishing them as often as seems practical. (d) Each local chairman shall cooperate with the local P.-T. A. chairman in the illiteracy work.

Note: You will find they have an illiteracy chairman who is endeavoring to do the same nature of work as the women's clubs. Jointly, a great work can be accomplished.

(e) Each local chairman is responsible for at least one club program on illiteracy a year. Special local conditions and needs, along with the state program, should be presented.

(f) Stress the education of the colored people. A great field of work can be covered here. The census of 1923 shows that we have very few white illiterates in most of the counties. Another census will be taken in 1928. It is very necessary that Georgia raise her standing among the other states on the question of illiteracy and the work among the colored people will determine our place.

The Georgia law requires this ("see Georgia state school items" October 1, 1924, section 171, on compulsory education.)

N. B. Copy of "Georgia state school items," October 1, 1924, may be secured from the department of education, state capitol, Atlanta, Ga.

Austell Club To Be Hostess To Cobb County Federation

The Austell Woman's club will be hostess to the Cobb County Federation of Women's Clubs April 7 at the Austell clubhouse.

A club institute will be held during the morning, and the afternoon will be occupied with the regular business session of the county federation.

The club membership is composed of a representative group of women who stand back of the federation and all it means and they are always ready to help with any movement which will be beneficial to the community.

The library, which was founded and is maintained entirely by the efforts of the club, is one of the civic assets of the community, and is in the clubhouse.

The officers of the Austell club are Mrs. May C. Harber, president; Mrs. C. D. Rutherford, first vice president; Mrs. J. M. Westmoreland, second vice president; Mrs. J. M. Strickland, recording secretary; Miss Pearl Winters, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. C. T. Perkerson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. L. Causey, treasurer, and Mrs. Charles Wallace, auditor.

Cobb County Federation Will Combine Club Institute Program

A meeting of the Cobb County Federation of Women's clubs and club institute combined, will be held at Austell, April 7.

This federation was organized at the Acworth club in 1921. Mrs. John M. Graham, of Marietta, was elected the first president, serving until her death in 1924. In January, 1925, Mrs. Herbert E. Hague was elected president, serving two years. Both Mrs. Graham and Mrs. Hague were efficient officers of the federation. Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, succeeded Mrs. Hague as president and much interesting work is being planned for the federation by this very competent and progressive leader.

The federation is composed of the following clubs: Springhill, Smyrna, Marietta, Austell, Kennesaw, Acworth and also the Marietta and Acworth Parent-Teachers associations. The officers are Mrs. E. M. Bailey, president; Mrs. Roland Russom, first vice president; Mrs. G. C. Green, second vice president; Mrs. A. B. Karwisch, treasurer; Mrs. L. M. Awtrey, secretary.

Mrs. Oscar Palmour Requests Clubs To Prepare Posters

Mrs. Oscar Palmour, president of the Fifth District Women's Clubs, requests all clubs and district chairmen to prepare entries for the annual poster contest. The posters will be exhibited and the prize awarded by Mrs. Palmour at the annual meeting in May at the Hapeville Woman's club. The award, a silver cup, was won when the fifth district made the best poster exhibit for two successive years at the state institute at Athens. The cup was held during 1926-27 by the Decatur Woman's club, that club having offered the best poster display in 1926. It will be passed on annually to the prize-winning club in the district.

Mrs. R. H. Lee, poster chairman of the fifth district, issues the following card: The posters will be judged along lines of arrangement, originality and subject matter. Lettering and neatness will count. The posters may range from hand-painted charts to cut-outs, each setting out some club accomplishment or teaching some club project. Each club is requested to enter the poster contest and to appoint a poster chairman. The duty of this chairman will be to assemble newspaper clippings and material, especially photographs, year books, departmental programs, pictures of club houses, of pageants, of flower shows and gardens and other activities of the club. Each club is limited to three posters of uniform size, 24 by 30 inches, and of flexible white cardboard. These rules and regulations were formed by a committee consisting of Mrs. H. G. Hastings, Mrs. J. R. Little and Mrs. William Candler, who were the judges in the last contest. For further information call Mrs. R. H. Lee, West 1784.

Twin Cities Presidents' Club Reports Important Activities

The Twin Cities Presidents' club assisted by Mesdames Wicker and Tanner.

The officers, district chairmen and club presidents of the Tenth District federation are in receipt of a communication from Mrs. W. B. Smith, tenth district president, informing them of the change in the time of the annual meeting to fall, which was made necessary by the action of the executive board of the Georgia federation. This change meets with the approval of the clubs of the hostess city of Louisville. Mrs. Smith urges a full representation of the clubs at the council meeting in Albany March 29 to April 1.

met in the suburban home of Mrs. N. J. Newsome, near Sandersville Saturday afternoon with 12 members in attendance, and the guest of honor, Mrs. E. Pierce Word, of West Palm Beach, Fla., a former resident of Sandersville.

Mrs. J. J. Harris was in the chair. The Anne Trippe Rambo library at Alto has quite a strong hold upon the affections of the members, who have responded enthusiastically to the president's appeal for books for shut-ins. Mrs. Colgate reported 14 books recently forwarded to Alto. Mrs. Jordan reported the unanimous indorsement by the grand jury of the Ellis health law.

Mrs. Charles E. Whiddon was named as president's alternate to represent the club at the biennial council to be held in Albany March 29 to April 1. As the regular election of club officers occurs in April a nominating committee was appointed as follows: Mrs. W. B. Smith, Mrs. Chas. E. Whiddon, Mrs. F. A. Wicker.

On the completion of business an hour of fun was indulged in. Laughing is an important part of life and the Presidents club has decided occasionally, to give its rightful place on the program, but to find out all that these dignified and august ladies do to create a laugh, it is necessary to become a president and join the club. Mrs. Newsome served refreshments.

Dawson Club Will Aid In Beautifying Cemetery

Committees from the city council and Dawson Woman's club have made extensive plans for beautifying Cedar Hill cemetery. The city has already purchased a heavy wire fence, which will enclose the cemetery and it will be erected at an early date. At the suggestion of members of the Woman's club further plans for building a rock wall across the front of the cemetery have been favorably received, and this will be done.

REAL ESTATE BOARD RAPS 'FREE-LOT' PLAN

Resolutions denouncing the "free lot" method of selling real estate were passed when directors of the Atlanta real estate board held a dinner meeting at the Atlanta Athletic club on Tuesday night, March 29.

Dana Belser, president, stated that it was one of the most constructive meetings ever held by the officers and directors, and that many important subjects pertaining to the real estate business in Atlanta were discussed and acted upon. The officers and directors at the meeting were, John J. Thompson, M. S. Rankin, M. H. Liebman, Robert R. Otis, M. C. Kiser, Frank C. Owens, H. H. Hallman, A. B. Cates and Dana Belser.

These expressed themselves as being highly pleased with the activities of the real estate board, which was shown by committee reports covering the work of advertising, of which committee C. D. Cabaniss is chairman; the retal estate sales course, of which E. M. Chapman is chairman, and the report of the membership committee, which announced election of the following new members: Weyman and Connors, 58 Marietta street; C. W. Greene, with Woods-Greene Realty company; Moe Goldman, W. E. Beckham, M. M. Ewing, Julian S. Furstenburg, John W. Longwell, Charles A. Ewing, all with J. H. Ewing and Sons; R. Q. Mizell, with Ward Wight and company, and R. T. David, with Druid Hills.

The matter of giving away free lots in selling some subdivisions was discussed. Complaints from people in Atlanta buying lots in this manner were heard and, after due deliberation, a resolution was passed opposing this method of selling real estate and offering the counsel and advice of the real estate board to all considering this medium of buying real estate.

The report from F. C. Owens, chairman of the finance committee, gave evidence that the financial condition of the real estate board today is sounder than ever. In a large measure it is due to prominence of real estate board appraisals which are filling a need with reference to sound, efficient and modern methods of appraising.

OGLESBY AUCTIONEERS OFF TO FLYING START

With the opening April 1 of the real estate auction season, the Oglesby Realty Auction company was reported as being off to a flying start.

John P. Oglesby, manager and auctioneer of the company, predicts an unusually prosperous trend in this season's business. One of the reasons for this, Oglesby said, is the tendency of banking concerns throughout this section to unload real estate holdings. "Many banks have adopted the attitude that they would rather be in the banking business than in the real estate business," the auctioneer declared.

"This year and during the latter part of last year a considerable part of our sales work has been obtained from the handling of bank properties. But our business is not confined to any one branch of the real estate market.

"While our headquarters are in Atlanta, our sales activities extended last year from the lower parts of Florida to the New Mexico border line. Last year we consummated eight sales in Texas, maintaining two representatives there. We expect the transactions to be at least as great there this season.

"An indication of the bright outlook for 1927 may be had from the fact that we now have 15 sales under way in Georgia. Among those close at hand are one in Social Circle Tuesday and another in Lithonia Saturday. We completed a large auction sale at Conyers Saturday."

Knoxville Banker Dies.

Knoxville, April 2.—(AP)—Hal S. Harris, vice president of the East Tennessee National bank since 1920 and a director since 1897, died suddenly at his home at Dandridge, Tenn., early this morning. His widow and two sisters survive. Funeral services will be conducted Sunday. Officers and directors of the bank will be pallbearers.

Massell Realty Company's New Office Marks New Era in Concern's History

With the recent opening by the Massell Realty company of its new offices at 15 Poplar street, off of Forsyth street, "real estate row," established by the movement which brought many of Atlanta's leading realty offices together in one section of the city, took a leap towards its completion.

At the same time the company's removal to the spacious ground-floor quarters marks another step forward in the progress that the firm has been making steadily since it was first started in 1912 by Ben J. Massell. The affiliation of L. I. Massell and S. A. Massell and the development of the firm into one of the largest organizations of its kind in the south, employing a large force of architects, engineers, construction experts and office personnel, is well known in real estate circles. The total considerations involved in the purchase, lease, sale and exchange of real estate by this firm during the 15-year period of its existence is estimated to be well in excess of $100,000,000.

Process Explained.

The real estate processes used by the company in gaining its prominence, and developed by Massell initiative as pioneers in those fields, have resulted in a new division of the real estate business. An idea of the type of business specialized in by the Massell company may be had from the following statement issued by S. A. Massell, secretary: "During the past 15 years this company has improved more vacant business property and constructed more commercial buildings in Atlanta than all other developers combined; it has taken long-term leasehold estates on more central and semi-central property in Atlanta than all other lessees combined; it has added more taxes to the city treasury as the result of the improvement of vacant property than any other concern in a similar field, and it has supplied, as owner, more commercial buildings for use in business enterprises than all other property owners in the field."

Another unique feature of the Massell business processes is the employment of other real estate firms as agents to negotiate all of its transactions. According to the company's officials, the use of outside agents in all its transactions has proved most successful, the company paying commissions on every sale or trade it makes. And so voluminous have been these dealings that special index page sheets in the land records of Fulton county have been printed and labeled "Massell." "There are several real estate agents in Atlanta who sell and trade Massell property exclusively, and there is a greater number of agents whose chief income is from commissions received from the Massell office," the official stated. As a result, each transaction of the company gives a double stimulus to the real estate field.

Owns Lumber Yard.

In addition to owning its own lumber yard and operating its own planing mill, making possible the erection of buildings at minimum cost, the success of the company is attributed to the officials' knowledge in selecting suitable property for improvement. "It has been the practice of the concern," Mr. Massell asserted, "to select only such property as will be in demand by tenants when improved and will appeal to investors after it has been fully developed and leased. To this end we prefer to buy desirable property at the full market price rather than undesirable property unsuited for improvement.

"We are constantly developing unimproved property for tenants according to their specifications. This property is then sold or traded to an investor for additional vacant business tracts, which in turn is improved and the process continued. In illustration of this process we can cite a few developments: Westinghouse Electric company, on Marietta street and Jones avenue; Buick Motor company, Spring street and Baltimore place; Fox Film corporation, 110 Walton street; NuGrape Company of America, 80 Nelson street; Oakland Motor company, Spring and Hunnicutt streets; Wilson & Co., 419 Whitehall street; Robert Fulton hotel, Luckie and Cone streets, and two score other buildings erected for firms of a similar character."

Outlook Bright.

In referring to the future outlook of the real estate field specialized in by the Massell Realty company, Mr. Massell struck an optimistic note. "We cannot be otherwise than optimistic when we consider the fact that we have under construction buildings aggregating in value more than $1,000,000 and negotiations are under way which will develop into another $1,000,000 building program." Another trend in the local real estate field pointed out by Mr. Massell is the increasing interest on the part of investors and developers in long-term leasehold estate for years—an extension of the real estate business that makes possible large developments that could not otherwise be undertaken.

"More individual fortunes have been made in real estate investments in Atlanta than in any other form of endeavor, and the same possibilities exist today as did in days gone by," Mr. Massell declared.

Supreme Court Hands Down Two Zoning Law Decisions

With provisions further extending or defining zoning policies now before the legislatures of a number of states, two decisions just handed down by the United States Supreme court became of special interest to constituent boards of the National Association of Real Estate boards who are taking an active part in the framing of zoning and planning laws so as best to conserve the real estate values of their communities.

Constitutionality of municipal restriction of land uses under the police power through the enactment of zoning ordinances has been upheld for the second time by the supreme court in the case of Beery vs. Houghton, handed down March 21. The court here upheld the constitutionality of the zoning ordinance of Minneapolis, in a case involving the right to build an apartment building in a neighborhood that had been restricted to single family residences. The plaintiff in the case had claimed that the ordinance violated articles five and fourteen of the constitution of the United States.

No written opinion was handed down in the case. The judgment rendered is in accord with the recent clear-cut decision of the court in the case of the Village of Euclid, Ohio, vs. Ambler Realty company.

Louisiana state and New Orleans municipal codes under which negroes are barred from residence in predominantly white communities where a majority of the white residents have not given their consent in writing have been held unconstitutional by a decision of the United States supreme court handed down March 14. The supreme court's ruling reverses a decision of the Louisiana state supreme court.

The New Orleans ordinance forbids the public authorities "from issuing a building permit for the construction of a residence for negro occupancy in a 'white community,' or for a white person in a 'negro community,' without the written consent of a majority of the persons of the opposite race inhabiting that community."

Further sections make it unlawful for any white person to establish his home or residence in a "negro community," or vice versa except on the written consent of a majority of the persons of the opposite race inhabiting that community.

As ground for the reversal the United States supreme court merely cited the case of Buchanan vs. Warley. This case, arising in Louisville, Ky., in 1917, involved an ordinance prohibiting negroes from occupying homes in blocks where the majority of residents were white.

The decision of the supreme court is held to remove all restrictions barring negroes from any residential section of New Orleans in which they wish to live.

A state-wide zoning enabling act for Maryland is urged by the real estate board of Baltimore for passage at the present session of the legislature.

The enabling act is recommended in preference to the constitutional amendment authorizing zoning, which would be provided in a bill now pending. The board has consulted with a nationally known expert on zoning legislation in preparation for recommending the best means for ultimately bringing about a reasonable and proper zoning system for Baltimore.

The supreme court of Maryland has held the previous zoning ordinance of the city unconstitutional.

A state-wide zoning enabling act for Nebraska extending permission for zoning to cities of not less than 5,000 inhabitants is before the Nebraska legislature.

Lecture Series To Be Launched Here Thursday

The first of the series of six lectures dealing with selling different types of real estate in Atlanta will be held at the office of the board, 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, April 7, according to Dana Belser, president.

E. M. Chapman, chairman of the real estate sales course, will be in charge of the meeting and W. A. Stokes, Jr., will be the principal speaker, his subject being "Preparations That Are Helpful in Beginning as a Real Estate Salesman."

The speaker has made a special study of this subject, and, from two years of actual practice following out an investigation on selling real estate, he is especially qualified to discuss this important subject.

Detailed announcements have been sent to all members of the board and at present more than 40 have registered to attend the course. A special invitation is issued all salesmen of firm members of the board to attend this series of lectures, and if they are not associate members to join and take advantage of this helpful activity.

The lectures will begin promptly at 4:30 o'clock and will last for one hour, 45 minutes being designated to the speaker and 15 minutes allowed for a general discussion of the subject under consideration by all present.

Those who have registered are requested to attend this meeting promptly.

2 Home Beautiful Houses Furnished By Philibosian

Stephen Philibosian, Inc., the well-known dealers in furniture, rugs and draperies, has provided the furniture and rugs for two of the homes beautiful in Avondale and one on Argonne drive.

These houses present a striking illustration of the beautiful effects that can be obtained by the proper selection of furniture and rugs and demonstrate how economically a home may be beautified.

"Exclusive, but not expensive," is the slogan this firm has adopted, and the public is urged to visit these houses and see a most comprehensive display of the most advanced ideas in home furnishings.

In not quite a year the firm of Stephen Philibosian, Inc., has established a patronage that covers the entire southeast. People from many different states have come to Atlanta and bought furniture from this firm, because they were unable to find the same quality merchandise in their own home town and because they also wanted to take advantage of the low cash prices this firm offers.

When the beautiful store at 581 Peachtree street opened last year, Stephen Philibosian announced that his policy would be to sell strictly for cash and to pass the saving thus affected along to his customers in lower prices. Results of this policy have proved beyond a doubt that the public will pay all cash, provided the difference in price warrants it.

One of the greatest factors in building the present business of Stephen Philibosian, Inc., is the magnificent quality of the merchandise on display.

In speaking of this, Stephen Philibosian said: "Regardless of how low the price on any piece of merchandise in stock, we insist that this merchandise be distinctive. It is our claim that the purchaser will be proud of anything bought at Philibosian's and it is with this idea in mind that our buyers visit the furniture and rug markets.

"With such quality merchandise it is easy for us to furnish a home beautiful in a most attractive manner and we urge everybody interested in beautifying their home to visit these houses. Many valuable ideas can thus be secured and it will prove time well spent."

O. O. HALE JOINS CRAIN COMPANY, IT IS ANNOUNCED

O. O. Hale, one of Atlanta's leading real estate salesmen and for two years salesmanager of the subdivision department of Smith and Rankin, has joined the Crain Realty company, it was announced Saturday.

Hale will deal in general sales transactions, including both residential and business properties. In both fields his knowledge is thorough and he is considered one of the most conservative principals of the real estate profession.

Mr. Hale is a native of Atlanta and has studied real estate developments from their sources. For four years he was connected with the old firm of Smith and Rankin, specializing in subdivisions and unimproved properties. He is particularly well acquainted with the large Morningside subdivision.

With the opening of spring activity in real estate fields, the Atlanta market holds as bright a future as has been witnessed here in many years, Mr. Hale stated in estimating the outlook. He expressed enthusiasm over his new connection, while members of the Crain Realty company were highly elated in obtaining the services of the experienced real estate man.

ADAMS-CATES COMPANY MAKES TWO NEW DEALS

Adams-Cates company announced two commercial leases recently concluded through their agency.

The deals were consummated as follows: For M. Yudelson and Sons, one-half of store at 95 Whitehall street, leased to M. Samuels and company, for a period of five years, starting May 16. The location will be used for a Dixie Shoe store.

John Low Smith Declares Market Is Substantial

John Low Smith, one of the best-known real estate figures in Atlanta and in the selling game since 1897, views the close of the first quarter of 1927 as indicative of an unusually substantial market in residential properties, according to figures based on sales activity of the newly organized firm bearing his name.

Mr. Smith started as a boy in the old firm of Smith & Higgins, later entering the real estate field and rising to the position of sales manager with the former Smith & Rankin Co. While his general knowledge of real estate in Atlanta and its vicinities is on the par with the best local property authorities, lately he has devoted his attention to the south side, where vast developed areas can be seen for which he has acted as broker.

This specialization is in line with his policy of keeping his personnel limited to the highest type of real estate salesmen, who are experts in the various fields to which they devote their energies. No deviation from the policy was tolerated in the organization of the company, Mr. Smith stated, and the company itself specialized in the sale of residential property exclusively.

The West End territory is handled for the John Low Smith company by A. J. Stewart, who has lived in Atlanta for 20 years, during which the greatest factors in Atlanta's development were in process of materialization. He has a clear understanding of these factors and is thoroughly acquainted with West End property.

W. T. Harrison, an Atlanta real estate salesman of long experience, is specializing in Morningside and Druid Hills property. He was a field salesman in Morningside for three years and knows the lay of the land by heart. He sold his first houses under Mr. Smith when the latter was sales manager for Smith & Rankin.

Dr. Roy B. Mowry recently came from the Hood Realty company, where he gained considerable popularity. He is handling Kirkwood, Decatur and other suburban properties, with which he is well acquainted.

GROBLI JOINS THOMPSON STAFF

Walter G. Grobli, popular Atlanta business man, has joined the selling staff of John J. Thompson, one of

WALTER G. GROBLI.

Atlanta's leading real estate firms, it was recently announced.

Mr. Grobli formerly was connected with The Constitution, holding a responsible position in the business office. He is a native of Atlanta, and besides having a large circle of acquaintances, has seen the city grow during its period of greatest development. Prior to his connection with The Constitution, which covers a span of three and a half years, he was in the fertilizer business.

Mr. Grobli will specialize in the sale of homes in all sections of Atlanta and suburban territory. The John J. Thompson firm is recognized in real estate quarters fo rits extensive aperations in residential properties, which will provide ample background for the development of Mr. Grobli's real estate tendencies.

For the past few weeks Mr. Grobli has been studying the new field into which he has entered. Prospects of the future seem bright and the realty market has an encouraging trend, he said. The market in residential properties has shown continued prosperity since the latter part of 1926 and the demand in that field is on the increase Mr. Grobli believes.

EPISCOPALIANS OF SOUTH WILL MEET IN MEMPHIS

Memphis, April 2.—(AP)—Lewis B. Franklin, of New York, vice president and treasurer of the Episcopal national council, will conduct a series of conferences in Calvary church here for five days beginning Monday, in which the world-wide program of the Protestant Episcopal church will be discussed.

The conferences are designed to inform the church membership in the south of the plans of the national council of the church for 1927, as outlined in the budget of $3,500,000 pledged for missionary efforts during the year. Church leaders in southern states are expected to be present.

Franklin will devote some of his time to discussing the church's problems in China as a result of disorders there.

Avondale Plans To Welcome "Home Beautiful" Visitors

:: TRAFFIC ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETED ::

Residents of Avondale Estates have planned a reception of cordial hospitality for "Home Beautiful" visitors in that new suburban city this week.

Arrangements for a continuous reception, as announced Saturday, include an invitation for every one to visit the Avondale Community club, the attractive social club of Avondale residents and property owners, which occupies an entire floor of the largest unit of the Old English building block and which is the center of a warm community spirit and colorful social activities of the new suburb.

Throughout the hours of the "Home Beautiful" exhibitions, groups of Avondale residents will be on hand at the club to greet visitors. Refreshments will be served and every detail of the occasion has been planned to provide a warm welcome in keeping with the spirit that has grown rapidly to be distinctive of Avondale.

These receptions at the Avondale club will reach their height each night with plans for a musical program. A popular orchestra has been engaged and it is planned that a gay tone be given the occasions, with opportunity for dancing by all.

The Avondale Community club, in existence less than a year, has been developed into one of the most attractively equipped and enthusiastically supported social clubs about Atlanta, with card rooms, billiard rooms, large lounges, music rooms, space for dancing, and a completely equipped, kitchen.

Traffic Plans Made.

In line with efforts to assure every degree of convenience and safety for "Home Beautiful" visitors, plans to avoid traffic congestion in the streets of Avondale Estates, where three of the exhibition homes are located, have been completed.

Five traffic policemen will be stationed at principal intersections to assure smooth guiding of the traffic flow and at the same time to point out to the visitor the location of the "Homes Beautiful" and other points of beauty in the new suburb.

Another arrangement to the same end of smooth travel will be the designation for "Home Beautiful Week" of Clarendon avenue as a one-way street. It is on Clarendon that two of the homes are located.

Building Labor Promises Cooperation, Says Writer

Building labor is adopting a more conciliatory attitude and, it would appear that the upward tendency in wages has been definitely checked in the opinion of A. W. Dickson, executive secretary of the National Association of Building Trade Employers.

Dickson, writing in the April issue of the American Builder-Economist, published by the American Bond and Mortgage company said that there "may be a few minor upward adjustments made later this year but in the main, the wage level of 1926 will be maintained throughout 1927."

"The demand for the five-day week," he said, "which the building trades led their employers to believe would be the major issue this year seems to have been abandoned for the time being at least.

"Contractors are of the opinion that the nation-wide opposition to the short week movement crystallized in the Pittsburgh conference of the National Association of Building Trades Employers last year played no small part in the abandonment of the effort to put the forty-hour week into effect in the construction industry this year.

"There are two major reasons why contractors do not anticipate any general wage increase this year. First, the building shortage which accumulated during the war has been met and there is not the pressing demand for new construction of former years. Second, the building public believes that wage rates in the building trades are already too high and any attempt to boost them still further would be met with a disposition to postpone work which will go ahead if present construction costs are prevented from increasing."

Dickson said that there was comparative peace throughout the building industry and "generally speaking the labor outlook this spring is much better than a year ago." He said that the recent collapse of the structural iron workers, steamfitters and cement finishers strike in Pittsburgh and the adoption of the American plan in San Francisco is indicative of the "changing attitude of labor on the question of wage increases."

"Up until this year when wage increases were refused by employers," he explained, "labor struck and in most instances the demands were met in whole or in part. But 1927 has witnessed an entirely different situation and labor has adopted a more conciliatory attitude than was the case in the past.

"It is true that there were a number of demands in certain trades whose agreements have expired or will expire in the next 30 or 60 days, but the demands were not accompanied with the same spirit of take it or leave it as before."

E. H. Temple, Jr., general manager of the Aberthaw company, of Boston, writing in the American Bond and Mortgage Builder-Economist said that a careful study of the building situation justified the opinion that 1927 "will see a volume of construction that will closely approach, if not equal, the volume of 1926 with the probability of variation in the proportion of each class of construction."

"In my opinion," he added, "an appreciable falling off in construction will occur only in connection with a sharp recession in business, which is not likely to occur this year."

He said that building costs were at the lowest point in three years and "there still may be a slight mid-season decline in prices of building materials, but that these will be partially offset by minor increases in labor rates and that the cost level of 1927 will be slightly lower than for the last year."

North Boulevard Park

"The Place To Live"

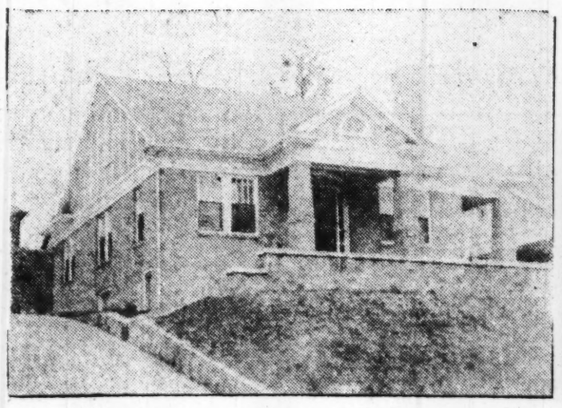

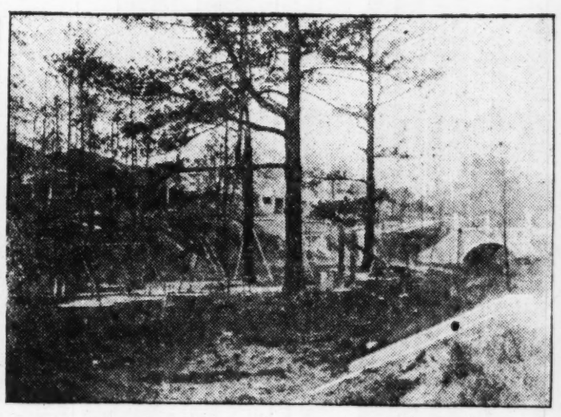

Location

NORTH BOULEVARD PARK is reached by following Orme Circle and Elkmont Drive from Park Drive across beautiful Meadow Brook Ridge, an architectural setting of rare charm. Come with us across this handsome structure. You will enjoy driving along the streets and absorbing the sheer beauty of the section. You will not be flagged down and importuned to buy.

Interesting Prices

Prices range from $2,250 to $3,000 and terms liberal to suit convenience of purchaser. The lots are 55 and 70 feet wide and of generous depth. These home-sites have all modern conveniences including water, gas, electric lights, and paved streets, all paid for.

A Group of Charming Scenes in North Boulevard Park

Ideal Home-Sites Are Available

For those who contemplate building. Nearly all of these lots face the beautiful city-owned park (shown in one of the above pictures) with nothing to cut your view of surroundings. From a woodland, the North Boulevard Park Company has wrought a place of residence that will appeal mightily to the homeseeker. Nothing similar to North Boulevard Park has ever been conceived and carried to such completeness. We could wish no greater tribute to the intrinsic value of North Boulevard Park property than the spontaneous approval of the homeseeking public which purchased the initial tract because of its location, accessibility, guaranteed development program.

A Home Is Your Most Cherished Possession—Take Care in the Selection of Its Location

When

North Boulevard Park was first opened to homeseekers, 464 lots were placed on the market. Today 464 high-type dwellings stand on this property. The select home sites we offer are adjacent to this phenomenal development and are governed by the same desirable restrictions.

A Ten Year

Program of continuous development is the buyer's guarantee of greatest permanent value. Progress and North Boulevard Park are synonymous. Enhancement is absolutely certain and sure.

We never cut a price on any lot, thus preserving your values.

Free Dinner on the Grounds
Band Concert Cash Prizes

Saturday, April 9th, beginning at 10:30 a. m. on the premises, we are going to sell at absolute auction to the highest bidder without reserve, 60 of the finest home sites ever offered to the buying public at auction.

This property, known as KIRKWOOD HEIGHTS, owned by Dr. S. W. Foster and Dr. Delos Hill, lies on and between McLendon avenue, Sutherland Drive and Scoville street, within the city limits of Atlanta. KIRKWOOD HEIGHTS is within one block of the car line, convenient to schools, churches and trading centers. All city conveniences are available.

Ten lots to be offered in this sale face the North Decatur car line and have all city conveniences. KIRKWOOD HEIGHTS is a home-owning community and is only one block from East Lake Drive, where some of Atlanta's most beautiful homes are to be found.

McLendon avenue is the straightest route between Atlanta and Decatur, and shortly the three intervening blocks (already graded) will be paved by the county, shortening the distance by one mile—McLendon avenue will then be a direct boulevard and property values are bound to enhance.

Home-seekers, builders, investors and others interested in real estate will do well to inspect this property before the day of sale. One of our representatives will gladly make appointments to show you.

MARVELOUS RESULTS and PHENOMENAL CURES

Appeal to all sufferers, especially if they have been unsuccessful in obtaining results and have been told that their diseases are incurable. Dr. Hughes is not a "cure all" by any means. He is an expert, dependable specialist of education and experience.

His reputation is firmly established, and his practice is conducted along the highest professional lines. No exaggerated or deceptive assertions or claims are allowed in his announcements.

He does not accept incurable or doubtful cases for treatment, but he must evidently be doing a wonderful work for sick and afflicted humanity; patients are singing his praise from far and near. These patients have received real results and they are happy to have the privilege of telling others.

Dr. Hughes is filling a long felt need in Atlanta and surrounding country. He is honestly and frankly advising all patients the proper course to pursue. He makes no false promises, neither does he hold out impossible hopes.

Dr. Hughes does not attempt to prescribe, diagnose or treat patients by mail—neither does he give glittering guarantees. If a case, in his opinion, is a curable one he will accept same for a nominal charge and arrange terms to suit patients' convenience. If you are suffering from any of the following diseases, call at once for free consultation and advice: Catarrh and all associated complications; Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Uric Acid, Gallstones, High Blood Pressure, Asthma, Epilepsy, Stomach, Liver, Kidney, Bladder and Prostatic Affections; Nerve, Blood and Skin diseases; Contracted diseases; burning and irritating discharges; Pelvic diseases peculiar to women (female weakness in all forms), Nervo-Vital diseases of men; Rectal diseases (non-surgical). CHRYSLER FEATURES SPARKLING COLORS

The new motor car color harmonies which were the outstanding features of the national automobile shows are making their sparkling and conspicuous appearance on the highways today. The wide range of colors in which the new cars are offered attains a high degree of artistry by the use of novel and strikingly harmonious blendings and combinations that run the gamut of the rainbow.

The shadings adopted for this spring's offerings trend strongly to the picturesque in names as well as in color tones. Chrysler engineers, who led the vogue for duotone color contrasts three years ago and who have evidently scored another success with the attractive and distinctive color distribution which made their cars the center of admiration at the national shows, call attention to the interesting significance and widely varied origins of many of the names the new colors bear.

Sporting events are represented, for instance, by three greens that adorn certain cars of the Chrysler family. Wills Green, Lenglen Green and Suzanne Green, which are to be seen on the current Chrysler "60" coupe and the Chrysler "50" landau sedan, among others.

English history, ancient and modern, is also represented in the greens, with a Robin Hood Green and a Haig Green, while American heroes are commemorated in Boone Brown and Crockett Brown, used on the cabriolet and the phaeton of the Chrysler "70" model.

Nature's tints are reproduced in such shades as mallard and box elder green, flamingo carmine, partridge cream, fallowfield brown, marine blue, desert sand and orchid. The popular roadster of the Chrysler "70" model carried these natural colorings with its main body shade of desert sand and trimming of box elder green. This car is striped with Egyptian red.

Other Chrysler colorings, as picturesquely named, include Pistache, Chalet and Armory greens; Canterbury, Bambalina, Peter Pan, Czarina and Trouville blues, and Timberlane, Plymouth, Sheraton and Monastery grays.

Firestone Entertains at Dinner

Firestone fleet owners and dealers for this district were guests last Tuesday at an elaborate banquet tendered them at the Henry Grady hotel by W. C. Harris, manager of Atlanta's Firestone branch. The banquet group, shown here, were entertained with six reels of motion pictures showing the Firestone product from its beginning in the Liberian rubber plantations to the completely wrapped tires and tubes at the plant in Akron, Ohio. This followed an enthusiastic business meeting.

Dunlop Tire Distributors Here

BIG INCREASE IN COACH TRAVEL

Evidence of the spread of motor coach travel and of the increasing popularity of this form of transportation is shown in orders received in the last few days from many sections of the country by the Yellow Truck & Coach Manufacturing company, of Chicago. This evidence is strengthened by the large proportion of "repeat" orders.

The west coast states are strongly represented in these orders. The Empress Taxi and Sightseeing company of Victoria, B. C., is adding a parlor coach to its existing fleet of Yellow parlor coaches. The Spokane Yellow Cab company is also increasing its fleet of Yellow coaches by the addition of another type "Y" parlor coach.

In Portland, Ore., the Yellow coach fleet operated by the Portland Electric Power company, already numbering some 15 city service coaches, is to be augmented by seven more of the gas-electric type.

The City Railway company, of Los Angeles, is receiving three more 29 passenger type "Z" city service coaches, and four of the double-deck type are nearing completion. This company already has ten Yellow coaches in service.

In the mountain states the Colorado Springs and Interurban Railway company, of Colorado Springs, which is operating eight Yellow coaches, is ordering two more of the type "X" city service coaches.

The Louisiana Electric company has ordered three more of the 21 passenger city coaches to add to the service now rendered by a fleet of six Yellow coaches of similar type.

In Oklahoma City, the Oklahoma City Railway company is buying four of the 21-passenger Yellow coaches to double the service which its present fleet is maintaining.

The Eastern Texas Electric company, of Beaumont, Texas, a Stone and Webster property, has purchased three 21-passenger city service coaches.

The De Camp Bus lines, of Livingston, N. J., one of the oldest operations in the country, has ordered five of the type "Z" 29-passenger Yellow coaches to addd to the service already given by other Yellow coach units.

In Wheeling, West Va., the Washington Transportation company, which is operating several Yellow parlor coaches, is about to receive one of the 21-passenger city service Yellow coaches.

Association's Notes.

The Atlanta Automobile Service Managers' association have arranged a very interesting program for their monthly meeting, to be held Thursday evening, April 7, 7 o'clock supper, Peacock cafe. Several subjects of vital concern to the service managers in their everyday work have been scheduled for round table discussion, and quite a bit of practical good is expected to be derived from this personal exchange of ideas by the service managers.

The Service Managers' association was organized about six months ago, under the sponsorship of the Atlanta Automobile association, and its membership is made up of the service managers and their assistants, of the automobile dealers who make up the membership of the Atlanta Automobile association. This gives the service managers an opportunity to mingle once a month, exchange their views, and to discuss many service problems and policies, the effect of which is to make each service manager much more useful and efficient in his particular job. The active management of the association is conducted through the office of the Atlanta Automobile association with C. V. Hohenstein, executive secretary. The present officers of the Service Managers' association are: J. W. Riser, president; J. M. Bohler, vice president; M. B. Wilkes secretary-treasurer.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Atlanta Automobile Sales Managers' association, it was unanimously decided to postpone the regular monthly meeting of the association, scheduled for Thursday, April 7, to Monday night, April 11, 6:30 o'clock, dinner, Capital City club. At that time Sir Charles F. Higham, of London, England, an advertising expert of international reputation, will address a joint meeting of the sales and advertising managers of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association and the Atlanta Automobile association. Sir Higham is one of the big world figures in advertising and salesmanship, and his accomplishments in the business world have been recognized, not only in Europe, but in America. He is one of the most prominent members of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. The subject of his address will be "How to Get the Most Out of Retail Advertising," and will be broad and comprehensive in its scope.

SERIES 115 BUICKS MOST POPULAR MODEL

Although now only in its third year as part of the Buick line, the series 115 group of six-cylinder valve-in-head Buicks has won a place equal in importance in the automobile market to that gained by the larger Buick models, according to C. W. Churchill, general sales manager.

The present series 115 car, formerly known as the Standard Six, is composed of eight models of widely varying fields of usefulness. The wheelbase is 114 1-2 inches, in accordance with the Buick policy of designating its models by wheelbase length. There are also three series 120 models and seven in the series 128 group.

The series 115 cars, Mr. Churchill says, accounted for at least half of the sales total of 250,000 cars reached by Buick in 1926. He ascribes this remarkable record to the fact that with the exception of minor details in finish and equipment, the series 115 cars are identical with their larger brothers of the series 120 and 128 class.

"The series 115 cars were introduced as 1925 models when we discovered that a six of proved design but of less size and weight would be acceptable to the public," Mr. Churchill said. "The chassis was built exactly like the larger, already established Buick, both in materials used and in design. Every Buick, regardless of size or price, has the six-cylinder, valve-in-head engine, mechanical four-wheel brakes, automatic heat control, the vacuum ventilator, counterbalanced crankshaft with torsion balancer and cantilever springs.

"A large proportion of the buyers of series 115 Buicks is made up of Buick owners who desire a second car of slightly smaller size but of equal quality and identical design. Two-car families may choose among the ten series 120 and 128 models and the eight series 115 models in selecting cars to meet their particular needs."

PROHIBITION RAIDERS KILL MISSISSIPPIAN

Clarksdale, Miss., April 2.—(AP)—Oliver Gill, who lived on the J. C. Lively place near Lakeview, Desoto county, was killed late today in a battle with prohibition officers from Clarksdale.

Officers reported that Gill resisted arrest when they raided what they declared was a 2,000 gallon still near Gill's home.

SIMPLICITY KEYNOTE IN SLEEVE VALVE MOTOR

Several mechanical principles embodied exclusively in sleeve-valve engines have enabled manufacturers of Knight-engined automobiles to lay claim to four important features not common to the usual poppet-valve-engined car. These features which embrace low up-keep, long life, smooth running and silent operation, are based upon one fundamental entering into the design of Knight engines—simplicity of valve mechanism. Passenger cars in this country employing sleeve-valve engines of this type are Willys-Knight, Stearns-Knight and Falcon-Knight.

It is due to the particular type of construction employed exclusively in Knight engines that makes it possible to combine the features simultaneously into a power plant which is suited for installation in any size or price of car. The four features referred to are probably the most important factors entering into the selection of a car and these should make a particularly strong appeal to those motorists not familiar with Knight-engined design.

In the Knight type of engine positively operated sleeves control the entry and exit of gases to the cylinders as compared with the spring-tensioned valves in the usual type of engine. By employing two sleeves for each cylinder to control the passages of the gases, over 150 parts are eliminated when comparing a six-cylinder Knight engine with a poppet-valve unit of a similar size. Outside of the cylinder design and the method of operating the sleeves, the construction of a Knight engine follows closely that used for other forms of internal combustion engines.

Two of the most important items contributing toward the expense of maintaining an automobile, carbon removal and valve regrinding are dispensed with in the Knight-type engine. It is estimated that the regular performance of these two operations alone which have to be performed regularly to insure maximum efficiency from a poppet-valve engine, is responsible for at least one half the upkeep cost for a car of this type. The sleeves in a Knight engine take the place of the valves in the usual form of engine and as the sleeves do no have any metal-to-metal contact between themselves or other parts of the engine due to the presence of a constant film of oil, they are not subjected to wear, carbon formation or require adjustment of any kind. The presence of carbon in the engine is more beneficial than harmful, as it helps to seal compression and thereby allows the engine to develop its full power at all times.

Again the sleeve method of valving assists in reducing vibration and noise. Their action is a simple, sliding motion working up and down inside one another in each cylinder. In the other forms of engines the valves are operated by a cam striking a plunger which in turn pushes up the valve. The latter are returned to their seats by a spring which often exerts a pressure as high as 100 pounds per square inch. The contacts of the two cams with the plungers and valves of each cylinder are a source of noise and vibration which is not evidenced with the method of sleeve operation in the Knight engines.

The officials of Willys-Overland, Inc., claim the life of a Knight engine should outlast that of a poppet-valve power plant, as all movements of a sleeve-valve engine are of the rotating or sliding motions with consequently little wear resulting. Of the 300,000 Knight-engined cars on the roads here today, no case is known where a car of this type has been scrapped because the power plant was worn out.

KITCHEN HELPED BY VIVID COLORS

BY GERTRUDE WOODCOCK

Several years ago "Come out of the kitchen" was a phrase that appealed to every housewife. And small wonder. The kitchens of a decade ago were indeed places to get out of at the slightest excuse. Dark, dingy and hard to keep looking clean, they offered no compensation for the dreary, humdrum tasks that had to be performed in their precincts.

Then the all-white kitchen made its appearance—a corollary of the modern mania for sanitation. But nowadays even hospitals, whose white inspired the housewife to simulate their apparent cleanliness, have realized that color, or lack of it, affects sanitation not at all. Modern hospitals are painting their walls pleasant, cheerful tones, knowing that the surfaces are just as sanitary and just as easy to keep clean, but much less of a strain upon eyes and nerves than the recently deposed all-white treatment.

If the housewife needs any justification for cheering up her kitchen, the example of the hospital is it. Certainly it is pleasanter to work in a stimulating, attractive room than in one which is either dark and gloomy or white and glaring. White paint is no more sanitary than red paint or blue paint or paint of any color. Any smooth painted surface is sanitary and washable. Since color plays so important a place in our lives and wields so great a psychological influence over us, it should be used to a much greater extent than has hitherto been done.

Definite, strong colors may be used in the kitchen. For the light, sunny kitchen a green or blue scheme might be used. The walls should be painted a pale green and the woodwork a jade tone. Curtains might be of chintz or calico, repeating the green tone of the walls and introducing orange or rose. If the floor is covered with linoleum it might be dark green in a checkered pattern. A rag rug in bright colors adds a cheerful note.

Tables or chairs in the green kitchen might be painted light tan, banded with green and orange.

There are a number of attractive color treatments that may be worked out with shades of blue. Gray-blue in a light shade is attractive for the walls. The woodwork might be ivory or Dutch blue slightly grayed. Gray linoleum looks well with this combination, while curtains should have a note of red-orange in them. Furniture in pale yellow banded with blue completes the arrangement.

The north or west kitchen presents a more intricate color problem than the kitchen into which sunlight streams all day. In the latter almost any color scheme is appropriate, providing it appeals to the lady of the house, but in the former care must be taken to keep the room cheerful. Cold colors, if used exclusively, make the room seem aloof and unfriendly. One of the most attractive treatments is to paint or cover the floor with linoleum in terra cotta color. Walls should be cream and woodwork light yellow or deeper cream. Yellow checked gingham curtains at the window introduce a sunny note. Any furniture in this room should be painted black striped with red and yellow. The effect of this color scheme is one of quaintness, but it is enormously cheerful, too, and lends a playhouse note that many women enjoy in their workshops.

Beyond a consideration of the location and exposure of the kitchen, no limitations are placed upon the selection of color schemes for the kitchen. It is largely a matter of the color preferences of the lady of the house, for, after all, the kitchen is her room, and should be arranged and decorated to please her.

Kitchen cabinets, with their multiple time and labor-saving devices, are now reckoned as necessary to the proper equipment of the modern kitchen as running water or the kitchen sink. Some of them come painted in delicate light tones and decorated with small floral designs, etc.

There is much talk nowadays about the science of housekeeping and homemaking. Nothing aids housework so much as a well-planned, easy-to-keep-clean kitchen. Beyond the fact that every housewife loves a bright, cheerful kitchen, she deserves it.

Sun Porches Important Part of Home

BY SUSAN ELLEN DODGE.

The sun porch, according to authorities on domestic architecture, is like the incandescent electric lamp or the phonograph, purely an American invention. Just when and where the first sun porch was built is hard to say but, shortly after Californians borrowed the bungalow style of residence construction from India, sun porches began to be very popular. As building of bungalows spread eastward, sun porches became more and more a distinct feature of American homes.

Today, sun porches, with screens for summer and glass sides for winter, are considered by many just as important a part of the home as the living room, dining room or bath. In fact, many families make more real use of their sun porch than they do of other parts of the house.

When spring has melted into summer and glazed sides have been replaced by screens, the sun porch is a charming spot for informal entertaining and, if equipped with two or three convenience outlets, can be readily used as an out-of-doors dining room. Is there anything more delightful during the summer than breakfast served on the sun porch? There is but one possible drawback—the nuisance of bringing food from the kitchen. This, however, is overcome by using table electrical apliances plugged into the convenience outlets. With these one may start the coffee percolating, the eggs cooking and the bread toasting while the family, enjoying a fresh summer morning breeze, eats its berries and cream.

Then, again in the afternoon with a few congenial friends, the sun porch is the ideal place to serve afternoon tea. The electrical samovar and toaster can readily be brought into play, and conversation need not be interrupted while the tea is brewed and toast prepared.

During the evening the sun porch is a delightful place to lounge, read the evening paper or play bridge. After dusk it can be subduedly illuminated by its electric lighting fixtures and portable lamps. Here, unannoyed by buzzing stinging insects and calmed by soft light, one may relax after a trying busy day. On those terrible "hottest nights of summer" the electrical equipment of the sun porch again comes to one's aid. Bring out the electric fan and start it working and you may loll at your ease and be refreshed by the cooling breeze.

These are but some the uses that can be made of a sun porch wired for electricity. Others, equally as practical both for summer and winter, will suggest themselves to you as you begin to make the most of this delightful part of the modern American home.

In arranging for the electrical wiring of your sun porch include several convenience outlets—one in the center of the floor if possible—and either a ceiling lighting fixture or two or three side-wall lighting fixtures. Your portable electrical cooking appliances as well as your floor, table or bridge lamps, and other appliances such as the fan, cleaner and floor scrubber, can all be connected to these outlets. They will enable you to make the fullest use of the porch with the least effort.

New York.—What price souls? In this city it costs the Methodist Episcopal church $4,000 for each convert added to the church membership, according to figures made public by the Rev. Dr. Hugh Houston, superintendent of the 128th annual Methodist Episcopal conference here. The minister who can win converts in New York can win them anywhere, it was said at the conference.

FURNACE NOT CAUSE OF DUST OR OF DIRT

The good housekeeper never has dust and dirt in her home from the furnace, according to Glenn L. Holford, manager of the Atlanta-Weir Furnace company. In spite of an idea on the part of many home owners that dust and dirt come up from the furnace, this is not the case, if the furnace is properly installed.

According to Mr. Holford, dust streaks on the walls over registers come from dust in the air that has collected in the register boxes and that leaks out around the joints where the register fits into the wall—not through the register itself, or from the furnace.

As a sure remedy for this trouble, he suggests that the register face be removed and the register box be cleaned either by inserting a vacuum cleaner or wiping with a damp cloth. After the register has been replaced the joints around its four edges should be tightly closed with plaster of Paris. That will end the trouble until next year when the same operation should be repeated.

It is stated that in the research residence at Urbana, Ill., a house that was erected by the National Warm Air Heating and Ventilating association as a home heating laboratory for the heating engineers at the university there, light toned decorations and white woodwork have been subjected to three winters' exposure to heat and are now as clean as when they were put into the house. This, it is claimed, is because great care was taken to seal all of the register faces so that no dust could leak around their edges. Every fall the register faces are removed, cleaned and then replaced, after which the cracks are again sealed. This is a simple operation that requires but a short time and no skill or experience. All that is necessary is to have the joints tight.

The research residence at Urbana has not only pointed the way to cleaner homes but also has demonstrated the protection that the Standard Code gives to home owners by insuring home comfort. The Standard Code is a nationally adopted formula for installing warm air furnaces so that every room in the house can be heated to 70 degrees regardless of outside temperature. It was originated by a group of heating engineers, the chairman of which was Professor J. D. Hoffman, of Perdue university, and is now being ured by leading furnace dealers in all parts of the country.

"I WANT TO HAVE A LITTLE HOUSE"

BY NANCY BYRD TURNER.

I want to have a little house,
With lilacs by the door;
A chimney with a rosy hearth
And sunshine on the floor.

With windows looking east and west,
And a crooked apple tree;
And room along the garden walks
For hollyhocks to be.

O, all my life I wandered round,
But the heart is quick at knowing
It's own roof and it's own bush
And it's own boughs blowing.

And when I find that little house,
At noon or dusk or dawn,
I'll walk right in and light the fire
And put the kettle on.

New York.—The cause of Eve's downfall, the snake, now glorifies feminine pulchritude. A woman returning from Europe stepped off the ship in a snakeskin coat and handbag to match, the latest Parisian fashion.

Berlin, Germany.—Berlin detectives soon may have lightweight protective suits instead of the present steel vests. The inventor of vests has devised an extraordinarily closely woven cloth which in tests not only has flattened and thrown off bullets fired at close range but proven stab-proof against knives and daggers.

Pictures Prove Big Aid in Making 'Home Beautiful'

My house has magic windows in its walls,
Windows that open on a land of dreams,
A land of quiet shadows and cool streams,
Of forest paths and radiant waterfalls.
Here are forgotten cities, and old halls
With high arched ceilings built of blackened beams,
Where Rembrandt's mystic inner sunlight gleams
On armored men, and women in quaint shawls.

And here are quays where boats with colored sails,
Discharge exotic cargoes from far shores;
Ivory and gems, baskets of precious ores,
Old wines in earthen jars, and silken bales.
Through time and space, in fancy, he may roam
Who has these magic windows in his home.

—MACKINTOSH.

This is the age of color. Brilliant color is everywhere—in fashionable dress, in table service, in home decoration. Artists are specialists in color, and a picture, being the work of an artist, is the finest example of the harmonious mingling of colors. For this reason, pictures are a fitting adornment for the home beautiful.

Excellent reproductions of the world's masterpieces, both modern and classic, are today available, and these are faithful in color and quality to their great originals. They are obtainable in wide variety of subject and size at the two shops of Binder's, "The Gift Shops of Atlanta," the main store at 117 Peachtree, and the smaller shop at 107-9 Peachtree arcade. At both stores the salesladies are students of interior decoration.

FINEST OF STOCKS IN CITY CULLED

Furnishing and Decoration Experts Busy Up to Last Minute Saturday in Preparing Homes.

Stocks from Atlanta's leading stores have been thoroughly culled during the past week in an effort to get the very best the city offers for the decoration and furnishing of the six attractive homes offered in the "Home Beautiful" exhibit, sponsored by The Constitution, which opens to the general public at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

As a result the public will be given the opportunity to see homes which will be models in every way, with the very finest of furniture and the very latest styles and innovations in home-making.

Four of the homes have been under the general supervision of Mrs. R. H. Thomas, of Atlanta, formerly of Richmond, Va., a nationally-known authority on home decoration. In two of them Stephen Philibosian, Inc., has provided the furniture. The residence at Haynes Manor has been furnished and decorated by the decorating department of M. Rich & Bros. company, and the home at 10 Covington road by the interior decorating department of J. M. High company.

Descriptions of the six homes follow:

10 Covington Road in Avondale Estates

The entire furnishings for this house will be supplied from the stocks of J. M. High company's house furnishing departments. They have been selected and will be installed and arranged under supervision of this firm's interior decorating department.

Cooperating with J. M. High company in the furnishing of this house will be the Cable Piano company, which will furnish a Baby Grand piano, and the Georgia Railway & Power company, which will supply the electrical equipment and appliances.

This is a two-story house in English design, with living room, dining room, breakfast room, kitchen and reception hall downstairs. There are three bedrooms and sleeping porch on the second floor, also two modern bathrooms. All these rooms open into a central upstairs hall. The sleeping porch will be fitted up as a nursery for the exhibit.

Harold Short, who is in charge of the interior decorating department of J. M. High company, is more than enthusiastic about the attractive manner in which this home is to be furnished and gave The Constitution a detailed description.

Reception Hall.

The reception hall will have a console table and mirror, one hall chair and a bench. A Lilihan rug in colors of blue and gold will be used. The living room draperies will be made of Austrian damask in colors of rose, green and gold. They will hang under hand-painted cornices. Glass curtains made of imported silk casement cloth will be used in this room.

The furniture will include davenport and chair to match, Duncan Phyfe occasional table, decorated end tables, mahogany chairs and three floor lamps, and Baby Grand piano. Persian rugs will be used on the floor.

The dining room will be furnished with a hand-carved walnut dining room suite. A Chinese rug will be used in this room. Draperies will be made of gold color mohair damask, edged with rose and blue. Breakfast room draperies will be of hand-blocked linen and the furniture will be a decorated suite in colors of green and red.

One bedroom will have colonial furniture in mahogany finish. The floor covering will be an Antuft Klearflax rug. The draperies will be made of taffeta silk in colors of green and rose, these will hang from painted poles. The glass curtains will be made of Bedford voile. Another bedroom will have a decorated suite and draperies in rose and blue color. Hooked rugs will be used in this room.

The draperies in the master bedroom will be orchid and green in color with specially constructed valances.

The nursery will have chintz shades in dainty design. The stairway will be covered with carpet in heather mixture color.

185 Bolling Road In Garden Hills

One of the houses which will create unusual interest in the "Home Beautiful" exhibit, opening next Sunday under the sponsorship of The Constitution, in cooperation with a number of merchants and real estate firms, is the house located at 185 Bolling road, Garden Hills.

This house was loaned for the exhibit by Garden Hills corporation, and is one of a number of new houses which have been built in this pretty development since last summer.

It will be furnished by Mather Bros. This firm was burned out very recently, but like the Phoenix, has arisen from the ashes and reopened in new quarters with a complete stock of furniture and rugs.

There is one thing certain, and that is everything to be shown in the house will be absolutely new and up-to-date, as Mather Bros.' old stock was burned up completely in their fire.

The house will be furnished under the supervision of Mrs. R. H. Thomas, who states that the following firms are cooperating with Mather Bros. to make the house completely furnished: Maier & Berkele will supply all the silverware; Dobbs & Wey the china and bric-a-brac; Cable Piano company will furnish a baby grand piano; the pictures will be loaned by Binder Art and Gift shop; the linens will be supplied by J. B. Fallaize company, and the Georgia Power company will completely equip the house with electrically operated labor-saving appliances. The Frigidaire corporation will install a Frigidaire for home refrigeration.

The house is a two-story brick with living room, dining room, breakfast room, kitchen and lavatory on first floor. The second floor has three exceptionally large sleeping rooms.

The living room and dining room draperies will be made of warp point in Dresden pattern; they will hang from iron poles.

One bedroom will have draperies of yellow checked Bedford voile, and the other two bedrooms will be overdraped in organdie, one in peach color and the other pink.

Wilton rugs will be used in the dining room and the living room and Axminster rugs in all the bedrooms.

The living room furniture will include a davenport and chair upholstered in taupe mohair, a secretary desk, octagon shape table and other pieces.

The dining room suite is of walnut overlaid with rosewood. One bedroom will have a blue painted decorated suite, another will be furnished in walnut, and mahogany furniture will be used in another bedroom.

The house will be attractive and an ideal home in which utility and beauty will be combined in pleasing manner.

Handsome Home At Haynes Manor

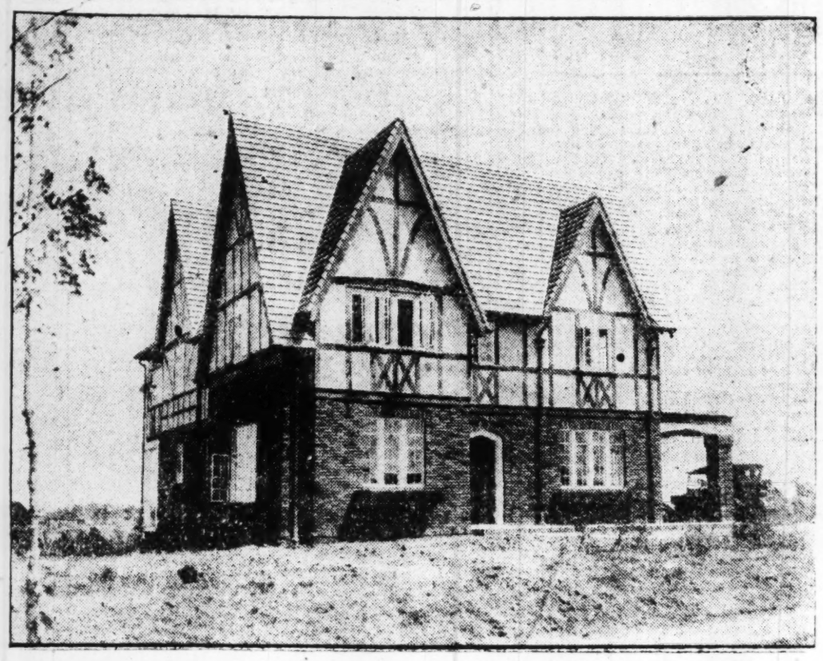

This house is located at the corner of Montview drive and Peachtree Battle avenue in Haynes Manor, which is one of Atlanta's newest subdivisions. The house is Spanish in design and was built by Eugene V. Haynes, owner and developer of Haynes Manor.

It Is Valued at $60,000.

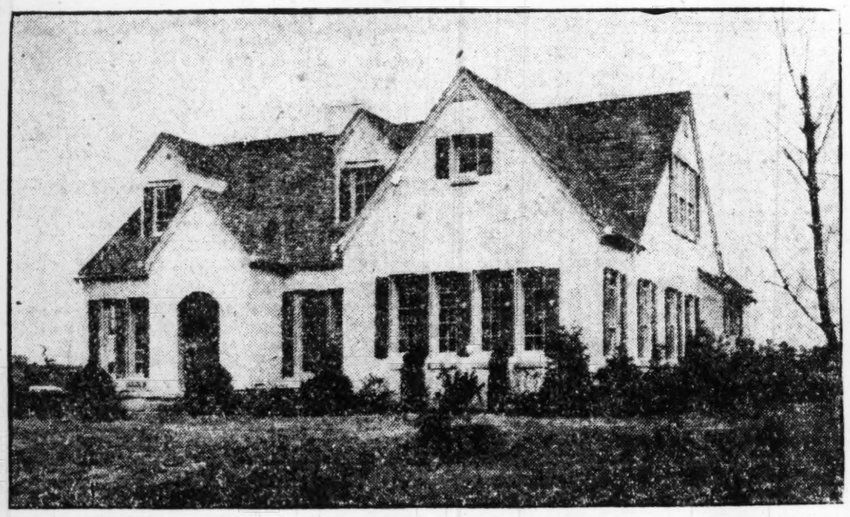

It will be completely furnished from

Auto Is Now Part Of Modern Home, Declares Dealer

That "the automobile is considered as much a part of the American home as the furnace or the refrigerator is evidenced by the fact that the director of the Home Beautiful exposition arranged to have an automobile placed at each of the exhibits to complete the picture," B. T. Dorris, proprietor of the Decatur Buick company, pointed out Saturday.

"Of course, we are proud of the fact that the Avondale Estates chose Buick cars to add the finishing touch to the Avondale 'Homes Beautiful,' but the choice was a logical one," continued Mr. Dorris. "Buick cars combine style and beauty with utility, comfort and ease of operation with safety to the occupants. In other words, Buick cars add to the pleasure and comfort of living, just as the modern home with its many conveniences adds to the delight of home ownership.

"You sometimes hear a warning issued from certain quarters in reference to installment buying of automobiles," said the head of the Decatur Buick company. "Those who see danger in the tremendous sales of automobiles on the deferred payment plan are unduly alarmed," continued Mr. Dorris, who pointed out that, according to a recent report of the national bureau of economic research, the purchasing power of the gainfully employed is increasing at the rate of 7 per cent a year and has done so since 1921. Thus, while there has been a steady increase in installment buying, income has kept pace with it, statistics show.

"This increased buying power is evidenced by the fact that more quality cars are sold every year, and is one of the reasons why the Buick Motor company built and sold a quarter of a million cars last year," concluded Mr. Dorris.

Women Are Urged To Give Father Real Place in Home

COMFORT IS WHAT HE WANTS MOST

A few years ago in Philadelphia, a brand of bread called "Mothers Bread" had a tremendous popularity. A thousand delivery wagons, each emblazoned with the sign, "Mothers Bread," were required to deliver the daily output. "Mothers Bread" was a household item.

One day the town was set to laughing by the sight of a single, one-horse delivery wagon scuttling about the streets of the city, bearing on each side and the rear, the emblem, "Fathers Bread—Give the Old Man a Chance!"

That should be a motto to set before the eyes of every homemaker who starts out to buy furnishings for a home—"Give the Old Man a Chance." Of course the ideal, both for "father" and the rest of the family, is to furnish a room for father's use alone. But as the high cost of building squeezes the extra rooms out of the houses we are now building, the den or study for the man of the house is one of the first rooms to be eliminated. So it becomes increasingly advisable to set aside one corner by the fireplace if there be one, where light from the window may be had on the book or paper, and convert it into "Father's Corner."

Men have their ideas of what constitutes a comfortable chair. But while a few find an upright sitting posture agreeable, most men believe they were created to sit on their shoulder blades—and I sometimes think they were. And this accounts for the increasing demand for low-swung overupholstered lounging chairs, in which a man can lounge when he reads. The Coxwell comes in this category. And there should be a comfortable footstool high enough to convert chair and footstool into a sort of chaise lounge at times.

A reading lamp which permits the light to actually reach his reading matter is the next essential, and a low, fairly commodious table on which to put smoking things is the final item of equipment.

But the chair is the prime consideration—not a chair, but the right chair. And one way to insure getting it is to let "father" select it himself. "Give the old man a chance," even if you have to drive him to the furniture shop!

PLANTS WILL BRING CHEER TO KITCHEN

A geranium or other plant will add cheer to the kitchen window sill when chintz and floral decoration on furniture are not used.

Instead of common white muslin curtains which get so limp and require more frequent laundering, plaid or checked ginghams edged with the pointed dress braids meant for gingham dresses, colored Japanese crepes, hand-dyed unbleached muslin, tiny sprigged and conventionalized patterns, have character. Other color notes may be panholders of plain color, towels bordered with color, and glass towels of liftless Japanese cross-barred orange and white crepe and cutouts of colored oilcloth applied on a clock shelf or on roller shades.

COLONIAL FABRICS DECORATE HOMES

Many fabrics used by our pilgrim ancestresses in decorating their homes are no longer available for ours, carried out in the spirit of theirs. However, there are many textiles that are suitable. Listing these together, they are: Chintz, of course, glazed or unglazed; printed linen, unbleached muslin trimmed with ball fringe, checked gingham, chambray, calico, cross-barred batiste and muslin, voile, dotted swiss, organdy, grenadine and Austrian shade cloth, especially for bedspreads; repp, damask, brocatelles, velvets, tapestry and haircloth for upholstering.

Workers Surpass Dreamers When Home Is Needed

If we hesitate to spend any money upon a temporary shelter, let us remind ourselves that gloomy homes have a psychological influence. No matter how rosy the dream of a Home-of-Our-Own, it is the present in which we are living and which we must consider.

The cost of putting fresh, bright paint on walls and woodwork is small, compared with the pleasure and benefit derived from the result. Imagine walls painted light, shoothing gray, the woodwork ivory, the floors freshly varnished, and some crisp little chintz curtains at the windows! As for the furniture, much can be done with some paint and chintz. Large, clumsy pieces had best be discarded, if the "temporary home" is an apartment or small house. In the average house they give an over-crowded appearance to the rooms; in an apartment they are almost impossible.

Small painted tables, occasional painted chairs, hanging book shelves and so on, are inexpensive and attractive. They add color to a room, and, without color, homes, like life itself, are poor and drab. Restful, light-colored backgrounds, fresh, crisp curtains, occasional vivid pieces of painted furniture—why, any cubby-hole can be made into a home! Good taste, a little thought and study, and some old-fashioned "elbow grease" and the humblest little place becomes a bright spot in one's life.

Environment is known to be a powerful factor in human life. It will work for good or evil. An attractive home environment is a stimulus. Every woman realizes that when she has a new hat or gown that she knows suits her exactly, she has the courage to carry off any situation. An attractive, tasteful home has the same effect. Shabbiness and glaring bad taste work upon the family's nerves. It is dangerous to concentrate one's plans upon the future ideal home and neglect the present dwelling place, just as it would be to spend one's time planning an elaborate Sunday dinner and neglect to serve anything but dry bread for the weekly meals.

LEADING BUSINESS MEN OF ATLANTA ARE COOPERATING

Long Period of Preparation Comes To End and All Homes Are Ready for Inspection Today.

SIX RESIDENCES COMPOSE EXHIBIT

Homes Are at Avondale Estates, Garden Hills, Haynes Manor and on Argonne Drive.

Here Are Six Units Of "Home Beautiful"

Haynes Manor house at southwest corner of Montview drive and Peachtree Battle avenue; valued at $60,000; built and loaned by Eugene V. Haynes.

Argonne drive, near Habersham road; valued at $28,500; built and loaned by Chestnut & Johnson, home builders.

The fourth annual "Home Beautiful" exhibit will open its doors to the public at 1 o'clock this afternoon, and the success of the event is indicated by the numerous inquiries received from all sections of the city, the hard work of all engaged in its preparation and the enthusiasm and cooperation displayed by the merchants who are aiding in the enterprise.

Opening at 1 o'clock this afternoon the doors will remain open until 10 o'clock tonight and from this time on through Sunday week the same hours will be observed.

The "Home Beautiful" exhibit of The Constitution has grown in popularity each year and the attendance has made a record each season. The number of houses has differed each year, but the crowds have steadily grown, despite changes of location of the houses, and even bad weather has not served to dull the interest of the home lovers of Atlanta.

Six Homes This Year.

This year there will be six homes, located in the most desirable sections of the city—Avondale Estates, Garden Hills, Argonne drive and Haynes Manor. To see all the houses and to take proper time for the inspection probably for the most of people will require two days, since they are widely separated.

Last season many persons visited the same homes several times, making return visits to give more careful attention to some feature of the exhibit they had almost ignored before.

This exhibition is given each year by The Constitution as an educational treat in the art of home making, and each year a great stimulus in the trade of home furnishers has been the result. Merchants of the city have been invited to cooperate and some of the leading firms of Atlanta are listed in the endeavor.

For four years now Mrs. R. H. Thomas, formerly of Richmond, but now of Atlanta, has been in general charge of the show and her skill for this kind of work has evinced the greatest praise from the merchants of the city who have cooperated with The Constitution.

Experts at Work.

This year she will direct the furnishing and decoration of four of the houses, while two Atlanta firms—M.

TILE WORK PRAISED IN AVONDALE HOME

What is said to be one of the most interesting and beautiful exhibits of tile work in the city is that of the Carmichael Tile company in the 82 Clarendon avenue home in Avondale Estates. Authorities and visitors unite in praising the color schemes, arrangement and work in the home.

On the porch, a pleasing decoration of autumn foliage color using Flash Quarry tile lends a touch to the exterior of the home that cannot be surpassed in the tile work, it is said.

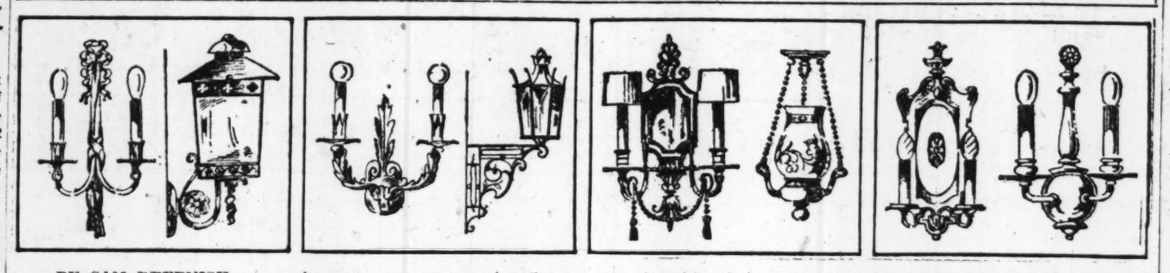

The home is finished in fine mantle of the Faience style, which has excited much interest because of its attractiveness and uniqueness. Home lovers are especially invited to inspect this style as well as the numerous others displayed by the Carmichael company.

A delightful color scheme is seen in the bath room of the home. A neat black trim offset by a black and white tile provides a treat for visitors who are interested in artistic home decoration. The bathroom is said to be one of the most attractive features of the entire exhibit.

Dan Carmichael, president of the Carmichael Tile company, which is located at 142 East Ellis street, says that the 60 Clarendon road exhibit is one of the finest ever offered by his concern.

Home Lighting Ideas Are Handed Down From Ancients

BY SAM DEVENISH.

Decorative effects in lighting American homes are legion. For inspiration the artists and craftsmen of today have turned their thought back through the various civilizations of the past 6,000 years to produce designs for lighting fixtures.

Historical ornament in its development is the result of climatic conditions, temperament, pride and progressiveness of the people. Egypt being the first nation to attain a civilization and power, it naturally followed that her people built for her needs. The foundation then laid became the basis of inspiration for all nations down to the present time.

Parade of the Ages.

The Babylonian-Assyrian era following, these nations being in close touch with Egypt through trade and other ways, it was natural that their artists were inspired by the arts of the Egyptians.

On the shores of the Mediterranean was the Greek nation, whose people possessed great strength and energy, with a clear purpose in mind. They were inspired by what had gone before in Egypt, consequently Greek artists developed their genius to such perfection that their architecture and sculpture became the model for all time.

As time passed the Roman nation became a power, conquering Greece, taking into slavery her artists and skilled workmen. These talented slaves, put at tasks of importance, combined their knowledge and the energy, ideas and daring of the Romans. This combination gave birth to the Roman arts.

Though the Roman nation grew to be one of the most powerful the world has ever known, through wars with surrounding enemies and internal political agitations, it was finally conquered. This resulted in the decline of Roman architecture.

When Constantine, a man of broad ideas and lenient with the Christians came to the throne he helped to establish a new era in architecture and building.

This brings us to the end of the ancient or classic schools of art, which opens up in some ways a more interesting period known as the medieval era.

Medieval Influence.

The influence of Medievalism having gathered strength, began to assert itself in the arts and Christianity being tremendously felt, also had its influence in determining what is known as the Early Christian and Gothic era. This influence is plainly to be seen in lighting fixtures of certain types today, especially those for use in stately residential halls and in connection with ecclesiastical and bank architecture.

Meanwhile the Gothic style, a form of Romanesque, was being developed and this style later spread to France, Germany, England and to other countries which, in turn, gave it the influence of their national characteristics and traditions.

World's First Lighting Fixtures.

It was during this era that lighting fixtures or chandeliers were created in many forms. These showed the influence of the various stages of culture then in vogue, and utilized as before, candles, oil and grease.

As the nations became more civilized and powerful, the church encouraged the artists and architects, and gave them opportunity for art expression. Inspired by the early classics of Rome and Greece, a style developed which is shown as the early renaissance, to which each nation gave its national characteristics.

Lighting fixtures of this time rarely attempted the fineness of ornamentation of the later renaissance period, which commenced in the year 1400 and evolved in various forms in different European countries until about 1650. It was during these years that the wonderful periods of France—Louis XIV, XV and XVI, and Empire—and in England the Tudor, Elizbethan and Georgian were given to the world. Some of the well-known beautiful masterpieces of Sheraton, Chippendale, Heppelwhite, and Adam were included in the types created during the Georgian period, and have inspired modern lighting fixture makers in the production of innumerable adaptations of those marvelous conceptions of artistic genius.

Colonies Import Ideas.

The American colonies, after attaining wealth through their efforts and natural resources of a new country, desired luxury and comforts. Having no skilled artists of their own, they were compelled to import furniture and works of art from their home countries.

From the Georgian grew the Colonial; from Holland grew the Dutch Colonial; in and around New Orleans there was the French influence; all of which have their modern counterparts in the styles of lighting equipment from good American studios. It is thus possible for the builder and home owner to carry out in his lighting scheme any decorative note that may dominate in furniture, hangings and wall coverings.

ARE YOU SATISFIED WITH YOUR HOME?

Each one of you everywhere has a room, an apartment, a house you call home. Does it satisfy you? If you dare, you will say "No," but you would add, "I could if I had the money." No, few people have homes just as they want them. They must start with wedding presents or heirlooms or continue to use "bargains," furniture outgrown in taste or with sentimental attachments either because they can't bear to or don't dare get rid of them or because they think they can't afford to replace them. They think they can afford to stifle their desires for the beautiful and they never think of their stunting the taste and the minds of their children by such environment.

Decoration is largely the process of elimination, of principles known and applied. The buying of new things without knowledge and taste is no remedy. Knowledge and taste are things acquired not born with one.

Kitchen Cabinet Essential In Model Home of Today

BY ROSS CRANE.

Conceive, if you can, of a modern kitchen without a kitchen cabinet! Almost as preposterous as to imagine one without running water or gas. Doubtless, any housewife would be hard put to it to decide which of these conveniences she could best dispense with if it should ever become necessary to sacrifice one of them.

"First Aid to the Housewife"—"Time-and-Step-Saver — Extraordinary," are titles which might well be bestowed on the up-to-date kitchen cabinet. No other article of kitchen equipment has improved so greatly and in so many ways as has this ingenious and indispensable culinary masterpiece during the past five years.

Unless you have seen the late models, you "haven't seen nuthin!" In some types there are upwards of seventy-five time, labor and step-saving devices—and here's the wonderful thing—they are so logically placed and ordered that you can locate them at once without delay. No charts or cross indexes required. Every device is practical, and performs a definite, needed service. The kitchen cabinet, in fact, is the thing that finally put system into kitchen operations and kicked drudgery out.

And beauty, too! Yes, indeed, beauty, for the modern kitchen has become a beauty spot—in many homes the "show place" of the house. The white "bathroom finish" laboratory kitchen has given way to charming, inviting interiors where color is woven into walls, floors, draperies and even the furniture; and foremost in decorative quality among the essential furniture, is the up-to-date kitchen cabinet.

Any furniture store or dealer in kitchen cabinets can furnish kitchen plans to fit your needs.

New York.—(AP)—New York may be threatened with a "mining" boom. Remnants of a Norman village dating back to 1645 have been unearthed nine feet below the surface of the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn, and a silver French coin dated 1754 has been dug up in a new Rochelle cellar. The coin is believed to be an ecu used by French Huguenots who settled in that section in 1688.

Don't fail to see this "Home Beautiful" in Haynes Manor—corner of Peachtree Battle avenue and Montview drive. 15 minutes from the center of the city.

Environment—what does it mean to YOU?

It is not enough to have a delightful home in a pleasant environment—you need to be certain that the environment will continue to be pleasant. And that is assured if your home is in Haynes Manor. Its wise restrictions, coupled with its appeal to the sense of beauty and refinement, will create an exclusive environment—here "out where the hills begin."

Haynes Manor will be doubly valuable to your children. Not only will they find the right playmates—they will find the right place to play. Every lot has ample room for swings and sandpiles, safe from the menace of traffic.

BUICK IS CHOSEN

to complete

AVONDALE'S "HOMES BEAUTIFUL"

The Logical Choice For These Reasons:

Style: The grace and distinction which characterize Buick always stay in style. Good taste is apparent in every model. Exaggerated design which might become displeasing to the eye, is avoided in Buick cars.

Quality: Just as the Avondale "Homes Beautiful" express quality in structure and furnishings, Buick construction and appointments denote quality in automobiles.

Utility: Combined with beauty and quality, maximum service is built into Buick cars, just as the modern conveniences in the Avondale "Homes Beautiful" add comfort and ease to home operation.

Endorsed: That the thoroughly American Buick is the first choice of American families is attested by the fact that over a million homes have selected Buick as the ideal family car.

NOTE

A representative of the Decatur Buick Company will be stationed at each of the Avondale Estate's "Home Beautiful" exhibits to answer questions regarding Buick automobiles.

for Housecleaning MAYTAG Aluminum Washer

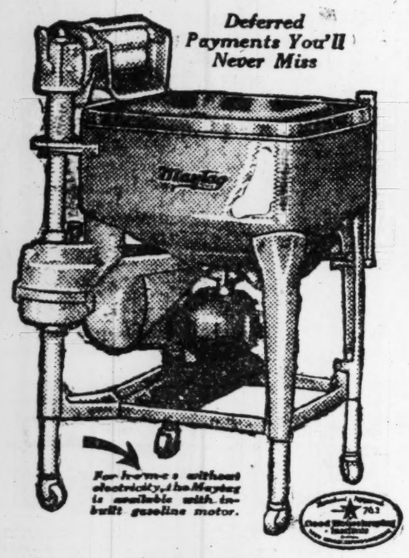

TRY the Maytag at housecleaning time. See how easy it is to wash your heavy blankets, thick quilts, draperies, curtains, fluffy rugs—all of the hard to wash things that you want thoroughly cleaned before you pack them away.

Remember the Maytag's cast-aluminum tub is all clothes space. The tub has a larger capacity than ordinary washers owing to its unusual shape and because it is "machinery-free."

The tub is heat-retaining—water stays hot for an entire washing, and the tub drains and cleans itself in 30 seconds after the washing is done.

The Maytag is unmatched for speed and thoroughness. Nowhere else will you find so many exclusive comfort-giving features that make washday easier and shorter.

Deferred Payments You'll Never Miss

1 Phone

Try the Maytag next washday. Do a whole washing without obligation or expense. Wash big tubfuls of clothes in 3 to 7 minutes—finish a whole washing in one hour. Wash everything—even collars, cuffs and wristbands—without hand-rubbing. Then—judge for yourself. If the Maytag doesn't sell itself, don't keep it.

SCREENS NOW USED AS ROOM DECORATION

BY ALMA ZAISS.

In these days of dining "alcoves" instead of "dining rooms," decorators and canny home-makers are not overlooking the double chance for service and beauty afforded by the screen The splendid assortment in the shops alone would tell us that.

Though its decorative possibilities are obvious—even before we consider artistic details, the very practical use of the screen in modern homes is suggested.

Without its friendly shelter the dining alcove would indeed be a makeshift for all but strictly family life. There are to be guests for dinner. As well think of fastening up one's dress in public as to administer to the table, in full view of one's guests, those little final touches that make of company dinner a success!

But spread the wings of a beautiful screen in the doorway and all is well An atmosphere of delicious mystery is created. It is far more intriguing to fancy what surprises lie beyond those outstretched wings—then to have them folded back upon the pretty scene—than it is to march through the conventional door into the technically proper dining room of yesterday.

And what a flaming, aggressive beauty the screen may be—or what a dignified benediction! One most satisfying development—beloved by the decorator and easy for the layman to plan—is the screen of prints, which so cunningly develops the personality of its room.

For this treatment prints are mounted on the screen base in groups, or simply at the head of panels.

Godey prints suggest friendliness—ships lend dignity and formality to the room; silhouettes on a background of dull blue and ivory hint of colonial days; hunting prints give flash and color; the flower and fruit medallions are very decorative, too.

Many of the lovely screens now on display are relatively inexpensive. And some artistic souls are making screens themselves. A good paneled wood frame, a pot of lacquer and gold leaf, and fine old prints such as you may find in any good art store can be developed into a screen of surprising charm.

EEXHIBIT ARRANGED BY THREE EXPERTS

the stocks of M. Rich & Bros. Co., under supervision of D. S. De Vault, who is in charge of the interior decorating department of this big store. This department has recently been enlarged and improved until it compares favorably with any interior decorating establishment in the south.

A description of the color scheme for the different rooms was obtained from Mr. DeVault's department.

The sun-room and living room which adjoin each other, will be treated in about the same color scheme. The glass curtains for these two rooms will be made of theatrical gauze in gold color. The overdraperies will be made of Kinberry cloth, striped in colors of orange and green. They will hang floor length.

The dining room draperies will be made of damask in colors of green and gold, and gold gauze will be used for glass curtains.

Gold gauze will be used at the windows and on the doors in the hall and at the stair landing window.

One bedroom will have glass curtains of gold color voile, and overdraperies of printed voile in flower design. These will be ruffled and will be hung under a valance of the same fabric.

Another bedroom will have grenadine with green circle dot for glass curtains with overdrapery of rose color taffeta made all "ruffly" and fluffy.

The third bedroom will have marquisette with gold dot for glass curtains and overdraperies of silk marquisette in orchid color.

The other bedroom on this floor will have swiss with yellow dot for glass curtains, and ruffled green voile for overdraperies. The floor coverings throughout the house will be selected from M. Rich & Bros. Co., stock of Chenilles and Wiltons. The furniture will be appropriate to each room, carrying out the Spanish idea in design.

Attractive Unit On Argonne Drive

This house, valued at $28,500, was built and loaned for the exhibit by Chestnut & Johnson, home builders, and is being furnished and decorated under the supervision of Mrs. R. H. Thomas, who has had charge of this work each year for The Constitution.

Mrs. Thomas stopped long enough in her work Saturday to say what she has planned for this house. The house is built of hollow tile and stucco and sets on a large lot in a grove of pretty trees.

It is entered from a vestibule into a hall. On the left as you enter is the living room, with open fireplace and tiled mantel. Through this room you enter the sun room, which extends across the entire depth of the house.

The dining room is back of the living room and can be entered through the living room and sun room.

The breakfast room with built-in cabinet is between the dining room and kitchen.

The stairway to the second floor rises from the front hall. There are four bed chambers, two at the front and two at the back, and these have connecting baths.

A large double garage, finished like the house, is at the back of the house, and in this garage the servants' quarters have been built with two large rooms and bath.

House Newly Papered.

The house has been newly papered from wall paper selected from the Caital Wall Paper company, that the proper background would be provided for the hangings and furnishings. The draperies and curtains have been selected by Mrs. R. H. Thomas from the stocks of R. H. and B. M. Thomas, one of Atlanta's newest interior decorating studios, and are being made in their work rooms. Mrs. Thomas is a member of this firm.

The furniture and floor coverings are being supplied by Stephen Philibosian, Inc., and they claim the most artistic in furniture and rugs will be shown in this house, as James Milan, the store's manager, is giving his personal attention to it, in collaboration with Mrs. Thomas.

The silverware, which is being loaned by Maier & Berkele, Inc., is being selected with special regard to the demands of this house. The pictures and bric-a-brac will be supplied by Binders' Gift store. The electrical equipment is being installed by the Georgia Power company. A Duo Art reproducing baby grand piano and a panothorpe will be supplied by Cable Piano company. The linens will be loaned by J. B. Fallaize company. A Frigidaire will be installed by Delco Products company and the heat will be supplied by the installation of a Quiet May oil burner.

Pretty Draperies.

The draperies in the living room will be made of copper-color figured damask. They will hang from hand-painted cornices, floor length. Glazed chintz in the same colorings as the living room will be used in the dining room. The sun parlor will have heavy silk gauze.

The master bedroom will have draperies of rose-colored silk; the guest room draperies will be made of jade green color taffeta silk with rose color stripes.

One room is planned as a boy's room and will have green checked gingham for overdraperies, and another room, which will be furnished as a little girl's room, will have hangings of yellow silk gauze ruffled with green silk gauze.

The glass curtains over the entire house will be made of imported nets.

Persian Oriental rugs will be used oved the entire first floor, and plain rugs in the bedrooms. Furniture appropriate to each room has been selected and when the house is completed it will be an ideal of domestic comfort and good taste.

82 Clarendon Ave. In Avondale Estates

This residence is located on one of the highest points in Avondale Estates, and commands a view over almost the entire community, including Lake Avondale.

One enters this house from a vestibule into a large living room with open fireplace which has been built of tile. The dining room is back of the living room and from the dining room is a door leading to a tiled porch which gives one a beautiful vista of rolling hills in the valley of which is Lake Avondale.

The breakfast room and kitchen with wide enclosed back porch are in one wing of the house with the dining and living rooms. The other wing has three sleeping chambers and bath finished in black and white tile, with built-in tub, separate shower and dressing table. All these rooms open into a hall which runs through the center of the house, assuring privacy to each room.

The second floor has been left unfraished purposely, as it was thought that the family fortunate enough to own this home would want some voice in the division of the rooms, and the builder decided to finish it as the new owner suggests.

Offers Many Attractions.

Everything has been done to make it an exceptionally attractive home in the way of modern conveniences and refinements. The house will be furnished under supervision of Mrs. R. H. Thomas, and cooperating with her in the most enthusiastic way is Stephen Philibosian, Inc. J. C. Millam, manager of the furniture department, and Mr. Keishan, in charge of the rug department, as well as Mr. Aijan, general manager of the store, are giving their personal attention to every detail so that this house will be representative of this store and their personal taste.

The draperies are being supplied by R. H. and B. M. Thomas, of which firm Mrs. R. H. Thomas is a member, and she is giving them her personal attention in her workroom.

Stephen Philibosian, Inc., is providing the furniture, rugs and lamps. Artistic and appropriate articles for a house of this type and cost have been selected from their large stocks, and will be installed in the house today.

The furniture in the living room includes a davenport and chair upholstered in a beautiful shade of taupe frieze; decorated secretary desk, living-room tables, occasional tables, odd chairs and beautiful lamps. Oriental rugs harmonizing with the furniture and hangings will be used on the floor. The dining-room furniture is made of mahogany in an early American period. A Chinese rug will cover the floor. The breakfast room will have painted furniture, and includes buffet table and chairs.

Twin beds will be used in the guest room, together with dressing table and chest of drawers. A plain plum color rug will be used for the floor covering. Another bedroom will be furnished as a child's room and painted furniture, hand-decorated, has been selected. The master bedroom will be furnished in mahogany and the rug will be jade green Wilton.

The draperies in the living room are being made of antique damask in colors of orange, green and red. They will hang floor length from hand-wrought iron poles. The dining room is being draped in semi-glazed chintz in colors of beige, red and blue. These also will hang floor length from hand-wrought iron poles.

The guest room will have green taffeta silk draperies striped with rose color. The twin beds will be covered with bed spreads made of same material. The overdraperies in the child's room will be made of yellow silk gauze, ruffled with jade green silk gauze. The bed spread is made of jade green organdie. The master's room will have overdraperies of glazed chintz in large checked pattern in colors of tan and rose.

79 Clarendon Ave. In Avondale Estates

This house was erected at a cost of $13,400, and while one of the least expensive it is one of the most attractive and is certain to draw more than its quota of the many thousands of people who will visit the exhibit during the eight days it is open.

The residence was built by Hoke Smith and was loaned for the show through the courtesy of Avondale Estates. It was erected especially for The Constitution's annual event.

The residence is a good example of the homes which have been erected during the fall and winter as a part of the great home-building program of Avondale, and offers home lovers a chance to purchase a residence embracing all modern conveniences and improvements at a price far below that which would be charged in many other developments.

The house will be furnished under supervision of Mrs. R. H. Thomas, and cooperating with her is Stephen Philibosian, Inc. Personal representatives of that firm are doing all in their power to insure that it will be a model home.

The draperies are being supplied by R. H. and B. M. Thomas, of which Mrs. R. H. Thomas is a member, and she is giving them her personal attention in her store.

Also cooperating in the furnishing of this home are the folowing firms: Silverware, from Maier & Berkele, Inc.; pictures, from Binder Art & Gift Shop; linens, from J. B. Fallaise company; reproducing piano, from Cable Piano company; electrical appliances from Georgia Power company; electric fixtures, from Carter Electric Lighting Studios; tiles, from Carmichael Tile company; Frigidaire, from Frigidaire corporation; awnings, from Atlanta Tent & Awning Co.; automobile, from Decatur Buick company.

All these six homes in the exhibit will be open Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock and will be open every day through Sunday week from 1 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock at night.

Charming English home at 82 Clarendon Avenue

Home-creating art reaches new heights—In the Homes Beautiful at Avondale Estates

LANDSCAPE artists, architects, builders and decorators have truly "snatched a grace beyond the reach of art" in the three Homes Beautiful at Avondale Estates. Given carte blanche, told to create homes perfect in every feature—but always with a wise eye to economy—they have surpassed themselves in their individual tasks and have merged their talents into positive masterpieces.

A Home Beyond Compare

A residential gem of the first water—the home at 82 Clarendon Avenue, an English cottage of chaste and striking beauty, sits on top of a terraced hill and overlooks Lake Avondale with the grace of the Queen Among Homes it really is. Here is a feast for the eyes—a home that is destined to prove a sensation, for nothing like it has ever been viewed in the South before. It makes the phrase "model home" come true.

Built itself of hollow tile and stucco (almost white in shade), its shutters and doors of an antique gray blend with rough-tiled roof to lend a cordial reminder of rural England where home-making art has been at its zenith for centuries.

You must see it to appreciate it; description can not blend the beauties as they are blended in the home—for never has a home been exhibited to Atlantans' gaze so perfect in every detail. You can not afford to miss it—one glimpse and you will agree!

The large living room, with spacious, hospitable, open fireplace; the three commodious bedrooms downstairs; the charming onyx and white bath-room and built-in shower; the immaculate kitchen with every labor-saving device, the sun-room, the dining room, the breakfast room, all are arranged to afford the last word in comfort and convenience. Upstairs are two other rooms and a bath—ready for the owner's option. No home, anywhere, is constructed with more care and finish; never have all the possible features of grace and beauty been so consummately developed.

All the decorating genius of Stephen Philibosian, Inc., who supplied furniture and floor coverings, and of R. H. and B. M. Thomas, from whose stocks and work rooms the draperies were selected and fashioned, has been put into its interior to round out its perfection. Carter Electric Lighting Studios provided the exquisite lighting fixtures. Every piece of furniture, every thread of drapery is in perfect accord with the home.

And Another of Surpassing Charm

Just as distinctive an English type is the home at 10 Covington Road, a two-story structure of superb dignity, commodious and excellently-appointed. On the first floor are reception hall, living room, dining room, breakfast room and kitchen. Upstairs are three large bed-rooms and a beautiful sleeping porch (furnished as a nursery for the exhibit)—with two large bath-rooms conveniently located.

J. M. High Company, under direction of their Mr. Harold Short, completely furnished this home—furniture, rugs, lamps and draperies. Collaborating with the Cable Piano Company and the Georgia Power Company, they have achieved another pleasing ensemble in this home, seeing to it that every item in its furnishings combines the best in beauty and good taste with a keen perception of economy—in short, a luxury of appointments that will fit the moderately-filled purse.

Still Another---Common Sense Plus Good Taste

The picturesque brick home at 79 Clarendon Avenue, highly attractive from outside, increases in its enchantment as you enter, first into a combined sun-room and reception hall, from which an archway gives access to the large and roomy living room. Back of this, a hall gives entrance to the three lovely living rooms and bath, while the dining room, entered through French doors from the sun-room, is backed by a conveniently arranged breakfast room and immaculate kitchen.

Furniture, floor coverings and lamps in this house were supplied by Stephen Philibosian, Inc., while R. H. and B. M. Thomas selected and made the tasty draperies.

As in the other homes, no item of beauty has been overlooked—and here again is a home that will fascinate the most exacting. It provides further proof that never has Atlanta seen such model homes—for never has such painstaking thought and effort been put into accomplishing the ultimate in beauty, taste and far-seeing economy.

Avondale

Away from the noise and dirt of the city

YOU will be Absolutely Charmed with Greater, More Beautiful AVONDALE

See this Marvelous New City In the Third Year of Its Development

A new Atlantan*, here to direct the southern affairs of one of America's leading manufacturers, drove out to the field office of Avondale Estates a few days ago.

"I've looked the whole city over," he said, "every residential development, and Avondale is what I want for myself, my wife and, most of all, my children—nothing else can compare with it. I want to buy a lot and build immediately"

He is now building. The same story can be applied to many others.

You have only to see Avondale to know what guided their choice!

*Name on request.

AVONDALE ESTATES now presents a picture no proud-hearted Atlantan can afford to miss. Its beauties and its completeness are unsurpassed in any residential development in America. Its new attractions, its new provisions for life to the utmost will strike a chord of enthusiastic response in every lover of wholesome, comfortable life—close to the health and recreation of the great outdoors, but possessing every metropolitan comfort and convenience. From the time work first started, thousands admired the progress. One year of unceasing work went by—and more and more thousands were enthusiastic over the perfect combination of civic engineering and landscape architecture that Messrs. O. F. Kauffman, of Atlanta, and R. B. Cridland, respectively, had evolved. Avondale had taken shape; its beauties and its perfection for life were visible to everyone who saw it.

Work Has Never Lagged

Now, one more year has been added to the flight of time and to our gigantic program — and you can scarcely believe your eyes, so much has been accomplished. The landscaping of lots, every homesite beautifully terraced and planted with trees, evergreens and flowering shrubs—30,000 of them!—has created new treats for the eye. This work has been done under personal supervision of Mr. C. M. Huff. In three weeks, every lot will be dressed in its perennial flowering garb — fourteen miles of frontage!

Shade trees are planted on all the streets, grass has been sown over all the undulating sweeps of this gorgeous terrain—a landscaping feat that has attracted nation-wide attention and brings hearty praise from every one who views it.

New homes rise on every side, all of graceful, well-planned and well-executed architecture, perfect homes in matchless settings. Avondale is a reality —an imperishable asset to Atlanta and the South.

Still More Important The People of Avondale and the Spirit of Avondale

Not in physical grandeur alone has Avondale progressed. Avondale is now a distinct and thriving community, with a spirit, a social atmosphere and a personality all its own. Its houses are happy homes. Its residents take pride in Avondale and Avondale in the high quality of its residents, their spirit of community well-being and happiness and their realzation that Avondale is theirs.

An example: The Avondale Community Club was organized and established in temporary (but handsomely decorated and home-like) quarters. Interest in it thrived from the start. Bridge teas in the afternoon, weekly evenings when the people of Avondale foregathered to know each other better, several rooms of chaste, gay beauty, even a well-equipped billiard room for the men—all for the purpose of welcoming the fast-growing spirit of cordiality among the citizens of Avondale Estates. Such a wave of popularity greeted this movement that more elaborate quarters were essential—and now G. F. Willis, developer of Avondale Estates, has given the club the handsome casino that fronts on the large lake. Henceforth, this will be the home of the Avondale Community Club, ranking with the most exclusive in appointments and desirability.

This Spirit Was Inevitable

No other course than this mutual satisfaction with life could have been pursued at Avondale — for Avondale was conceived, planned and builded for just such matchless, perpetually enjoyable life.

The Avondale school is at capacity; approximately 90% of the citizens of Avondale have children who are enjoying the robust health which life in this incomparable setting brings. All the mothers of Avondale are members of the thriving Parent-Teachers' Association. For those farther along with their education, Emory University is nearby, Agnes Scott is within a few minutes, the new Columbia Seminary is going up within a few hundred yards.

Avondale's thriving, picturesque Old English business section furnishes every household need — supplies a metropolitan touch.

During play hours — for children and grown-ups, too — a long list of attractions beckons; the Forest Hills golf course, adjacent to Avondale, many tennis courts, riding stables with fine mounts, the large clear-water lake, for boating and fishing (equipped with many handsome, safe canoes and boats), the swimming pool, one of the most commodious and picturesque in all the South, with up-to-date bathhouse accommodations for scores of bathers, playgrounds for the smaller tots, supplied with every known device for wholesome, healthful play — everything in fact that young or old may wish.

Such a real, vigorous community is The Newer, Greater, More Beautiful Avondale!

Visit Avondale—see these things for yourself, as thousands on thousands will do every day during the Home Beautiful show and in the weeks to come.

Just Twenty Minutes from Five Points!

Twenty minutes from Five Points by motor—twenty-seven minutes by express trolley on the main Stone Mountain line—such is Avondale's accessibility! And the de luxe trolleys, for which Avondale residents are indebted to the Georgia Power Company, are handsome, roomy, comfortable cars of the most modern and luxurious type—with soft, springy seats and special smoking compartments.

WALL COVERINGS OFFER BIG RANGE

In the effort to individualize a room, textiles hung upon the wall may achieve charm and distinction. These may be pictorial, like Toiles de Jouy with French historical subjects or vignettes of their life, or East Indian curtains, originally meant to be hung upon the walls but unlike cretonnes in that they have borders and no repeats of pattern. (The former are more frequently seen now adapted as bed coverings.) Candle sconces and mirrors between may hang upon them or, as another suggestion, an imitation batik of cotton. Either of them may in this way form a background and focal point of interest behind a day bed.

An embroidered band, originally an old bell cord, beside a mantel gives a spicy note to a wall and a bit of sprightly old-time grace to the room. Adapting this idea, some borders of cretonne are thus usable.

Jacobean crewelwork, modern machine-made, has interest in rooms either formally or informally treated. Choice silks, like metallized brocade or damask, strike a rare note when in their proper rich and formal surroundings.

In selecting wall hangings, we must, like pictures, consider, in the same way, their fitness of subjects for the room and their relation to other pictures.

Generally, wall hangings are lined—sometimes with a shade stick between at top and bottom—something hung by cords—most often straight in panels, but sometimes slightly fulled, but always above a davenport, console, decorative commode, sideboard, on a chimney breast or behind a bed, a chest. Always they prick interest, arrest the eye.

MANY MATERIALS USED IN CURTAINS FOR BEDROOMS

Various suitable materials for glass curtains may be colored voiles, in interesting bedroom tints and sheer in texture, sunfast and tubfast organdies, in all the sweet pea tints, and muslins, now two-toned, as yellow and black, in inch-wide stripes cross-barred. Over-curtains may be sunfast and tubfast and tubfast sateen, Japanese crepe, chintz, cretonne, plain linen, sunfast taffetas, that is, of Egyptian cotton, and in the more expensive voiles (French cloths), glazed chintz, preferably if not to be drawn, and printed linen, if lined.

Brass curtain arms, meant for the purpose, are better than tiebacks since they may be lowered at night to place the curtains over them and by day be pushed alongside the molding where they are inconspicuous. These do not make necessary the usually bad looping of curtains.

Making Over Uninteresting Room Worth-While Task for Home-Lovers

When visiting friends unfailingly leave early; when Mr. Man puts in all his spare time at the club; when Mrs. Better-Half grows restless and dissatisfied unless there is "something doing" all the time; when the juniors find all sorts of good reasons for spending seven evenings out every week; when every member of the family, in fact, plans and schemes to live out of the house, it is time for the home-maker to realize that she has failed to provide a suitable place for the family to live in—a real livable living room.

There are two aspects to livableness: First, the room must be inviting, and then it must fulfill its promise of cheer and comfort. Perhaps your living room, though perfectly appointed, lacks the color, the light, the atmosphere that first attract? Maybe it is a bit old-fashioned? It is quite easy for people to take their surroundings for granted and unconsciously outgrow them. Sometimes, too, the habit of economy prohibits frequent changes and results in discouragement and stagnation. Yet the same woman who shrinks from replacing her draperies or wall papers, conforms scrupulously to the decree of fashion in regard to dress, shoes and millinery, because she knows the supreme importance of preserving her charm, her youth, her attractiveness.

Interior decoration is only another aspect of the same problem. A husband, a son, are sensitive to the charm of the home as well as to personal attraction. They may grumble when the bills come in, yet they react to beauty or ugliness in a blunt, uncivilized way, regardless of circumstances. If they like a room, they stay in it; if they don't like it, they go elsewhere, and that's that; and it is for each woman to decide whether the steady companionship of her men folks is worth a quick row, at the end of the month, over a decorator's bill. New paint, new draperies, the ruthless scrapping of trinkets that have lost their appeal, the rearrangement of pictures and other accessories and the addition of one or two pieces in modern taste, often suffice to restore to the living room that enticing quality which makes home the best place in the world.

There are, on the other hand, rooms that are deceiving. Their promise of repose and cheer is empty. In them, you cannot live, that is to say, perform the thousand small actions which fill up every minute of our existence between the great dramatic moments of birth, marriage and death. Eating, sleeping, working, reading, writing, enjoying our particular hobbies are pursuits for which special apartments, suitably appointed are generally provided. Yet a livable living room should favor all these in their lesser and more occasional forms. Little tables, chairs big and small, magazine racks, book troughs and shelves, smoking stands, ash trays and plenty of lamps enable any man, woman or child to choose a comfortable place and remain in it with just the things they want within reach, and just the right kind of light falling exactly from the right angle.

GLASSLESS BOOKCASES ARE PLEASING TO MANY

Books are decorative in themselves; their soft colors and interesting bindings lend color and charm to a room. Behind glass doors they do not give this same effect. One has the feeling of inaccessibility. One should be able to reach out quickly and pick up a book. If one has glass doors, they can be taken off. One should not hesitate to remove them on account of dust. Books are to be used, not kept as curios.

WALL PAPER KEYNOTE OF HOME COLOR PLAN

BY ROSE CRANE.

Probably there never was a time when wall paper as a means for decorating a room was in greater popular favor than now. Decorators as well as housewives are using it more liberally and yet with greater discrimination than ever before. There are two reasons for this new popularity—one being the greatly improved quality of design which now is put into this product and the other the new vogue for color and pattern in home decoration which has swept over the country.

These two most effective beautifiers—color and pattern—until so recently almost exiled from our home interiors, have "come back." Rugs draperies, upholstery, pillows, pottery—all rejoice in freshness of coloring and a vigor of design, and the drab rooms of yesterday are blossoming into those which are stimulating and satisfying.

"Color schemes" are being worked out with sureness and confidence by homemakers who a few years ago were afraid of color as of a conflagration.

And they are finding out that one way to establish a dominant hue in a room is to get some of it in the walls, thus really starting the color scheme from the walls.

Now wall paper not only provides the safest, easiest and least expensive method for getting color into a room but also for distributing it throughout the room in balanced effects. What do I mean by that? It is clear that with plain walls in neutral tones, the necessary color for the room must be conveyed in draperies, rugs, upholstery, lamps, etc., which requires the hand of an artist to keep the effect from being spotty or unbalanced. For instance, the window side of a room with its draperies would be quite colorful, while the opposite side might have but little color to balance. But a papered wall can be utilized to spread color all around the room.

Generally speaking, the wall colors will be but echoes of the draperies and upholstery colors, subdued, shadowy, but nevertheless, effective, and serving to enhance the character and beauty of the colors in all the other appointments.

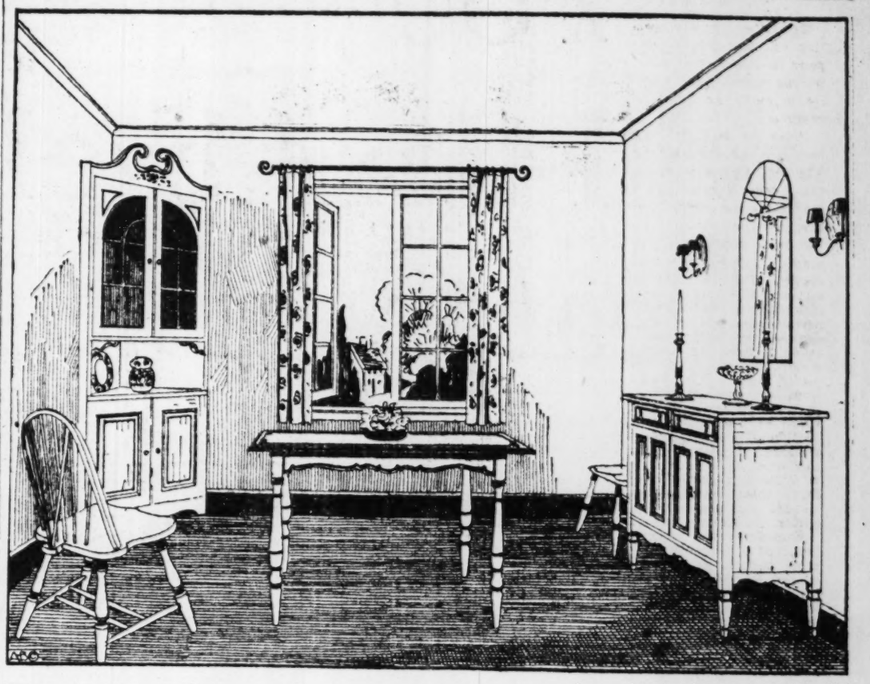

And since wall paper now is the product of artists, most designs will contain a judicious and balanced blending of both the warm and cool colors; along with the warm reds and yellows will be found cool blues, green and orchids, so that many patterns are so blended that the same paper may be used in a series of interiors which open into each other and be equally charming and effective in warm southwest rooms and those whose only daylight comes through north windows.

Another quality which can be introduced into walls by wall paper is texture. Nothing is more characterless and weak looking than a perfectly smooth, evenly colored wall. That is why rough plastered walls with their pleasing play of light and shade and color across their smoothly irregular surfaces are in such demand. That is why wood paneled walls and stippled walls are so popular.

Probably the most satisfactory and least costly way to secure this quality is through the use of wall paper. By the skillful use of wall paper, low ceiling rooms may be made to look higher, small rooms larger, barn-like rooms may be pulled together, cold north lighted rooms given a sunny cheerful air, warm south and west rooms cooled off, and meagerly furnished rooms endowed with added interest and charm.

FURNISHING THE HOME

MARIAN MOORE

Putting Sunshine in the Breakfast Room

"I never dare to speak to Mr. Brown before he's had his morning coffee"—is an almost universal remark about the average husband, and even some women have enough of a flair for so-called temperament to remain silent until the breakfast table is reached. So what can be of more importance than the planning of a cheery, gay breakfast room? An east room or one on the south has the cheerfulness thrust towards it by the morning sun, but if the room is one the north or the west there is no natural glow of bright sunlight, so it must be put there by artificial means. And the color of sunlight, real or artificial, is yellow, so where do we put it? First, on the largest light reflecting surfaces in the room—the walls, which will give the room a sunny atmosphere even on a stormy, blue Monday in February.

Yellow, the shade of butter, is a luscious hue for such a room; that is, for the walls. This is suggestive, however, as cream, ivory, ecru and peach, up to a pure yellow, may be used, for in a room where the striving for light is paramount more brilliancy is allowed than in the ordinary room. With this we mingle bits of orchid, brown and green for variety. For the other colors in the room a blending of blue, the opposite or complementary color to yellow, is the best.

The curtains in the room pictured are made of cretonne of glazed chintz. In this case, they have an apparent pattern of more or less conventional flowers of blue and orchid with green leaves on cream background. If so desired, glass curtains of peach or ecru scrim, or theatrical guaze would add warmth to the light from the window. The curtain pole is painted blue, as are the baseboards.

The floor covering of this particular room is a plain carpet of dull blue. Instead of a plain carpet, a Wilton rug with a blue or tan background and a design of blue, orchid and rose may be used. A tile floor or one of linoleum in tile effect also would be suitable and attractive.

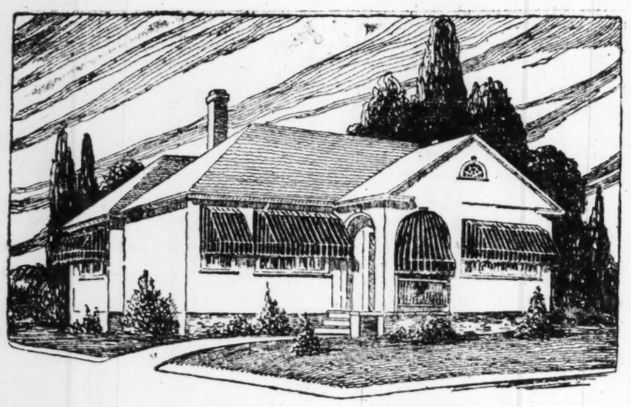

The furniture is of the painted variety—done in parchment shade with narrow stripings of blue and yellow. The blue the shade of the curtain pole and baseboards, the yellow more vivid than the wall color. Someone with a penchant for blue might prefer to have the furniture done in that color. But so much of that color, in addition to the blue in the floor covering might counteract the warming effect of the yellow walls. Better confine the blue in the furniture to the stripings or conventionalized small designs.

Even walnut or mahogany furniture would be charming in this golden toned room, the dishes and colored linen serving to introduce sparkle and decorative quality to the ensemble.

The mirror over the small sideboard is another expedient for reflecting and shedding light on the room, as are the glass doors on the cupboard. Notice this cupboard in particular. It is not a makeshift of drawers and shelves carelessly built in the room itself like a door or a window ledge by some local carpenter, but it is a piece of furniture like every other piece you put in your home designed by an artist in a design tested by time. Behind its doors may be ranged a galaxy of gay colored china, two pieces of which are seen on the shelf below; a flower covered plate and the old fashioned but always popular cookie jar. The tall glass candlesticks on the sideboard and the blue pottery bowl filled with yellow blossoms complete the picture, making this breakfast room, as all good breakfast rooms should be, a place of gayety and cheerfulness. Surely with the environment expressing these qualities to such an extent, even surly Mr. Browns will be likely to absorb some of it.

Beauty, Durability, Style and Economy All Combined Produce an Ideal Porch or Window Awning For Homes

If It's Made of Canvas, We Make It

The "Home Beautiful" show opens Sunday under the auspices of The Atlanta Constitution. With the permission of The Constitution we have specially prepared the awnings for one of these homes, 82 Clarendon Ave., Avondale Estates, which will be on exhibit the entire week of the show, and we particularly call the attention of all visitors to the particular style and workmanship of our special production, "Style-Bilt" Awnings.

What Our "Style-Bilt" Awnings Will Do

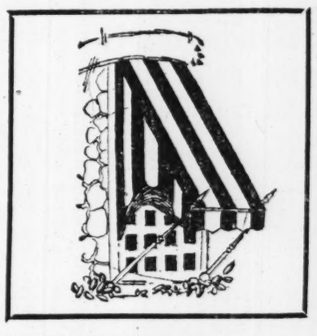

Adds 50% to the beauty of your home, 100% to the comfort, and at least 25% to the "sale price" if you want to sell.

TEA IS INDICATION OF SOCIAL PROGRESS

Too often we are accused of putting our best foot forward for company furnishings but for the tea table we can excuse ourselves. Table service is really an indication of social progress.

Since the serving of afternoon tea became a custom, sanctioned by Queen Victoria, (it seems longer ago than that, doesn't it?), many interesting tea tables have been designed. One considered typical is a pie-crust, tilt-top table with snake feet in antique maple. Painted decoration is in the center. The pie crust edge prevents an impulsive gesture crashing fragile china to the floor, and the tilt top permits the table to be placed flat against the wall, out of the way, ready without anything on it when wanted for the unexpected or the expected guest. Its design gives the wood more interest when the table top is seen flattened against the wall. However, decorating maple is never particularly satisfactory. Far more pleasing, if decoration is desired, is this same table painted a dull green with morning glories around the edge. Such tables may be expensive or inexpensive, but generally tea tables are within the means of anyone.

Some' es tea tables have tripod feet ai a fretwork gallery, for the same purpose as described above, S-shaped legs with acanthus leaf carving upon the upper curve of the leg, legs with claws or claw-and-ball feet, or bamboo legs as on the Chinese Chippendale tea table.

All the talk about bobbed hair and tight hats causing baldness may be all right, or it may not be, but it is going to take too long to show its effects to rit to have any immediate reformatory result.

Some clever people I know contrive an ingenious scheme for making their home more attractive to all the members of the family. They called a family conference to discuss the doing over the living room, also ways and means for paying for the job. With mother as chairman, they worked out a scheme of color, and then decided on a list of things that would add comfort and charm to the room—a new rug, a radio, new draperies, a lamp, a bookcase, a new davenport bed, a set of fireplace tools, a picture or two and a mirror, being the sum total of suggestions that stared Dad in the face after all precincts were heard from, including 10-year-old Tom, and 14-year-old Alice May.

After listening to Dad's oration on "Keeping Down the Expense" the list was amended, several items being weeded out or laid on the table for future consideration: but strange to say, the articles declared for by the two younger members all appeared in the list of "things to be secured at once."

Then the real fun began when each member, from Grandma down to Tom, Jr., was invited to become responsible for securing some of the new articles proposed for the rehabilitation of the family living room.

Grandma had a few coupons that needed clipping; father figured he could cut down some of his customary quota of cigars for three months, and maybe paint the garage instead of hiring it done. Mother thought she could save something out of her household allowance; Alice May knew of a chance to do some typewriting out of school hours, and thereby get some "speed" practice in her new accomplishment while earning a few dollars, and Tom made a bargain with Dad to mow the lawn and wash the car at so much per mow and wash.

It isn't hard to believe that this actual participation in planning and paying for the new household treasures created a new and vital interest in the home itself, on the part of all concerned, but particularly the youngsters. It is on record that when the last of the new furnishings were finally installed the youngsters threw a party—a sort of house warming—which started that home on a career that made it a real social center for the young folks of the neighborhood.

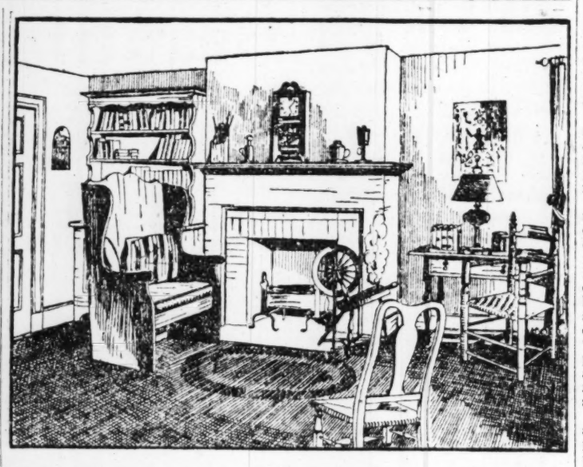

And what better praise can be given to any home than to dub it a social center?

What's Wrong With This Room?

The keynote of a living room is "comfort." It is a place for relaxation and restful recreation. The very name implies comfortable, deep cushioned chairs and couches, shaded lights, low tables, books in open shelves—comfort of body and mind. How much comfort do you think the head of the house will be able to extract from the straight-backed, uncushioned ladder-back chair and wooden settee beside the fireplace in this illustration? Wouldn't such creations of an age when comfort in chairs had not yet been thought of, drive any normal man to his club or lodge, or the very streets? How much home life could exist in a room which expresses none of the needs of normal human beings?

Of course the scene here pictured is a caricature—an exaggeration. Nevertheless, many of my readers must know of living rooms in which comfort has been sacrificed in some degree at least, for the sake of antique quaintness.

It is safe to say that not till every member of the household and at least one guest has been provided with easy, comfortable, cushioned chairs, no straight-backed, hard, uncushioned chair has a right to a place in the family circle, regardless of its antiquity or the charm of its design.

The knowledge that the slat-backed armchair with its rush seat is a genuine old Carver or William Penn chair dating back to the 17th century will never reconcile its occupant, whether member of the family or guest, to the rigid, perpendicular lines of the back or the lack of cushioned softness in the seat.

And no amount of utility in the furnishings or skillful arrangement or beautiful and harmonious color effects in the floor coverings, pictures and draperies will make this room a real living room. What's wrong with it? Everything. Why? Because the essential element, which is comfort, is absent.

PAINTED FURNITURE AIDS LIVING ROOM

BY GENE ARAM.

Are you ever affected with early morning grouch? Have you watched it play havoc with your husband's disposition, or your children's behavior? It ruins the day at its very start, cripples business and pleasure, and, if neglected, may develop into chronic discontent, depression and habitual failure. Fortunately, the mood vanishes before the magic of sunshine and flowers. Bright colors that bring summer days and the out-of-doors into the breakfast room work wonders for the family.

In this era of high rents and limited space, however, many a home-maker disposing of a modest income feels that a breakfast room is a luxury which must be sacrificed to the necessities of life. Yet what is more necessary than good cheer. One way of

First the walls will be painted, not too light, because we want to give the room the atmosphere of intimate coziness required for evening affairs, as well as the gayety needed to start the day right. Olive green is interesting because it contains enough yellow to be warm and cheerful, and it also contrasts agreeably with other colors. Maple furniture would stand out excellently against such a background. Have you given a thought to peasant-French furniture? It is the quaintest vogue abroad; and contrary to most foreign innovations, it fits in with our own styles and habitations. It features semi-upholstered pieces, dining room chairs, for instance, covered with what used to be the traditional costume skirts of picturesque French provinces. The patterns on these skirts closely resemble the designs on our glazed fabrics or the home product can be secured with equally attractive results. Of course, you will choose an open china cabinet, also in peasant style, and decorate it with Rouen crockery. For the floor, I would have either a mulberry chenille carpet or red tiles with a mulberry, green and sand linen rug. The windows should be curtained with ecru net, and the valance and drapes of glazed chintz should be so arranged as to modify the apparent dimensions of the opening in accordance with peasant style which favors low, wide casements.

Of course, there are many other styles and color combinations possible, from Venetian decorated furniture to modern lacquer finish with decalcomania transfers, depending on individual preferences and budget limitations. All, however, will be found to yield a maximum of charm for a minimum investment, for color is yet the cheapest form of beauty in interior decoration.

Moreover, a painted dining room has the advantage of not being above the comprehension of little children. While the atmosphere of period design dining rooms is too subtle for their appreciation, they react to color as they do to nature and their family relations are affected accordingly. Children seldom forget what is associated for them, with a sense of pleasure. In the fascinating painted room, things heard at the dining table impress themselves indelibly on their minds. Thus they learn good manners, loyalty, truthfulness, reverence and an intelligent interest in contemporary events, without any sternness or compulsion, till the accumulated treasure of perfect and imperishable memories becomes in turn, through the miraculous process of years, the background of their own lives as grown men and women.

GUEST-SEWING ROOM COMBINED

BY CAROLINE BENTLEY.

Before the advent of the modern small house, a "spare room" was considered essential to any self-respecting home. The family might get along with obviously second-rate quarters but the "spare room" boasted the best furniture and decorations, all of which were kept in apple-pie order, "in case someone should come." Nowadays the guest room is frequently omitted in the name of economy, but in every housewifely soul there remains a strong desire for the equipment with which to practice old-fashioned hospitality.

Since space is frequently lacking for such a room in the modern small house, one of the rooms may do double duty. By daytime, or during the ordinary course of household events, it may be used as a sewing room, but when there are visitors, it must be able to show a bland countenance to them, as though totally unaware of the quick metamorphosis which has changed it from a much-used room to one which looks as though it were designed especially for the comfortable housing of guests.

If the walls of the room epitomize good taste, cleanliness and serenity, this may be easily accomplished. Plain painted walls can be used here with impunity, since it is difficult to anticipate variations in tastes among the prospective occupants of the room. Certain types of wall finishes, certain decorative motifs may please the family, but one cannot count upon their being equally delightful to every one. If you have ever had to spend a night in an unfamiliar room whose color scheme, wall pattern or general aspect were annoying, it is easy to understand how the safest choice is plain treatment. A discreet stenciled border may be used to break the monotony. Paneling, too, is suitable if the room is fairly large, but it is not advisable to use any strong play of colors or design. Buff or warm gray is an excellent wall color, since its bright color—Chinese red or peacock blue, with cushions and a reading lamp nearby. Every guest appreciates this type of convenience and, to revert to the sewing room aspect of the chamber, when hand sewing is to be done, a comfortable chair and a well-directed light make the work less tiresome.

is soothing and gives the effect of calm and spaciousness. This latter tone may be produced by mixing Chinese blue and Venetian red with white.

Another reason why gray or light buff makes a desirable background for the guest room fittings, is that the room should not be definitely either feminine or masculine in character. The delicacy of such tints appeals to feminine guests while the neutral tones and lack of fuss and frills put the man at his ease.

If the room is a combination sewing room and guest chamber, the furniture will probably be of the simple utilitarian sort. A comfortable bed is essential and, to be on the safe side, a double bed is advisable. This may be painted black or deep blue and have a crisp cover of colorful chintz to give the appearance of a couch. A small table and mirror and a low chair, all painted to match the bed, make an attractive dressing table, which, when the room is the scene of family dressmaking, may be used as a sewing room. A bureau or a chest of drawers is not essential, but if space permits, the room will be more comfortable with one.

There should be a comfortable chair too; a willow one will suffice, painted

Threads are an inevitable adjunct to sewing. For that reason, it is better not to use a large rug in the combination sewing and guest room, since it is very difficult to coax scraps and threads from the nap of a rug. Paint the floor a dark blue gray and use several small gray rag rugs. These are fresh and clean-looking and can be shaken out easily.

With gray wall, dark blue furniture and a dark gray or dark blue floor, the curtains and bed cover, as well as the cushions in the chair, should introduce a gay color—bright blue, vivid red, orange or sunny yellow. If the walls are light cream or buff, the furniture might be apple green, the floor blue-green, and the drapes and cushions various shades of rose and tan.

Should an unexpected guest drop in there is a charming little guest room, fresh and neat with as charming a color scheme as could be found anywhere.

Worth Committee Plans County Fair; Prizes Announced

Sylvester, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) Plans are progressing rapidly for a county fair, according to County Agent H. J. Prances following the election of the following officers: C. H. Strangward, president; C. W. Monk, vice president and manager; Josephine Powell, secretary, and D. G. Jeffords, treasurer.

It is planned to make the fair an educational project and one of interest to the community as a whole rather than to the individual in particular. For that reason the main premiums for agricultural displays are offered to the community or school for a general display of farm and home products.

The first prize will be $50, second prize $35, third prize $25, fourth prize $15, and the fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth prizes $10 each.

To encourage the better methods of corn, cotton and hog production, the committee is offering $75 in cash premium and $75 in merchandise to those leading in production of corn and cotton in the five-acre contest and in the ton-litter contest with hogs.

G. S. C. W. ALUMNAE FORMS IN BURKE TO AID MEMORIAL

Waynesboro, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—Miss Caro Lane was in Waynesboro Tuesday for the purpose of organizing the alumnae of the Georgia State College for Women, in the interest of the Park's memorial. There were about 15 of the Burke alumnae present at the meeting.

There are in the neighborhood of 50 G. S. C. W. alumnae in Burke county. The quota for the first district of Georgia which comprises 12 counties is $1,000.

According to Miss Lane the memorial will be a hospital on the campus. Mrs. John Teddy Palmer was selected as chairman of the alumnae of Burke.

HAYNES MANOR HOME TO ATTRACT CROWDS

The corner of Peachtree Battle avenue and Montview Drive—in Haynes Manor—will be the Mecca for thousands this week. It is here that the most pretentious home in The Atlanta Constitution's "Home Beautiful" exhibit is located, an imposing structure of the Spanish type of architecture, built by Eugene V. Haynes for his personal occupancy.

One feature of this distinctive Haynes Manor home is the tiled patio and the two fountains, a source of delight to every visitor. The house has four bedrooms, three tiled baths, a breakfast room, dining room, living room, kitchen and pantry and a large double sunparlor. In addition there is a large basement and servants' quarters above a three-car garage.

"We are delighted to cooperate with The Constitution in throwing this Haynes Manor home open for public inspection this week," stated Mr. Haynes, "and we believe every visitor will be enthusiastic over the way the details of this house have been worked out."

Haynes Manor is one of Atlanta's newest subdivisions and is rapidly proving one of the most popular. It is said that more home sites have been sold in Haynes Manor this year—in comparison to the size of the development—than in any other subdivision in or near Atlanta. Earl Greene and O. I. Freeman, prominent Atlantans, have just completed their homes in Haynes Manor and other residential construction work is under way.

What to Do With Radiator

A first step was taken in the perfecting of the radiator when the ugly bronze and aluminum finish was discarded and the coils painted to match the walls. There remained yet to solve the problems of line and significance.

I once knew a woman who was never happy unless everything in her home looked like something else; her cushions were in the shape of cats and dogs; her footstools opened to reveal a workbasket or a magazine rack; you opened a book only to find it was a candy box; and if you were so innocent as to be deceived by the appearance of her sewing cabinet into looking there for a needle or a pair of scissors, it surprised you with a tune from a concealed music box. This woman was wrong, for a mere perversion of purposes is not art; but it is true that the utility of our home furnishings should be less obvious than their beauty. And this is why today's housewives are using radiator covers to conceal the structure of the heating apparatus. These covers which, by the way, add to the efficiency of the coils by obviating dust and dryness, transform each unit into a real piece of furniture, the nature of which is determined by its size and position in the room.

Window radiators can be used for books, magazines and fern boxes just like the old-style radiator shelves, except that the radiator covers, being insulated, preserve book bindings from injury and plants placed on them from drying out.

Tall coils should be enclosed in covers of the console type, of a style to match the rest of the furniture. The Spanish renaissance design lends itself admirably to living room decoration. With a galleon or a brass candlestick on top and a tapestry panel above, a console radiator will transform an unsightly wall section, and there will be no occasion to deplore the usual wall disfigurement above the coils, as radiator covers positively end dust troubles.

For the bedroom, a light colored design is preferable. I saw a very attractive one of ivory with cane front. The top of it was covered with a lavender taffeta scarf, to each end of which were attached flouncings of the same material, which fell cascading down to the floor on either side of the radiator. Each little frill was edged with cream colored lace and adorned with tiny rosebuds. On top of the console, which was just about the height of a dressing table, were doilies of old lace on which stood perfume bottles, powder jars and a silver bud vase with a rose and forget-me-nots. Above a small canopy of lavender taffeta framed a lovely oval mirror. In front, a dainty bench, upholstered in lavender and ivory striped satin, stood on a pansy shaped rug.

But it is perhaps in the nursery that the enclosed coils will be more greatly appreciated than in any other part of the house, for there germ-laden dust is held in particular abhorrence, and the dryness of artificially heated air plays havoc with tender skin and delicate nose and throat tissues. The radiator cover safeguards baby's health and it is a boon to mother, too, at dressing time, for the box-enclosed low coils are just the right place for the dressing basket, the talcum box and baby's scales; and each little garment can be made warm and comfy just by holding it up to the heat for a moment or two.

FURNITURE SHAPES CHILD CHARACTER

BY ROSS CRANE.

"Yes, we're planning to do our house over and get some new furniture. Now that the children are old enough to be trusted with nice things my husband and I are going to get rid of that old junk we've been living with all these years and get things we really like."

That's a speech—repeated verbatim and in toto—that caught my ear one day recently while I was in a furniture shop looking for a new tea cart. And you may be sure I looked around to see what manner of woman it was that made it.

She was an intelligent looking woman of early middle age, well dressed (her hat was a creation exactly suited to her type) and she was talking to a salesman.

And I repeated to myself, "Now that the children are old enough to be trusted with nice things we're going to get rid of that old junk we've been living with all these years." The question flashed into my mind, "What is the woman thinking of? Can't she see that not only have she and her husband been living with 'junk,' but that they have condemned their children to live with it also?"

If any of her friends should ever for a moment intimate that "junk" of any sort was good enough for her children you know right well she would cross that friend off her visiting list with the celerity of a bellhop reaching for a tip.

In fact, if anyone should ask that mother if anything in the world is too good or too beautiful or too wholesome for her children she would indignantly deny the possibility of such a thing.

And in other matters that touch her children's welfare she is probably sane—even as you and I. There is no question but that she demands that their food shall be of the best quality, fresh, wholesome and carefully prepared; and that they shall be as comfortably and attractively dressed as the neighbor's children are. And when the subject of the right school was being considered no expense was thought too great to insure the most advantageous school associations and companionships for her growing boy and girl.

The best school—the best in food and clothes, the best companionships—only the best is good enough for her children, except—in the things that constitute their home environment—the furnishings of their home.

Right there—out of a fairly wide acquaintance with typical American homes of modest pretensions—I was able to construct a mental picture of that environment; the furniture—possibly a melange of Craftsman oak and late Victorian mahogany—the latter of hybrid design, spindly and shaky in the legs and shiny with varnish. I could picture the faded rugs—nondescript in color and pattern and worn in spots, and the draperies, curtains and lamps—wholly lacking in any sort of beauty or distinction.

Now it is indisputably true that "a man is what he lives in." Without minimizing the power of heredity over character no one can question the tremendous influence of environment over life and destiny. And particularly that of the first six years of a child's existence.

The environment, of course, is the home. Think for a moment—the home gets the child before the school does, or the church, or the neighborhood life. The images stamped on his mind during those plastic years can never be effaced. Consider then, the humanizing, refinishing effect of harmonious colors and beautiful design in furniture, lamps, rugs, draperies and other home appointments on the life of a child—on his tastes, his manners, his air of good or indifferent breeding, his very character.

Consider also how well-nigh impossible it is for a child reared in commonplace surroundings to act "to the manner born" in an environment of real refinement and cultivated taste. Many a man of ability and force goes under a life-long handicap in his inability to conquer a feeling of embarrassment when introduced into surroundings of elegance and distinction.

After all, the supreme end and aim in life of every right-minded parent is the lasting welfare of his children. One way to insure this is to put the stamp of beauty, good taste and distinction on all that enters into their home environment, feeling confident that daily association with such things will imprint these qualities on their characters.

FRENCH DESIGNS OFTEN PLEASING

Possessed with the idea that all French furniture is ornate and suited only to the chateau and the frivolous time when created, Americans of dignified English descent have not dared to introduce French furniture into their homes. They have overlooked the charmingly simple furniture of the French peasantry. That of Normandy inspiration, for instance, with its ladder back and rush seats possesses the sturdy feeling of our own early American. Old dressers, cabinets and beds "feel" with the latter also. Brittany tester beds have the same substantial appeal and dignity that Colonial canopied beds so fully possess.

The wide armchairs are in place with English overstuffed pieces. One or two in a room give the favor of "the quaint," which now has such a vogue, without, as the French would say, making it "too too."

The calico, quilted upholsterings and chintzy pads firmly and appealingly tied on with tasseled cords have the same feeling as our own "grandmother prints," that is, gay, little, prim, spotty percale and calico patternings. Ruffles edging the permanent chintz covering of comfortable paneled armchairs, so-called bergeres, are in accord with our own idea of ruffled valances on upholstered chairs.

Our sedate homes need the snap of French piquancy, and truly peasant furniture is irresistible.

On the other hand, too, in the furniture of the nobility it is unfortunate that too free carving, too much of it, gilt and its suggestion of artificiality, its seeming fragility have blinded Americans to the underlying grace and perfection of line of the best of the Louis XV and XVI furniture, so that they fail to see that some of the most beautiful furniture ever created is of this time.

Suitable only, however, in surroundings of quiet elegance are the ornate in carving and tapestry.

NASH

Leads the World in Motor Car Value

The Nation's New Vogue in Body Design

Styled by Nash

Revealing an alluring French-type rear contour, this ultra-new and original body design has now entirely changed American ideas of motor car style.

The new Ambassador now on exhibit at the Home Beautiful, Argonne Drive near Habersham Road, exemplifies this unique and beautiful body conception. It is hailed as the most important creative achievement in the history of American enclosed car craftsmanship.

And with this great body achievement Nash has powered all models with a 7-Bearing crankshaft motor—the world's smoothest type. The Nash 7-Bearing motor gives you power, smoothness and quietness that cannot be accomplished by the use of 3 or 4 bearings.

When you buy your 1927 Motor Car be sure to ask, "How many main bearings?" And for better results choose Nash, the car that has 7 bearings and an ultra-modern body design to offer you.

HOW TO MEASURE CURTAINS SHOWN

BY PAULINE BEAUMONT.

Much irreparable damage may be caused to flower designs and gorgeous birds by misguided scissors; a striped fabric that does not hang straight is an eyesore and thin, skimpy draperies look hopelessly amateurish. The only safeguard against these dreadful evils is a folding four-foot rule, a knowledge of proper curtain measurements and absolute accuracy.

The glass curtains are hung closest to the glass. After measuring the distance from bracket to bracket, allow 50 per cent for fullness; this means that if your curtain rod measures 30 inches, the total width of your curtain must be 45 inches. The proper length is down to the sill, plus allowance for the hem, heading and casing for the rod to run through.

If you use silk draw curtains, these should be hung a little farther out from the glass, and as in the case of the glass curtains, 50 per cent fullness should be allowed and the lower edge should just clear the sill. These dimensions are exactly correct; do not try to crowd an extra ten inches of material to save cutting, nor should you skimp on the measurements for the sake of economy. Allow for a 1 1-2 inch hem on the fronts and lower edges, and a 3 inch heading.

In a formal room, the overdraperies hang to within one inch of the floor. After your measurements are taken, carefully study the design on the fabric, for the top of each curtain must coincide exactly with the same point of the repeat pattern. You should also reserve the richer and heavier motifs for the lower part of your draperies. The width depends on the weight of the material and width of the window group; but in no case should it ever be less than 30 inches. The overdraperies and valance are fixed as close as possible to the outer edge of the casing, or slightly outside, unless the casing is exceptionally large. For a plaited valance, allow 50 per cent fullness over the actual width measurements, while 15 inches is a good average depth for a plain-shaped valance. Place the most important part of the design in the center of the valance, and if any piecing is to be done, let it be on the sides.

BUSINESS MEN ARE COOPERATING

Rich & Bros. company and J. M. High company—will have charge of the other two, the first of the Haynes Manor home and the second of 10 Covington road in Avondale Estates.

They have carefully selected the very best from their immense stocks and have placed these materials for the home in the hands of their interior decorating departments. The result of their efforts is a credit to the two firms which are taking part.

Other merchants have given the most valuable assistance and have contributed from their big stocks to furnish and to decorate the other four homes, over which Mrs. Thomas has charge.

The task has been a hard one and has required several weeks of the closest attention to detail, for it is the little errors of carelessness that mars a home otherwise perfect. Capable critics who have looked over the homes have agreed that it would be hard to find residences where decorations and furnishings fit in so well.

Homes Built for Show.

This year one innovation has been introduced by The Constitution. Two homes in Avondale Estates have been built especially for this exhibit. They were erected on Clarendon avenue by Hoke Smith and were furnished The Constitution through the courtesy of Avondale Estates.

G. F. Willis, owner and developer of Avondale, has paid the highest praise to the "Home Beautiful" exhibits. He has declared them as one of the greatest incentives in the history of Atlanta to home making and home owning. The "Home Beautiful" which he has entered in Constitution's shows of past years have been sold readily, largely as a result of the decorations and furnishings which showed the possibilities of the residences. Real estate men and merchants alike have benefited by the boost in the home desire.

It will be a real education to the housewives of the city to visit the six homes and see the very latest devices made to increase the beauty of the residences and to decrease the amount of drudgery facing the homekeeper. Every room in the house will offer something new and interesting.

Work Is Made Easy.

Now that well equipped electric stoves, the refrigerators offering comforts and possibilities not dreamt of years ago and numerous electric devices have cut down housework until it does not require more than a minimum of the time it once consumed.

The part to be played along mental lines also will be stressed. Books of the very best kind will fill bookcases in each home. There will be books lying handy on tables in the parlor; there will be a book or so in the master's bedroom with a convenient light at hand to make reading a pleasure instead of an annoyance as often it becomes when the light is poor.

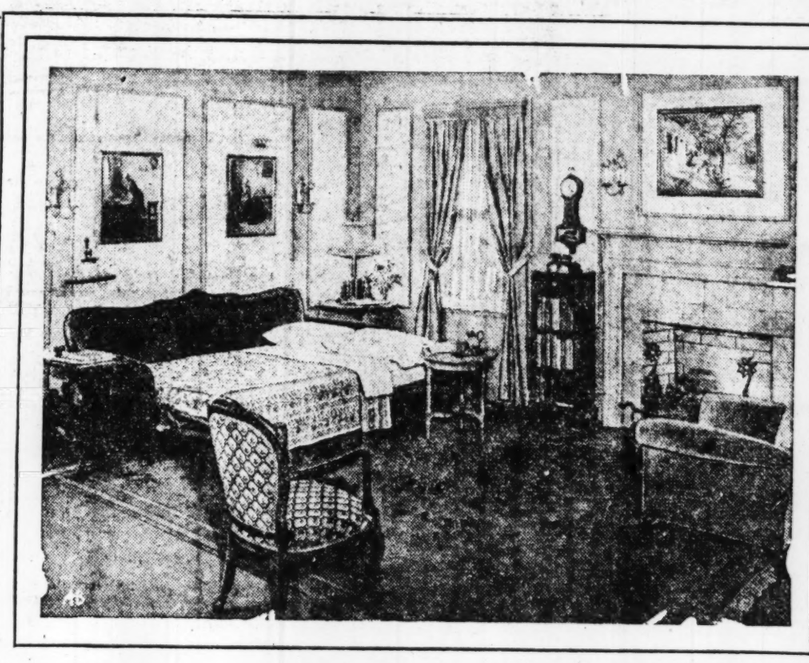

There will be those coming to the show who will remember those days of long ago when candle light was all that people had, and then the times when lanterns and lamps furnished the illumination. Today electricity has become the servant of man, rivaling the lamp of Aladdin in its power to bring true the wish of every man and woman. And at that the beginning is all that has been touched. Other wonders are bound to come. The latest will be shown at the home exhibit.

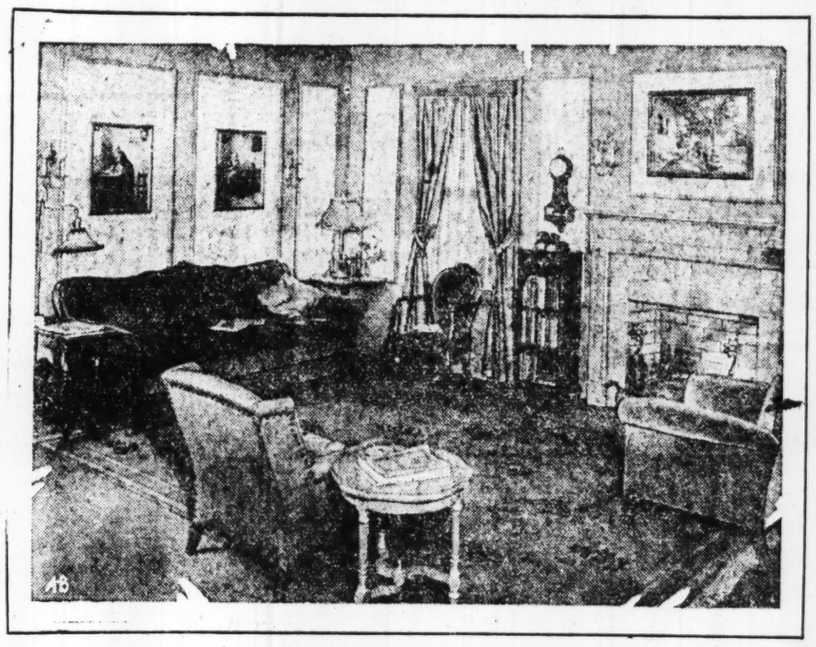

WAYNESBORO REVIVAL HELD BY ATLANTAN

Waynesboro, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—The revival which has been in progress at the Methodist church for the past two weeks with Rev. Marvin Williams, of Atlanta, doing the preaching and Mrs. Cunyus, of Cartersville, leading the singing, closed Thursday night. Much good was accomplished.

Many young people joined churches of the city. Thirty-four joined the Methodist church, where the meeting was held. All the churches of the community cooperated in the revival.

Many a Home Revolves Around a Clock

Living room by day, bedroom by night, dining room whenever the occasion requires it, this one room with kitchen and bath attached, represents the ideal home for a couple of business women. It is attractive, serviceable, easy to keep in order, and it satisfies the craving of all normal women for a place to call their own.

In planning an interior of this kind, every article should be selected so that it may fulfill as many uses as possible, while the sum total of all the furnishings should present a harmonious whole, pleasing to the eye, restful, individual, and most secretive on the subject of its manifold functions. Thus the davenport opens up at night into the most comfortable double bed; yet in the daytime there is nothing about its proportions or shape to betray its twofold life. There may be no difference in the trade-world, between a davenported and a bed-davenport, but I should like to help in establishing a very sharp distinction between the two, for a davenport should be a davenport before all other things, and so designed that the supplementary service it is called upon to render may not affect its appearance and artistic value.

The next point to consider is that of storage space. Clothing, linens, china, glassware, silver, books, sewing things and writing articles have to be kept in order, and those which do not belong by right to the living room must remain unseen. For this reason, I'd recommend the purchase of a good-sized highboy, as its many spacious drawers will prove invaluable while the excellent designs available have a high decorative value and constitute a fine addition to any living room. The secretary desk also deserves attention because of its compactness and utility. Though I always preach sincerity in decoration, I am for once inclined to advocate a form of deceit because space-saving is here the main aspect of our problem, and the device I am going to suggest does not, after all, break any of the golden rules. The idea consists in filling the upper shelves of the secretary with those trick-books which look like old leather-bound editions, but are in reality boxes concealed under the binding and a couple of printed pages. Some of these boxes are made up of four or five bookbindings and large enough to contain sewing things manicure sets, bottles and jars and other feminine articles. The utility of desk space, pigeonholes and drawers is too obvious to need comment, except that the desk may be cleared at night and transformed into a dressing table.

A large gateleg table is indispensable for dining purposes, and if the room is spacious enough, there might be another smaller one to be used as an end table by the davenport. This would be the proper place to keep the "real" books between book-ends, and might be supplemented by a booktrough-table placed near the largest chair. This large chair shall be the one easy chair in the room, devoted solely to lounging. The other chairs, while comfortable, should be so constructed as to be suitable for use at the table. Semiupholstered models are best, as they are easier to move around the room.

There should be, of course, some musical instrument, and the top of the radio or phonograph cabinet may provide another suitable place for books. Lamps, pictures and flowers play the same part here as in the most orthodox homes, while the mirror, though masquerading as a purely ornamental trinket, will be very much in demand at dolling-up time. Set up your alarm clock on the bedside table every night, if you like, but by day your timepiece shall be that charming grandfather's clock which adorns one corner of the room, and its quaintness will be echoed by the early American light brackets with plain metal tinted shades.

DIVERSIFIED CROPS SEEN AT NORCROSS

Norcross, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) The farmers in this section are realizing the value of crop diversification. Large crops of peas, beans, potatoes, corn, cabbage and tomatoes are being planted, and a big reduction in the cotton acreage is noted. Oats, rye and wheat are looking fine and give promise of a profitable yield. The cow, hog and hen program has become a real issue. More cows and hogs and finer ones are seen on the farms. The hen has become one of the greatest producers on the farms, one farm home here having gathered and shipped 700 eggs per day for several weeks.

BIDS FOR BOWEN MILL BRIDGE TO BE LET

Fitzgerald, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) Bids for the erection of a concrete bridge at Bowen Mill are being asked in an advertisement published on order of the state highway commission. The bridge is to contain 720 square yards of concrete.

Bids will be opened at East Point on April 8. The bridge is on the Dixie highway, between Abbeville and Fitzgerald, in Ben Hill county.

First Tea Room in World

:: CHIPPENDALE'S PLACE POPULAR IN 1750 ::

Run by English Society Man

BY EVA ELIN

The name Chippendale conjures before us exquisite carvings on mahogany furniture of all kinds but especially chairs of a sturdiness and beauty which are undoubtedly the reasons for their being handed down to posterity. How many think of Chippendale, the beau vivant, the society man, dressed in silk and lace, chatting gayly over coffee cups with the belles and beaux of his day? Yet the extent of the popularity and the scope of influence of the Chippendale style of furniture would be conjectural were it not for the personality of Thomas Chippendale.

There were three generations of Thomas Chippendales: Thomas, the father; Thomas, the son, and Thomas, the grandson. It was Thomas, the son, who made the family name famous although the elder was a skillful and well-known wood carver and cabinet maker in Worcester. It was the son who set the precedent of well-known cabinet makers to calling the special styles, which they had created, after their own names. He was the first to publish a book on furniture designs, which he entitled "The Gentleman and Cabinet Maker's Directory."

Not a great deal is known about Chippendale's private life, but there is sufficient evidence to indicate that, aside from being a carver of unexcelled skill, he was a shrewd business man who knew how to please patrons. He knew how to advertise his wares and became a cabinet maker of great moment and sway.

In St. Martin's Lane it was that Chippendale attained his greatest popularity. His place there served the triple purpose of shop, exhibition studio and "salon." Here Chippendale not only manufactured furniture, but with a charming background formed by his wares, played the delightful host that he was, to the belles and beaux, as well as lords and wealthy dowagers, as coffee and cake were served and tidbits of court and other gossip were exchanged. Just as the Cheshire Cheese was a famous rendezvous for literary lights, so St. Martin's Lane became a lounging place for the fashionable. Chippendale knew how to make himself liked and he thus attracted a large and wealthy clientele that came here regularly and in 1754, when he published his book on furniture designs, he did so with the backing of a long list of subscribers. It might be said here that the possibilities of Chippendale's methods of salesmanship have not been overlooked in our day. The combination of gift shops and tea rooms is not at all uncommon and one of the most widely known here is probably the Stonington house, located near Providence, R. I.

Chippendale was not exactly original in that he did not invent any entire new style. Rather he drew freely from the Gothic, French and Chinese designs, adapting and making of them distinctive English types. In many instances, he improved and even added to the beauty of the pieces. He was a lover of the flowing line as opposed to the classic and at times was led to an overprofuseness of ornamentation by the whims of his patrons. Otherwise he showed good judgment and discriminating taste. He achieved, without the usual awkward heaviness, a solidity in his chairs which has not been surpassed and which has earned for Chippendale an everlasting dominance.

The Home Beautiful is the Home LIVABLE!

THERE'S a test to make of the home you buy, a test that has more to do with your future happiness in that home than any other one thing: Is it livable?

You'll have electricity in your Home Beautiful, of course. But if that electricity is not carried to the points where you will want to use it—the home will not be livable. If you are unable to place floor-lamps where you want them, if you can not use appliances where and when you want them—your home will not be a home in the fullest sense. It all depends on foresight. We assure ourselves of sufficient closet space. We insist upon the proper exposures. We carefully consider the house from cellar to garret—but sometimes we forget the essential convenience outlets installed in the base-boards that mean so much after we have moved in. They make it a simple matter to use your lamps, your radio and your other electrical appliances in any room you desire.

Service is always on tap to answer your command. You are confident always that the power will be there when you need it. And it is there. But unless the "tap" is where you want it, where you must have it if your home is to be a livable home—truly a "Home Beautiful"—our service can not reach you fully.

The Engineers of the Georgia Power Company are always ready to advise with you—without obligation—and to suggest ways and means of permitting electricity to serve you to the utmost in the Livable Home

When you examine the Homes on display during the next two weeks, think of what we have said, and notice how fully the home-like qualities of these houses have been brought out—and how much proper electrical planning has added to them.

VOL. LIX., No. 286. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 3, 1927.

"If Music Be The Food of Love, Play On!"

Very soon the musical center of the globe will move to Atlanta and our own gaunt Auditorium assume the importance of Covent Garden, London—L'Opera, Paris—La Scala, Milan—Metropolitan, New York. The brilliant scenes of those operas will be repeated here with a difference, an intensification.

The spirit of the South ever has been musical, its soul the color of an exquisite aria, its spontaneity and enthusiasm rhapsodic, its lovely women lyrical.

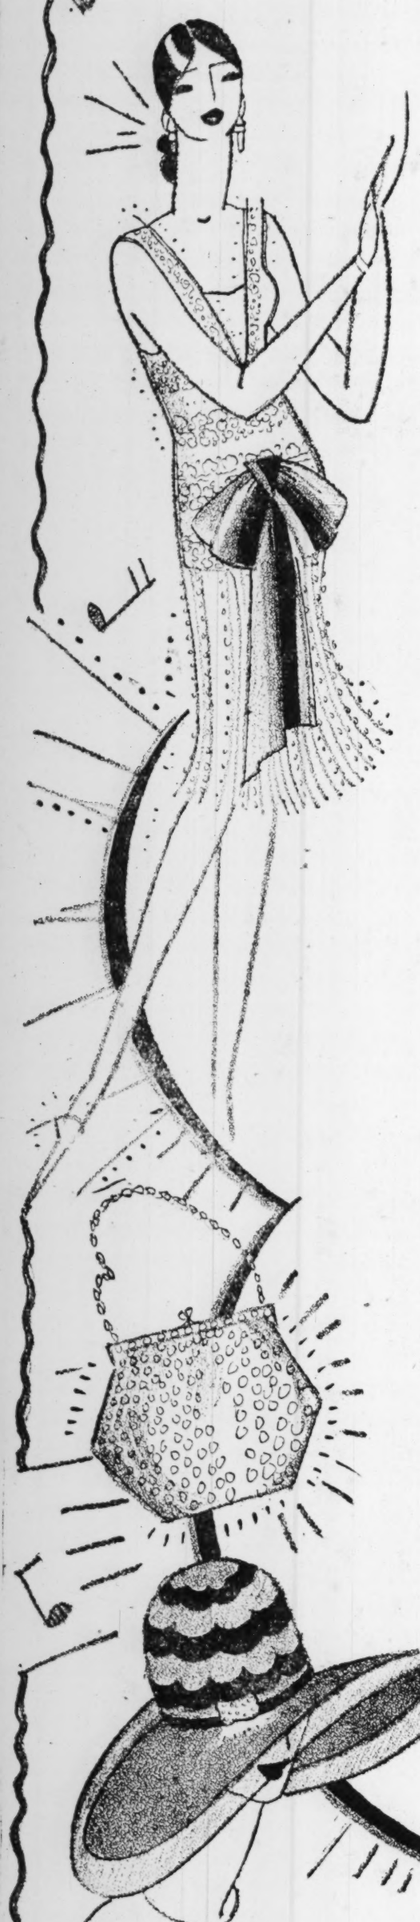

But Opera and its attendant occasions are sartorial as well—Dazzling Gowns sing their stellar roles.

All the wonderful things are ready.

Sketched—Silhouette model of crepe du jour elaborately beaded and fringed. Color note is added by striking bow of three-colored satin ribbon. $118.

Sketched—Bouffant style in gros de londre with compose of rose shades in pointed folds on skirt, and bows of French handmade ribbon flowers. $98.50.

FASHIONS FOR THE OPERA

Posed by Members of The Black Cats

Misses Mary Louise Bramby, Nora O'Bierne, Jane Small, Polly Hearn, Virginia Howard and Mary Harris

MONDAY, 11 TO 12 AND 3 TO 4

Music by Emory University Orchestra

THE Black Cats, as you know, is an organization of Atlanta society girls who sponsor the splendid work of the Georgia Children's Home Society. They have graciously consented to pose these gorgeous opera fashions in the Apparel Shop during the hours mentioned above. A marvelous, resplendent Fashion Revue.

No Cards. You and all feminine Atlanta are invited! Imported models on display and worn by the Black Cats include afternoon frocks, sports dresses, evening gowns, and wraps, all reproductions of models, from—

Chanel, Patou, Miller Soeurs, Phillip et Gaston Goupy, Berthe, Molyneux, Lescomte, LeBouvier, Jenny, of Paris.

Many fascinating things to see and to know. For evening, satins in high colors, with flowers of satin. Georgettes and chiffons with brilliant ornamentation. Bouffants are favored for the young and slender. Skirts are quite long. Skirts are quite short. Laces and printed chiffons appear.

Striking new colors are Ibis, Coral and Fashion Show Blue.

Notes In Staccato

A rhinestone evening bag . . . draws the brilliance of a thousand clear stars in a black sky! Scintillant, unusually fine stones in a supple mesh. Even the silver frame of the pouch is studded in stones. Lining of white taffeta. $25. Other pouches and envelopes, $2.95 to $25.

An ambient air . . . from a drop of the smartest new imported perfume, "Vogue de Molyneux." A note as recherche as his costumes! In an exotic orange suede container. $5 to $35. Also toilet water, face powder, bath powder, $3.50 to $15.

Girdle it with splendor . . . and the unfresh frock has pristine sparkle! The new messaline sash ribbons are marvels of softly shaded colors and supple beauty. $1.50 yard. Flower stamens to make your own shoulder corsage—gold, silver, pastels—50c, 59c bunch.

Sketched—Gold tissue is combined with sunset orange chiffon velvet in this opera coat. The velvet forms a bow on each shoulder and is shirred on the sleeve where it joins the gold cloth. Crepe de chine lining. $175.00.

Symphonies In Silk

EACH brilliant fabric strikes a responsive chord in the feminine heart—The rustle of taffeta, the subdued swish of crepe, the fluid melody of chiffons. Their sight brings forth full fledged designs for stunning opera frocks, wraps. Simply made, that the beauty of material may provide unobstrusive ground for the beauty of woman!

Chiffon Taffeta—soft, supple finish, in smart designs for street frocks, florals, checks, stripes, plaids, 36-inch—$2.50, $3.50.

Georgette-Crepe—sheer, misty quality all-silk georgette, in 25 shades for street, afternoon and evening frocks, 40-inch—$1.95.

Cheney's Cinderella Prints—heavy, rich quality crepe de chine printed in designs of great chic on grounds both light and dark—$3.95.

Lunette Crepe—very heavy quality that drapes in rich folds, tailors exquisitely. In 25 leading Spring shades, 40-inch—$2.95.

Silks—Street Floor

In A Minor Key

A golden shower blossom . . . a mousseline flower like a bird of Paradise! Its loose, fluted petals hanging a full foot from the shoulder, in long willowy plumes. The silver-touched stamens gleam through the delicately shaded yellow like a diminutive constellation. $3.50. Other exotic night blossoming flowers of organdie, chiffon, silk. $3.50, $4.

A crystal pendant . . . partly studded with clear rhinestones, depending from a fine filigree chain. Stunning as a focal point of a black ensemble. $17.50.

Pearls plus crystals . . . a maximum of chic and exclusivity in this newest combination! A section of crystal rondels in brilliant contrast with a twisted length of seed pearls, terminating in two pendants of crystals. Center and each end weighted with large, handsome pearls. $25.

The Opera costume begins with the STEP-IN of silk brocade and French rubber or satin and fine elastic. Either entirely boneless or compromising with twin bones across front and back. $5 to $15.

Corsets, second floor

Crowning the Opera Wardrobe,

The Afternoon Hat

$25

Heading the list of major accessories—the afternoon hat of gracious femininity. The wider brim that gives its fair wearer the air of a princess. Slightly drooped to lend languid mystery. In colors pitched on a soft minor key—rose ash, indecisive beige, bud green, or that perennial flatterer, black.

Maline, linen-like baku, balibuntl. Some trimmed in almost sports simplicity. A twist of velvet, a scintillant buckle. Other models, $10 to $35.

Hats—Second Floor

The Important Footnote

Evening Slippers

$16.50

A bouffant frock, generous, deep-skirted—or a clinging sheath of knee length brevity—which gives most prominence to the exquisitely shod foot? One cares not when her foot is encased in a Cinderella slipper like the one sketched. Imported cloth o' gold, brocaded with an iridescent sunburst of deep blue. Gold kid strap, with new buckle fastener, spike heel.

Other stunning models in all evening shades, $13.50 to $16.

GEORGIA'S NATIONAL FORESTS.

The United States government has recently acquired, through straight purchases and friendly condemnation proceedings, approximately 100,000 acres of lands on the Chattahoochee watershed to be added to the extensive national forests in this state.

Elsewhere in The Constitution today will be found a map showing the location of the new purchases and illustrating also how the newly-acquired lands link up the Cherokee national forest, in Union and Fannin counties, with the Nantahala national forest in Habersham and Rabun counties.

The extension of the national forest area in Georgia is most important from the standpoint of industrial development. These lands protect the headwaters of the Chattahoochee river, which is one of the most important streams in the south, from both a drainage and power development viewpoint. They serve to protect also the various mountain streams that flow into this river.

The government is closing negotiations for large acreages also in Gilmer and Murray counties, at the headwaters of the Coosa river, in the Cohutta mountains.

Aside from the fact that these forests not only protect the watersheds, and are carefully patrolled against fire, thereby protecting great timber possibilities for the future, every person should know that the national forests are open to the public for recreational purposes. The fact is a national forest is of the same attractiveness as a national park. Campers are permitted, provided they obey the laws as to fire prevention, and can hunt and fish as they like. They can even build cottages upon permits which will be granted readily upon reasonable restrictions as to sanitation, etc. The government has cut out numerous trails and has piped water to various points.

All of the national forests in Georgia are in the Blue Ridge mountains. The entire area, therefore, now linked by the new purchases, represent some of the most attractive scenic lands in eastern America.

The buying of these lands in Georgia, thus protecting the watersheds of numerous streams, was strongly urged by Gordon Lee, former congressman from the seventh district, and a member of the national forestry commission since its inauguration in 1910. In this work he has left a monument that will endure forever.

THE FOURTH NATIONAL.

The Fourth National Bank of Atlanta celebrated its thirty-seventh birthday Saturday. It was organized April 2, 1890.

It began business with resources of $500,000, and an ideal.

That ideal was twofold—first, soundness; and, second, individualized service to patrons.

That is to say, it desired that every patron should feel the personal, helpful cooperation of the bank officials and of the institution as a whole.

Today the Fourth National bank has resources of more than $40,000,000, with 80,000 patrons, $37,000,000 deposits and $3,750,000 capital, surplus and profits.

It is one of the largest financial institutions in the south, and its officers and directors are not only among the leading business men of Atlanta and Georgia, but inspire unshaken confidence.

In this issue of The Constitution this bank is making its anniversary announcement. It has always believed in advertising. Indeed, the first bank advertisement ever published in an Atlanta newspaper was that of the Fourth National, prepared by the present president of that institution, John K. Ottley, known throughout the country for his eminence as a banker.

The announcement will be of general interest because of the position the bank occupies in the financial structure of Atlanta and the southeast.

THE FREEDOM OF GEORGIA.

From its foundation nearly fifty-nine years ago The Constitution has not ceased to argue to the people of Georgia the duty and profit of "living at home." No effort has been omitted to get rock-bottom facts that establish the ability of the farms of the state, wisely managed, to supply all the foodstuffs producible in its latitude that are daily needed in the homes of the people.

Praiseworthy advancements toward that goal of commonwealth independence have been made, notably in recent years, but today more than ever the basic principles of economy and thrift urge the state-wide policy of feeding everything that eats from the soil on which it lives.

In this issue The Constitution begins a series of five pungent articles by Dr. Sam W. Small, of its staff, to bring before its readers many striking illustrations of what we mean when we urge Georgians to "live at home."

The statistical showing of the enormous drain from Georgia incomes and wages through the "buy abroad" policy our people are so generally following is enough to convince anyone that the future prosperity of Georgia farming and all dependent upon it is calling for a change of that policy.

The time is now when every man and woman who loves the state should enlist in the forward movement to emancipate it from dependence upon the food producers of other states.

LIVING COSTS LOWER.

The statistics compiled by the national industrial conference board show that the costs of living in America are declining. In every other nation, with the possible exception of those in Asia, the costs of living are increasing. Therefore the facts as to America are outstanding and of peculiar economic interest.

It will be recalled that the costs of living materially increased during the last quarter of 1926. At the time the rising prices were viewed with a degree of alarm. Since the new year dawned, however, the trend has been downward. Today, the increases of the last quarter of 1926 have been wiped out and on the whole there is a net decline over the same period a year ago of one per cent.

The Conference Board Bulletin for March says:

"In both January and February the total cost of living fell about one per cent, bringing the index in February to a point 65.2 per cent above the level of July, 1914, and 2.6 per cent below the level of February, 1926. This decline in the cost of living during the past year, it may be noted, is approximately half as great as the decline in the wholesale price level, which in February, 1927, was 46.4 per cent above the average for the year 1913, and 5 1-2 per cent below the level of February last year. The change in the total cost of living during February, 1927 was the result of slight declines in rents, clothing and coal prices, and of a rather more marked decline in food prices, amounting to nearly 2 per cent. The purchasing value of the dollar in terms of the cost of living was 60.5 cents in February, as compared with 100 cents in July, 1914."

The decline in commodity prices is in strong contrast to the trend of other types of prices. Raw farm products are all relatively lower than the average in comparison with pre-war prices. On the other hand farm implements, all-metal goods, fertilizers, and those supplies that enter into a farmer's necessities are higher. It illustrates the irregularities and the unfair features of the existing tariff laws.

It is gratifying that the costs of living, which directly touch the hearthstone of every home, are lower, but it is obviously wrong that the producers of the commodities that go into the living necessities must buy their supplies in a "protected" market, and sell them in an unprotected market.

DIDN'T CHANGE HIS MIND.

It is doubtful if in the history of that great boiling-pot of humanity, New York city, there is a more romantic or colorful figure than Peter F. Meyer. He was for many years a bootblack, and came into notoriety first as the especial bootblack for the late Richard Croker, Tammany boss. The latter took an interest in Meyer, and they subsequently became partners in real estate holdings.

The will of Peter F. Meyer was filed in New York county last week, and of his estate of $750,000 valuation, $550,000 goes to charity.

"Long before I had a dollar, I used to tell me father and mother that when I got rich I knew what I would do with my money — build hospitals," Mr. Meyer used to tell his friends, and the provisions of his will show that he never changed his mind.

NEW AIDE TO PRESIDENT.

The announcement that Colonel Blanton Winship has been appointed aide to President Coolidge is pleasing to thousands of his personal friends in Georgia, his native state.

This is one of the most important and influential positions in the federal service, carrying with it not only great responsibilities as to the general run of affairs, but great diplomatic power.

It will be recalled that Major Archibald Butt, also a native Georgian, was returning from one of the most important diplomatic engagements of the Roosevelt administration when he lost his life by the sinking of the Titanic. He was aide to President Taft, and subsequently to President Roosevelt at the time of his death. Major Graham Johnson, of Atlanta, had, before Major Butt, served in the same capacity.

Colonel Winship was born in Macon in 1871, and graduated from Mercer in 1891, and from the University of Georgia law school in 1893. He practiced law in Macon until 1898 when he volunteered in the Spanish-American war. He was captain of the "Floyd Rifles," stationed at Griffin. This was his first military service.

After the Spanish-American war he was commissioned a lieutenant in the regular army, ordered to Manila, and appointed on General Lawton's staff. He was on the field of action when General Lawton was killed—indeed within a few feet of him.

Upon his return to America he was stationed at Fort McPherson, near Atlanta, for several years, and subsequently was transferred to the judge advocate general's department, since which time his promotion has been rapid. In the world war he served with distinction in the fighting forces, and was decorated for outstanding bravery by the American, French and English governments.

After the armistice he was kept in France settling the claims of the allies. Since his return he has been with the 1st army corps in Boston.

Colonel Winship has a number of relatives in Macon, including two brothers—Dr. Herring Winship, and Isaac Winship, prominent in business.

He is so well known throughout the state that his appointment to this important position creates general interest.

President Coolidge is to be congratulated upon his good judgment.

A DEPLORABLE FACT..

The Miami Daily News, discussing editorially the great benefit to Miami that will accrue from a western gateway, states a fact that ought to make Georgia bow her head in shame. It says:

"Because of the failure of Georgia to provide a modern highway system the west coast of Florida is now the objective of thousands from the middle west. A short rainy season in Georgia leaves the cautious tourist no choice but to avoid that state. Florida's main arteries of travel can be completed long before the Georgia program makes much headway and first among these main projects is the coastal highway which the Gulf Coast Highway association is so vigorously pushing."

It is regrettable to have to admit the truthfulness of the News' statement, but it cannot be denied.

For several months The Constitution has pointed out that thousands of western tourists, bound for the southeast, were going around Georgia and entering Florida through its western gateways.

Investigations have proven that during the past winter literally thousands of cars every week have skipped Georgia on account of her treacherous roads following rains.

When one takes into account the fact that every tourist car leaves from $50 to $150 in Georgia in its two or three-day journey across the state, and that hundreds of such tourists usually stop in the state for several days, investigate properties, and frequently invest, the tremendous damage that is being done to the state by the inexcusable road system we are laboring along with, becomes acutely apparent.

Georgia imposes a four-cent gasoline tax, all but one-half a cent of which goes to the road funds of the state and of the respective counties.

Every tourist automobile passing through the length of Georgia pays an average of $2 to build and maintain Georgia highways.

When this is multiplied by the number of automobiles that are skipping Georgia weekly it is easy to see what the state is losing in dollars and cents in addition to the incalculable loss in the building of material wealth, and in state prestige.

Since sixteen members of a mob in Coffee county have been given penitentiary sentences for flogging a citizen and the seventeenth man is a fugitive from justice, the desire to flog is flagging.

HUMAN FACTOR IN INDUSTRY.

The success of modern industry is due to the recognition of the human factor more than to any other one thing. This is the opinion of Vice President Williams of the New York Edison company.

Mr. Williams' views were expressed in an address to the Yale students at the conclusion of their trip through the world's largest electrical generating station now under construction for the New York Edison company at 14th street and the East river in New York city. Seventy Yale seniors, under the guidance of five members of the Sheffield Scientific school faculty, spent the day visiting the properties of the Edison company. Thomas E. Murray, senior vice president of the company and designer of the million kilowatt station visited by the students, acted as host on behalf of the company, and the fundamentals of the business of supplying the electrical needs of the world's largest city were explained to the students by John W. Lieb, vice president and general manager, by Mr. Murray, by Mr. Williams, and by Philip Torchio, vice president electrical engineering.

The visit to the Edison plants was the first step in an engineering inspection tour which will take the party through Philadelphia, Altoona, Pa., Pittsburgh, Dayton, Ohio, and Kearny, New Jersey.

ANNIVERSARY WEEK.

The veterans of the war between the states, both of the confederate and union armies, will recall this week, 62 years ago. It was the beginning of the end. The end began indeed on April 2, when General Lee wired Secretary of War Breckenridge that "I see no prospect of doing more than holding our position until night." But he did. It was on the 10th of April that he issued his farewell address to the army of northern Virginia. It was as follows:

Northern Virginia.
April 10, 1865.

(General Orders No. 9).

After four years of arduous service, marked by unsurpassed courage and fortitude, the army of northern Virginia has been compelled to yield to overwhelming numbers and resources. I need not tell the brave survivors of so many hard-fought battles, who have remained steadfast to the last, that I have consented to the result from no distrust of them. But, feeling that valor and devotion could accomplish nothing, that could compensate for the loss that must have attended the continuance of the contest. I determined to avoid the useless sacrifice of those whose past services have endeared them to their countrymen. By the terms of the agreement, officers and men can return to their homes, and remain until exchanged. You will take with you the satisfaction that proceeds from the consciousness of duty faithfully performed; and I earnestly pray that a merciful God will extend to you his blessing and protection.

With an increasing admiration for your constancy and devotion to your country, and a grateful remembrance of your kind and generous consideration for myself, I bid you all an affectionate farewell.

In the 62 years that have followed a new nation has been created. There is no sectionalism left—certainly in the minds of those who are constructive and who have the best interests of their country at heart.

But in the south this week will never be forgotten. As the anniversary of a lost cause it is necessarily fresh in the memories of the veterans who survive.

In the minds of the sons and daughters who know of it only in history it is fresh because of the heroism of the faithful fathers in gray who fought valiantly and lost in good spirit, and without malice toward the victors.

News runs in cycles. Now it is death of those 100 years of age and over. It takes years of practice to break the longevity record.

Political Generalities.

Senator Caraway, discussing the prospects for a democratic success in 1928, closed his interview with the hope that the party would "adopt a platform of generalities." He had been analyzing the situation in this interview, and showing how divided the different sections of the party were, and yet seemed to think that if all the real divisive issues were ignored, and only the ancient shibboleths were featured, all would be well. Of course there is nothing new in this frank statement of the senator. The only significant thing about it is that one of the party leaders is frank enough to openly advocate what everyone quite understood had been the practice of political parties in the past, the adoption of a platform of pure political "bunk."

It seems to be a good time to raise the question frankly. What is the purpose of a political party? Of course theoretically, and originally, it was true that each one of the great political parties stood for some distinctive political principles and represented certain political tendencies of thought. Two parties thus divided, each striving to translate its political ideas into practical legislation and administration, makes a wholesome political condition in a democracy. Each furnishes a healthy check and criticism upon the course of the other. The system is a good defense against extremes.

Two Parties.

The two-party system has, in the long run, been justified in our own political history. We have usually had, by different names, two parties, each representing the divergent political tendencies of what might be called, in general, federalism on one hand, and states' rights on the other. Since our government itself is essentially a blending of these two ideas, it is well to have each emphasized by a political party. But for many years past this distinction between the republican and democratic parties has ceased to have any meaning. The southern contingent of democracy has raised the cry of states' rights whenever they felt that some interest peculiar to the south has been in danger, but they have never hesitated to clamor for federal aid whenever they felt that it would be to their advantage. The Wilson administration, which represented the most outstanding success of the democratic party since the civil war, was very much more federal than it was states' rigats in its remarkable legislative record. Its federal banking system, farmers' banking, trade commission, labor legislation, income tax measures and many other acts too numerous to mention here, had the tendency to center authority in the federal government rather than in the state government.

Should one attempt today to make a distinction between the two parties, on politico-economic lines, he would find it a very difficult task. One would think first of the tariff as distinguishing them. It is true that the republican party is formally and practically committed to a high tariff, and that the democratic party is supposed to be a low-tariff party. The democrats, however, are very far from being united on any tariff program, and judging from Senator Caraway's advice they are afraid to make an aggressive campaign on this issue. The democrats did have a distinctive foreign policy, under the Wilson administration, but they deliberately threw it away at the New York convention when they turned their backs upon the League of Nations.

The Ins and the Outs.

Now, we may ask, what is left? Senator Caraway says, nothing but "generalities." Does that mean anything more than that the democrats want the offices, and the power, and the emoluments thereof. And in what way shall the republican party justify its claim to be kept in power? If I were a republican writing the platform, I should simply write this sentence, "Let well enough alone." It is true that this answer would not satisfy the rural sections of this country, nor win the votes of those who believe that our nation ought to have some sense of responsibility for the welfare of the rest of the world. Nor would it satisfy the conscience of those who have been shocked by the moral corruption of political officials and the debauching of the ballot box by unscrupulous party leaders. And it would fail to meet the demands of those who blush with shame when they consider our policy in Central America. Nevertheless, so long as the opposing party has nothing to suggest but "generalities," why not "let well enough alone?"

Hasn't the time arrived to utterly discard and repudiate the political leadership which has not enough moral purpose and political wisdom to propose a definite political program at such a critical hour in our history as will challenge the moral enthusiasm of the people? Why should we put the republicans out and the democrats in, if the democrats have nothing better to propose than that which the republicans are already giving us? What a miserable game it is, this merely trying to unite the different factions of the party in order to elect some innocuous party candidate who has done nothing and promises to do nothing which will make friction within the party. One cannot help recalling the old story of the white man who wanted to borrow a nickel from an old negro, to pay his way across the river on the ferry. The timely answer was given, "A white man what has to borrow a nickel from an old negro, to get across the ribber—it don't make no diffunce which side the ribber he's on."

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

Protestantism Pilloried by One of Its Priests Blind to Signs of the Times.

There is undoubtable evolution in all things that depend upon the intelligence and power of the human mind for their motivation and development. Not the least of those things is the "religion" of an individual, a sect, or a race.

Although preachers of the "good news" from a divine source should be the most optimistic and cheerful of men, it happens that many of them are seemingly the lineal heirs of Old Man Gloom and his 57 varieties of pessimism. Occasionally one of those ravens perches upon the bust of Pallas above our chamber door and tries to curdle our blood with his croak of "Nevermore."

In the current issue of the staid and conservative "Atlantic Monthly" magazine one of those "prophets of evil" publishes an omnibus indictment of the offenses of Protestantism and envisions it at the religious crossroads facing down the fork that leads into the wilderness of obsolescence!

It is profitable to have one's faith tried by attack now and then. It is also wise to have some one occasionally inspect the foundations and stability of the structure in which you live, and report any weakness he thinks he has discovered, though his judgment may turn out to be a mistaken one. Religion never has been and ought never to be immune from such experiences.

What Does Protestantism Mean?

The historic events that gave origin and substance to Protestantism are not so informing and important to the average person of today who has a will to religion. That which interests him is what does Protestantism signify today?

To the vast majority of our people it means any cult of Christianity that is not Roman Catholic.

With most of us Protestantism is our personal rejection of certain paramount dogmas and decorations of the Church of Rome under the plenary primacy of a pope.

The Christian fundamentals are the same with Protestants and Romanists. The division line between them separates their credal ideas and their fashions of worship. Out on a prairie far from any church the Protestant and the Catholic talk and worship pretty much alike.

Public opinion, the great arbiter of common issues, looks upon Romanism as a world-wide religious, social and political organism; as operating constantly and universally in all three fields of action; and determined to seek the dominion of papal authority in all those three departments of life in whatever nation that gives a foothold to "the church." The record of "the church" justifies that opinion.

Protestantism, on the other hand, is looked upon as a general concensus of protest against the salient characteristics of Romanism; as the open arena for self-determined religious faith, for freedom of the individual conscience, and for that liberty in worship that satisfies one's own uncoerced spirit. Protestantism is not an organism; it is a religious highway on which one may travel without taskmaster or tolls.

The Offenses of Protestantism.

The newly-emerged lambaster of Protestantism, whose contribution to the "Atlantic Monthly" is drawing our discussion, is Rev. Dr. Herbert Parrish, who is rector of a prominent Protestant Episcopal church in New Jersey.

Incidentally, it almost goes without the saying of it, that if there is any life environment in America fully calculated to gender pessimism in a preacher it exists in New Jersey.

Dr. Parrish is convinced that present day Protestantism is moribund and can only be revivified into religious potency by a drastic housecleaning, followed by the refurnishing of our faith living rooms and the redecoration of our church rituals where we have any. In plain terms he advocates that the Protestant church—"shall sweep out into the dust heap of time its own superstitions and hypocrisies, its narrow nationalisms and racial peculiarities, its sentimental cant, its vapid prayer meetings, its redundant and verbose liturgies, its stodgy services, its preposterous confessions of faith, its bigotry and prejudices, its padded and fictitious martyrologies, its smug self-satisfactions, its holier-than-thou pose, its lay popes, its fond and fanatical trust in secular legislation, its bitter intolerance, its suspicious and terrible emotionalism, its assumption that mere negation constitutes salvation, and the thousand and one other Pecksniffian attributes that in its name have so often brought all religion into contempt among sensible people. Let the good work be thoroughly done this time, and not stopt by any premature armistice."

That is a savage bill of specific accusations against the religious beliefs and practices of thirty millions of Protestants in this country, to count no further. It is up to the grand jury of the Protestant churches to decide whether the presentment is "a true bill"?

The Evolution That Is.

Let the verdict of churchmen be what it may, the evident fact is that Dr. Parrish has espoused a religious evolution hard to wait upon and overlooked an evolution that is actually going on all around us.

He pleads for an organic evolution. But the evolution that is going on is inorganic, individual and yet growing contagious.

It is revealed in the passion of millions of persons, both churchmen and laymen, to restore the personal leadership of Jesus and obedience to His authoritative teachings. In Him men are more and more coming to recognize "the fullness of the Godhead" and to realize that to follow His example is to fulfill "the whole duty of man."

To such men "catechisms" are indeed archaic, ancient credal concepts are outworn, and much of sectarian practices become useless. They reject ecclesiastical censorship. They assert their God-proclaimed power and right to "worship God in spirit and in truth," to hear what Jesus says to them, and to "seek the Kingdom of God" without leading strings.

A New Order of Christians.

There is spreading around the world a passionate conviction that the plainly stated religion of the Christ is that which commands common faith and for a man or nation to live it is to be saved from error and all manner of degradations. The religion is spreading that the person of Jesus is the supreme one in human leadership and that his doctrines are fitted to all men in all ages; that by them we must confess the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man; and that when mankind generally can be brought to action on those truths, there will be "peace on earth to men of good will!"

And it is to that great day that the reverent men of the world are reaching forth their faiths.

They do not feel prohibited from calling themselves Christians because they have not confessed a certain creed and joined some particular church communion.

Just as a man who has learned his democratic political beliefs from the character and teachings of Thomas Jefferson and consistently adheres to them, has the right to call himself "a democrat," so men of common sense are coming to believe that any one who accepts the personal leadership and teachings of Jesus, and lives in them, is as fully entitled to call himself "a Christian" as was St. Paul, or St. Augustine, or Dr. Parrish, of New Jersey. And such is the new religion that the spirit of this age is evolving.

"There's a Great Day Coming!"

In the churches and in big revival meetings there is a favorite song that evokes enthusiasm. It says "There's a Great Day Coming," and so there is. "The Sun of Righteousness" is high up in the sky of the living world. He is Jesus and to Him the faith and loyalty of men are turning for light, strength and the hope by which a man purifies himself "even as He is pure."

Whether this or that sect shall survive or perish; whether this or that church organism shall fail or evolve to greater service; whatever incidents may happen, it is easily believable that we are moving toward a time when the friends and followers of Jesus shall be bound in the unity of their common religion.

The Emancipation of Georgia

BY SAM W. SMALL.

The Condition of the Farm Industry of the State and Its Needed Reconstruction.

She did it during the war between the states more than 60 years ago and supplied more than her normal share to the support of the far-flung southern armies in the fields of conflict.

Then she had but few more than a million of population—a third of her present inhabitants; the strongest men of the state were in the armies; the industries of her farms and towns were almost wholly managed by the old men, war cripples and more often by the women of the farms and plantations. The state, with her sisters, was isolated from the buying and selling markets of the world by enemy armies and blockading fleets; the farm work was done by child-minded slaves; and yet Georgians fed well and faced hunger only when in sudden, forced flights from their invaders.

Those of us who have survived from those years do not need any arguments to convince us that the Georgians of today can "live at home" with amazing comfort and enriching profits from the fruits of their own toil and soil—if they will!

Self-Emancipation Needed.

It has been wittily said that the war of the '60s emancipated the slaves, the farm tractor has largely emancipated the mules, the Fords and good roads are emancipating horse-drawn vehicles and now it is up to the farmer to emancipate himself from slavery to King Cotton and far-west food providers!

Perhaps we talk about farming too much in the "altogether" as we generally discuss "salvation" and "evolution." But in the truest way, farming, like nearly every other vocation, is a one-man business and depends for its success upon the intelligence, industry and economic thrift of the farmer "all by himself!"

No farmer in these days, either in Georgia or elsewhere, can be accounted wise who sits around waiting for "farm bloc" mass action, national relief legislation, or tariff equalization, to make his farm flourish into self-support and comforting profits.

In this good old state of Georgia that has been so richly stocked by Providence and is so liberally treated by Mother Nature, the average common-sense farmer should be the most independent man on our map and able to put up over his home door, at the end of every season, the famous motto of old Elder Reynolds, of Hall county: "Debtor to the world—Nothing!"

The Condition That We Face.

The undeniable fact is that one-and-a-quarter million of the people of Georgia are directly and wholly dependent upon farming for their yearly living.

How many more of them are largely dependent upon the purchasing power of the farmers may be left to the imagination.

But we know that if the year's crops sell for more than the cost of their production the average farm family lives in comfort and is accounted to have prospered.

If, however, the prices of farm products are generally below their production cost the average farm family is involved in debts and privations.

Hence the supreme importance of transforming farming into an every-year profitable industry in Georgia. That can be done. Eventually, it must be done, and why not now begin the good work with the opening of the planting season of this year?

The practical and profitable value of diversified farming in Georgia is no dream or delusion conjured by theorists. Everywhere in the state can be seen and studied with profit actual demonstrations that the man on the farm who produces his home supplies to the fullest volume and sells his surplus products for "easy money" is the envy of his neighbors and a pet of the bankers and merchants.

No Miracle-Man Feat

What such self-supporting, bankroll and independent farmers have done and are doing is not a miracle. It is the application of horse-sense to a business problem and working out to a paying solution.

That sort of success does not come by mob action. It is an individual enterprise and the power to win out in it must be generated in the farmer himself, the banker, the supply merchant, the fertilizer company and the implement dealer can help him effectively, and will be eager to do it whenever they hear him publish his "declaration of independence," and believe he has the will and courage to "make good"!

Present poor farm conditions are too much excused upon the plea that our agriculture has to be "done on credit." That has always been the case and is now in every farming district in the country at large. Banking, manufacturing, merchandising, transportation and international trade are all "done on credit." Ninety-five per cent of the business of the civilized world is "done on credit."

That he must have credit with a banker and merchants in order to "carry on" should be no drag to any farmer whose experience and plan of operations offer confidence to them that he is a safe risk. They will gladly agree with him upon safe and ample terms of credit, never fear.

The Factors of Fortune.

The Georgia association, whose authority cannot be questioned, says "$160,000,000 is now being annually spent out of the state for foodstuffs which can be economically produced on our own soil."

That is a fact that should bring a hot blush to the cheeks of every man and woman in Georgia and especially shock the self pride and patriotism of every farmer in the state, white and black.

There is a sum of cash money that figures over $640 for every farm in Georgia. Yet the same reliable authority tells us that last year, 1926 in some parts of the state the average farmer made only $42.37—not enough actual money to pay for the gasoline to run a Ford car!

Yet the farmers of Georgia themselves sent at least one-fourth of the money to buy foodstuffs from other states, or the striking sum of $40,000,000, which is half the value of the lint cotton crop of the state for last year!

Every year the people of Georgia will consume an average number of pounds of beef. Why buy it from the western packers when it can be raised, slaughtered, packed, and distributed throughout the state, right here in Georgia at least as cheaply. All the processes of putting steak on the breakfast table have been tried out in this state and are now being carried on. There is no acceptable reason why they should not be expanded to the full measure of the home state demand.

Supply the Home Market.

Taking that one matter of beef as an adequate illustration, the paramount fact stands forth that the future prosperity of the farmer in Georgia will depend almost wholly upon his determination to supply his own home and the home markets from his own soil and labors.

That way lies sure competence, comfort and financial independence.

No sane man can question for an instant that, had the farmers of the state "lived at home" and only supplied the Georgia demands for foodstuffs since 1920, there would not have been 61,623 farms absolutely abandoned in our commonwealth in the following five years.

It is estimated by official investigators that today, when this is read, there are only 240,000 farms in actual operation in the state. It is certain that all of them not run by slovenly white men and hand-to-mouth negro tenants could be made profitable by a sensible balancing of crops and intensified cultivation of properly allocated acreage.

The problem, then, is to find the way to make the mass of our farmers understand that farming need not be a gamble, but ought to be and can be made the most reputable, reliable and profitable industry in which the brains and muscle of our people can be engaged.

The Immigration Problem

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, April 2.—(Special Correspondence.)—Democratic Senator James H. Reed, of Missouri, and republican Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, have come to have a curious relationship and a curious mutual conspicuousness in the senate. The relationship is emphasized by the odd contrasts of coincidences that attend them. Reed, of Missouri, is a democrat; Reed, of Pennsylvania, a republican. Reed, of Missouri, is a veteran; Reed, of Pennsylvania, is a comparatively new senator and, as ages go in the senate, comparatively young. Reed, of Missouri, is the most belligerent debater on the democratic side; Reed, of Pennsylvania is coming to be the most belligerent on the republican side. It is said there is a distinct blood relationship between the two, and newspapermen frequently speak of the Missouri one as "Cousin Jim" and of the Pennsylvania one as "Cousin Dave." Reed of Missouri, is of the west and Democratic Senator James H. Reed, of Missouri, and republican Senator David A. The relationship is emphasized by the odd contrasts of coincidences that attend them. Reed, of Missouri, is a democrat; Reed, of Pennsylvania, a republican. Reed, of Missouri, is a veteran; Reed, of Pennsylvania, is a comparatively new senator and, as ages go in the senate, comparatively young. Reed, of Missouri, is the most belligerent debater on the democratic side; Reed, of Pennsylvania is coming to be the most belligerent on the republican side. It is said there is a distinct blood relationship between the two, and newspapermen frequently speak of the Missouri one as "Cousin Jim" and of the Pennsylvania one as "Cousin Dave." Reed of Missouri, is of the west and Reed, of Pennsylvania, had a father who was one of the leading attorneys in Pittsburgh, Pa. The elder Reed was a partner of the late P. C. Knox, who was a senator from Pennsylvania, the secretary of state in Taft's cabinet, and attorney general in Roosevelt's cabinet. The law firm that included the elder Reed and Knox were attorneys for the United States Steel corporation. Young Reed, after graduating at Princeton, spent his legal career in this firm.

Reed, of Missouri, and Reed, of Pennsylvania, came spectacularly face to face during the closing days of the recent session, when democratic Jim Reed, of Missouri, wanted to go on with his special committee investigating Pennsylvania and other elections, while republican Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, was determined he should not. It was in this situation that most of their intellectual clashes occurred. There were others, however, in a running debate they engaged in on the subject of immigration. Reed, of Missouri, favors larger and more liberal admission of immigrants; Reed, of Pennsylvania, believes strongly in our present immigration restriction policy.

It is desirable to explain the present status of our national immigration restriction policy and the laws expressing that policy. Because of amendments attempted during the recent session the public became confused about just what changes were made. The whole subject of immigration restriction, in fact, became involved in a statistical swamp, such that it is doubtful if a great many people outside of congress understand clearly the present status of the law. An abstruse proposal called for the sake of compactness, "national origins," was introduced into the subject. Comparatively few people know what has become of the "national origins" idea—whether it is going into effect or whether it has been permanently abandoned.

For the clarification of all this it is desirable to be elementary.

This country first came to a policy of putting a numerical limit on immigration some six years ago, in 1920 and 1921. There had been mild restrictive laws before—laws that prescribed literacy tests and other tests; but before that time there had been

Plan New Fight For Farm Relief Measure

BY FREDERIC WILLIAM WILE.

Washington, April 2. — Definite plans for the new fight to secure McNary-Haugen farm legislation are about to be formulated. George N. Peek, of Illinois, chairman of the committee of twenty-two, who was the spearhead of the successful drive for legislation in the late congress, has just left Washington for Chicago. There he will discuss the situation with other members of the "North Central States Agricultural Conference."

The "conference" is the powerful farm body which is waging the battle for "a national program to establish agriculture on an economic parity with other industries." It represents farm organizations in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Ohio.

The ink of President Coolidge's veto signature was hardly dry before midwest farm organizations cleared for action, designed to rebuild what the veto demolished. Activities have been particularly vigorous in Indiana. There throughout March daily meetings of protest have been held in respective counties under the militant chairmanship of William H. Settle, president of the Indiana Farm Bureau federation. These meetings are to be kept up until every agricultural nook and cranny of the state has been incited to fresh determination along McNary-Haugen lines.

At St. Paul, on May 2, the first state-wide farm convention, called to protest President Coolidge's veto, will be held. Minnesota is reported to be in unusually belligerent mood. Senator Henrik Shipstead, the farmer-labor party's sole representative in the upper house of congress, is expected to be on hand and address his embittered agricultural constituents.

Governor John Hammill, of Iowa, contemplates calling a meeting of governors of a dozen or fourteen states throughout the corn and wheat belts. The exact time and character of this meeing probably will be determined after Chairman Peek of the committee of twenty-two has reported the lay of the land at Washington. Not only farm organizations in the west, but business bodies like Rotary clubs, chambers of commerce and bankers' associations are said to be ready to march, shoulder to shoulder, to achieve at Washington next winter the results narrowly missed because of the president's veto.

While it is predicted that there will be more force behind a McNary-Haugen bill next time than ever before —unless weather this summer should kill surplus crops and raise prices to high levels—it is foreshadowed that attack will be along the line of a general assault against the tariff. The speech delivered by Representative Dickinson, republican, of Iowa, in the house on March 2, clearly discloses this trend. There's also to be a good deal of crusading against "government paternalism" on behalf of banking, railroads and labor, with corresponding discrimination against agriculture. These tactics will involve bombardment of the federal reserve system, the interstate commerce commission, the immigration laws and the eight-hour statute. The fact that President Coolidge vetoed the farm bill and signed the McFadden bank bill the same day is to be cited as typical of Washington's present "hostility" to farm relief. Mr. Coolidge's recent sanction of a higher tariff on pig iron, with resultant increase in price, has riled farm leaders and furnished them, they say, with ammunition.

Almost immediately after the McNary-Haugen veto, prices of corn, wheat and other products shot upwards on the Chicago Board of Trade. Farm leaders are "suspicious" of the "forces" that brought this about. They say they remember how prices went up during the presidential campaign of 1924, reaching a peak just before election day, only to descend afterwards to figures which many considered as a normal supply-and-demand level.

Agricultural politicians at Washington note with lively interest the admissions of Charles D. Hilles, of New York, vice chairman of the republican national committee, who has just returned from a Coolidge scouting trip across the country. Mr. Hilles found that middle-western and northwestern farmers were "disheartened" by the McNary-Haugen veto. "The action is still resented," Mr. Hilles declared on his arrival in New York this week, "and may lead to reprisals."

There seems little question but that the G. O. P. leader accurately epitomizes the present and as correctly diagnoses the future.

New Federal Bosses.

With a number of new states having United States senators who are both democrats, a corresponding group of republican national committeemen has mounted to the eminence of federal patronage bosses. Probably the most important personage to come within this envied category is Charles D. Hilles, of New York, who is also vice chairman of the G. O. P. national organization. Other nabobs to whom, for the indefinite future, deserving republicans in quest of postoffices and higher rewards will have to wend their way, cap in hand, are National Committeemen Dr. E. B. Clements, of Missouri; William P. Jackson, of Maryland, and Thomas E. Campbell, of Arizona. In all of the southern states, including the border state of Tennessee, republican national committeemen since time immemorial have been the dispensers-in-chief of plums from the Washington orchard.

Pacifists in Telegram Drive.

If the United States doesn't bend the knee to Mexico, bring back the marines from Nicaragua, and recall our ships from Shanghai, it won't be the fault of an organized "telegram drive" aimed at the white house and the state department. It appears that some of our national associations and societies, particularly of the peace-at-any-price and pacifist hue, have been systematically inciting men and women all over the country to deluge the president and the secretary of state with messages of protest and appeal. All of them are attuned to the note that the United States should under no circumstances, no matter how provocative, do anything but turn the other cheek anywhere and whenever our rights abroad are flouted or violated. Women's organizations have been especially "worked" to this end. It is understood that "form" telegrams have been sent out from some central quarter, their recipients being urged forthwith to fire duplicates at the administration and at members of congress.

Capitol Cozy Corner.

The coziest corner in the capitol is naturally one of which the general public is largely unaware. It's the private library of the senate on one of the top floors just beneath the dome. There, presided over by E. C. Goodwin, librarian of the senate, is a small but exceedingly choice selection of books and records, mainly of reference character, for the exclusive use of members of the upper house. So few people know of the library and how to get to it that it's become a favorite retreat for senators who want to be lost to sight for the nonce.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

ANSWERED BY

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

New York City.

I am not asking this question out of disrespect, but as a Jew born in this city and my father and mother were born here before me. I want to know why it is that I am acceptable for many positions until I state my race, and then I have no chance.

The only place that I got without any question about race was in the draft for the war.

Do you think if Jesus Christ came to New York city today Christians would give him a job seeing that He was a Jew?

I may also state that the Italians are barred to a certain extent, but not as severely as the Jews.

Since race prejudice is most undesirable one can only hope that it is on the wane. Its irrationality is demonstrated by your question and you do well to expose its evils. Surely a man who is good enough to draft for war purposes is good enough to serve his country in peace.

But when did prejudice yield to sound sense and who can tell the losses it has inflicted upon society?

The past is packed with its monstrous deeds. It often inverts the present social order, making nonessential things barriers to progress and robbing gifted individuals of the opportunity to benefit their generations.

The fool delights in a race separation, the bigot nourishes it, the militarist relies upon it, the wise man or woman endeavors to subdue it, the New Testament outlaws it.

It is impossible to say what reception Jesus would get in New York. But that He would condemn many of our cherished ideas is beyond doubt. I advise you to maintain your integrity and value as a man and an American citizen. Conceal nothing, act in the open, and I venture the prediction that your city will prove as hospitable to you and to our Italian people as any place on earth.

Trenton, N. J.

Please explain the still small voice Elijah heard and which was more persuasive for him than the tempest, the earthquake or the fire.

It was the authoritative utterance which must proceed from one's self and not from one's surroundings, even though these are backed by a cataclysm. Various names are given it. Conscience, the paramount self, the higher nature and the word of the Lord within us are terms used for its description. It may command the seemingly impossible for us, which nevertheless remains a veritable reality in the sight of God. By obeying it men and women have been transfigured in heart and life and taken up into the very law before which they had bowed apparently helpless.

No doubt theologians would like to show that it is as absurd to distrust this voice as it would be to deny the multiplication table. But in so doing they would convert faith into knowledge and hope into realization. Elijah heard it, as you say, and submitted to its mandate, a submission which changed the course of Israel's history. Happy are those who heed as he did. For it does not always speak at our behest nor brook repeated neglect. But when its tones break the silence, in the soul's prompt acquiescence is its spiritual fortune.

Why are demagogues so plentiful in democracies?

They are plentiful everywhere both within and without democracies, and flourish under despotisms which endeavor to repress them. Tyranny usually begets the sour or unsound demagogism which poisons popular movements.

Yet certain types of so-called demagogues have their good side. Like Lord Mayor Wilkes, of London, or Orator Munt, of the Chartist Movement, they have sometimes relit the extinguished lamps of freedom and lessened the people's intolerable burdens.

The circumstances which give them an opening should also be considered. Genial confidence that things will work out for the best and the placid assumption that human progress is assured are not always possible in men alive to deeply entrenched public wrongs. They are sometimes dubbed demagogues, a title which in their case becomes an honor.

It gets its bad odor from those who seek to ride the storms of public indignation for personal ends or inflame widespread disaffection for the advancement of their private ambitions.

The two species should be the more carefully differentiated because of the prevalent tendency to identify the demagogue with what is insincere, selfish and non-social in behavior or flimsy and pretentious in statement. A well motived advocate of the general good, conspicuous for his eloquence and hold upon the masses, will be censured as a demagogue by apologists for privilege. Such he is, strictly regarded, but one to be cherished. His capacity to capture the conscience of his countrymen is a valuable asset which his opponents would describe as statesmanship were it employed in their behalf.

SPARTA METHODISTS PLAN NEW CHURCH

Sparta, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—Several architects have been here this week in consultation with the building committee of the new Methodist church and it is thought that plans have about been completed for the new structure. A picture with blue prints of the building planned by the committe has been submitted to the membership and the majority of them were pleased.

The proposed building will be two stories high, having Sunday school rooms on the lower floor. The structure will be built of red pressed brick with granite trim and will cost about $35,000.

An active canvass will begin among the membership in a few days to raise the balance of the funds needed for building the new church.

SPARTA COURT PLANS ADJOURNED SESSION

Sparta, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—Heavily congested dockets, civil and criminal, at the March term of Hancock superior court, now in session, will require an adjourned term of the court to be called for the trial of important civil and criminal cases that Judge James B. Park is not disposed to carry over until the next regular term of the court, the judge announced Thursday morning.

The third Monday in May has been fixed for convening the adjourned court term.

Goes One—With a Song

Frank L. Stanton.

The Singer has passed—Yet he cheered us along—
Goes One—With a Song.
His Passing leaves lonely a numberless throng—
Goes One—With a Song—
From the door of his soul where that last song lies—
The Mists are removed as he enters the skies—
Face to face with his God new songs shall arise.
Goes One—With a Song.

We shall sing. Shall sing when the veil has been rent—
Goes One—With a Song.
When the songs of the soul shall have full vent—
Goes One—With a Song.
When sorrow shall cease its power to control—
The rapture of Heaven shall speak through the soul—
And the Songs of the Ransomed through ages shall roll.
Goes One—With a Song.

SULLIVAN DISCUSSES IMMIGRATION PROBLEM

The census bureau went to work. They examined the first census, the one of 1790, nearly 140 years ago, together with much other early data. From this they made deductions and prepared an intricate report. The report was submitted to three members of the cabinet: Secretary of State Kellogg, Secretary of Commerce Hoover, Secretary of Labor Davis. These three members of the cabinet transmitted the report to President Coolidge, as they were required by law to do, and in turn President Coolidge transmitted the report to congress.

However, the three members of the cabinet, in transmitting the estimate of national origins, expressed their own doubt of its accuracy.

They said: "This is the best information we have been able to secure. We wish . . . to state that in our opinion the statistical and historical information available raises grave doubts as to the whole value of these computations. . . . We therefore cannot assume responsibility for such conclusions."

This report agreed with the judgment of most of the members of congress who tried to look into the statistics about national origins. The guesswork that was inseparable from trying to estimate the number of settlers who came to America from each country in colonial days, and the other guesswork involved, threw a fog of doubt on the whole notion of determining national origins or using national origins as the basis for future immigration. It was the ideal standard, but it was not practicable.

When a majority of the house and senate came to this conclusion, they decided to give up the idea, temporarily at least, of adopting the national origins basis. Congress therefore passed a joint resolution continuing the present basis, the census of 1890, in effect for another year after July 1, next. Automatically, the question will come up again in the next congress, because something must be done to set a standard for the period after the present emergency law ends, which is July 1, of next year, 1928.

Although there will be a debate about it in the next congress, and although national origins will again come to the front, the common judgment is that the national origins idea will be dropped permanently. Instead of attempting national origins, the present basis, the census of 1890, probably will be made permanent.

At the same time, there is a feeling that the number of immigrants now admitted is too large. The number who are permitted to come in under the quota law is about 163,000, plus about another 100,000.

To understand how this extra hundred thousand comes in it is necessary to remember that the present law puts limitations only on overseas countries. The present law does not apply to Canada, Mexico, or any of the other countries of Central and South America and the West Indies. Since the feling is that the present total number of immigrants admitted, about 263,000, is too large, an attempt will be made in the next congress to reduce the figure.

The proposal of Congressman Albert Johnson, of Washington, who is the leader of congress in matters of migration, is that first the quota law shall be applied to Canada, Mexico and the rest of the countries on this continent, the same as to overseas countries. His second proposal is that the present basis, the census of 1890 be kept, but that it be modified so as to reduce the number admitted each year. Congressman Johnson's proposal is that the number admitted in 1929 shall be 10 per cent less than the number admitted in 1928, and that thereafter there shall be another reduction of 10 per cent each year for five years. The result of this proposal would be that by 1933 the total number of immigrants permitted to come in should be about 75,000.

In the debate on immigration that took place in the recent session of congress Senator James Reed, of Missouri, advocated, first of all, the throwing overboard of the national origins idea. He used such phrases as "the wildest kind of a guess . . . the most impractical thing I ever saw written into a law . . . the task of unraveling the blood of a people is impossible . . . idiotic, nonsensical . . . a shame, a fraud.

In the judgment that the national origins idea is impracticable most of congress agrees with Senator Reed of Missouri. But Reed, of Missouri went further. He attacked the principle of immigration restriction, as it now is carried out. In this most of congress decidedly does not agree with Reed, of Missouri. Probably not over five senators out of 96, and probably not over 50 members of the lower house out of 433 would reverse the principle of immigration restriction or take any action that would increase the total number of immigrants now admitted.

Reed, of Missouri, however, was strenuous in his advocacy of letting in more immigrants, provided they are properly selected. He said he would put brakes on immigration, but would put them on in a different way. Among other things, Reed of Missouri, said:

"We cannot fix genius by the red lines of a map. . . . What this country ought to do is to recognize that every man who comes here with a wealth in his brain and a wealth in his muscles, with a heart that beats true to the principles of this republic and a soul that aspires to the betterment of the race is a contribution to America's wealth."

To this Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, requested his Missouri cousin to "tell us what kind of a stethoscope we can use to find how the immigrant's heart beats in his patriotism and how his soul looks toward the problems the senator mentioned."

Reed, of Missouri, replied: "I would establish in those foreign countries a board . . . so that when a man asks to be permitted to come to America he would be compelled to make proof as to the kind of life he had led, the kind of man he was; and if the board found him honorable, self-sustaining, clean in body and mind according to all the records" . .

To this suggestion Senator David Reed, of Pennsylvania, who has studied immigration thoroughly, said: "If that board disposed of one case every five minutes and worked eight hours a day it would take 300 years to dispose of the pending applications for immigration from Italy to the United States."

TWO-PICTURE BILL FEATURED AT RIALTO

A combination of the screen version of Peter B. Kyne's story, "Breed of the Sea," with Margaret Livingston, Ralph Ince and Dorothy Dunbar in the cast; and a reissue of Charlie Chaplin's most famous comedy. "Shoulder Arms," should provide entertainment for patrons of the Rialto theater this week, in the opinion of Manager W. T. Murray, who arranged the double program.

Pathe News is on every Rialto program, and Frank Turner directs the program of music. A story of twin brothers, one who follows the sea and the other who becomes a minister, is the theme of "Breed of the Sea." The picture opens in Virginia, but most of it is laid in the Macassar Straits, just off the coast of Java. It is here after years of separation that the brothers meet in strange circumstances and from then on the tale unfolds in an amazingly colorful and dramatic manner. Ralph Ince plays the dual role of the twin brothers and at the same time directs the picture. The cast includes Dorothy Dunbar, Margaret Livingston, Alphonz Ethier, Pat Harmon and many others. The story is from the pen of that much loved author—Peter B. Kyne.

"Shoulder Arms," produced several years ago, loses nothing with the passing of time, and it compares most favorably with the comedian's later efforts.

PALACE REMODELED; CLOSED THREE DAYS

The management of the Palace theater, Inman Park, will start immediately upon an extensive remodeling plan which will, when completed, place the Palace in the front ranks with community theaters throughout the country.

Heavy luxurious carpets, handsome new draperies, beautiful decorations, inside and out and special electric fixtures are some of the changes planned.

Work will begin at once and will be carried through to completion at a cost of approximately $10,000. The Palace will be closed for two days, Monday and Tuesday, while the new seats are being installed.

The first program of the coming week will be offered Wednesday and will be one of the newest screen features. An excellent film bill has been arranged for the balance of the week.

Children do not always know what's best for them, but then neither does anybody else.

Fight! Two Stars Battle for Honors In Howard Picture

A picture arrives at the Howard theater tomorrow which holds promise of being one of the season's best. Those who have seen it at private screenings have given the film highest praise and it arrives wrapped in a blanket of "ohs" and "ahs."

"Children of Divorce," Frank Lloyd's new Paramount production, offers much to the cinema connoisseur. The cast alone is one to excite admiration. Two of filmdom's most beautiful actresses, Clara Bow and Esther Ralston, are starred.

Nor is the galaxy of masculine talent one that's easily overlooked. Gary Cooper is soon to be featured in Paramount Pictures. Einar Hanson has appeared in two Corinne Griffith pictures. Norman Trevor can never be forgotten because of his masterly de Beaujolais portrayal in "Beau Geste."

Adapted from Owen Johnson's Red Book serial, "Children of Divorce" concerns itself with the offspring of separated parents. It takes three youngsters, all the children of wealthy families, and follows them from their boarding school-convent childhoods to jazz-mad, cabaret youth and from that to marriage. Director Frank Lloyd has taken a cycle which exists in modern society and treated it with honest sincerity.

A brilliant and picturesque entertainment is promised by the Howard in its Publix anniversary stage revue, "Roaming Gypsies," produced by Frank Cambria. The stage setting is said to be most striking in its color and lighting effects. A dagger dance by Basil Ivanoff; vocal numbers by Virginia Johnson, and Bernard Ferguson, baritone; violin solos by Nanette Berr and a sensational gypsy dance by Olive Vernell are the high lights of the entertainment. A mixed quartet of gypsy singers and a ballet of gypsy dancers also contribute color and charm to the performance.

As a special anniversary attraction the Howard will present Atlanta's prime favorite, Harl Smith and his orchestra in a red-hot avalanche of jazz hits. This great jazz combination appeared at the Howard several years ago and scored a tremendous hit with Atlanta theatergoers.

Arthur Martel, master of the organ, will render another selection on the mighty Wurlitzer. Other subjects on the Publix anniversary program will include an overture, news reel and selected comedy.

Humor and pathos with suspense and tense interest are blended adroitly in "The Taxi Dancer," the new screen hit which will be the feature picture offering this week at Loew's Grand theater. The story is one of lurid night life in New York but the theme is handled skillfully and an appealing background is provided for the action. Joan Crawford, one of the latest screen stars to appear on the horizon, plays the leading role and is given able support by the popular Owen Moore.

Joan Crawford, who has risen to cinematic heights within the past year, plays the title role, that of the carefully reared girl, who when faced with the hardest actualities is unprepared to meet them. Miss Crawford essays the part of the "taxi dancer," the little understood class of girls who hire out as professional partners for any men who care to dance with them. By a perfectly natural train of events, this girl, "Joslyn Poe," whom Joan portrays, is forced to become one of these girls, but the method in which she is extricated is most unusual and thrilling.

An excellent performance is given by Owen Moore, who plays the part of the good-hearted crook, "Lee Rogers," who reforms in spite of himself through his association with Joslyn. Moore's sincerity, coupled with his humor, makes him one of the most likable of leading men.

Gertrude Astor, seen all too seldom, has an excellent part as "Kittie Lane," the gold-digger, more sinned against than sinning.

OLD-TIME DANCES AT PONCE DE LEON

The graceful dances of olden days will be revived and thoughts turned to the days of crinoline when a special added entertainment attraction will be given on Monday night, April 4, for patrons of the new Ponce de Leon theater by pupils of the Hursh School of Dancing. Four couples will demonstrate some of the dances of the days when grandmother was a girl. Among the most important of the dance numbers will be those advocated by Henry Ford. The exhibition will be given at both the evening performances.

BARRYMORE AS VILLON —NAW, 'TISN'T 'VILLAIN'

In the series of important film parts John Barrymore has played there have been Sherlock Holmes, Beau Brummel, Don Juan, Chevalier de Greux, Ahab, Nemesis of the ferocious Moby Dick, Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, and now Francois Villon, sad, bad, mad, glad beggar-poet of 15th Century Paris, and photagonist of "The Beloved Rogue." Barrymore's first United Artists picture, which comes to the Metropolitan theater soon.

Cameo.

"Upstage."—Norma Shearer, acclaimed as one of the loveliest of the lovely women gracing the screen, comes again to Atlanta, when the Cameo brings back her latest screen success, "Upstage," on Monday and Tuesday.

In "Upstage" Miss Shearer portrays the role of a girl who had landed a job because of her nerve and beauty, who becomes a victim of vanity, loses the man she loved, and only comes back when she forgets self in an effort to help.

The picture is replete with heart interest, drama, some comedy and a thrill or two in addition to Miss Shearer's most charming personality.

Wednesday and Thursday the Cameo brings back "The Magician," produced by the man who made the "The Four Horsemen." "The Magician" is produced on the same magnificent, lavish scale and has a story of rare power, different from almost anything ever before exhibited on the silver sheet.

Zane Grey's "The Man of the Forest," starring Jack Holt, comes to the Cameo Friday and Saturday.

OLD STAGE PLAY OF EMIGRANT LIFE IS GEORGIA FILM

"The Auctioneer," among the first of the Warfield-Belasco stage successes, will have its first local screen showing at Keith's Georgia this week. As a stage play "The Auctioneer" has almost everything that wholesome entertainment could have. It is packed with pathos, comedy, intrigue and romance. From the advance notices the screen production of this famous drama of emigrant life in America should be equally as popular, containing as it does the ever new and interesting struggle for wealth and power.

"The Auctioneer" sets forth in a very human manner the story of a little Irish orphan who is adopted by a Russian and his wife on their way to America. It tells of the struggles for existence, of gradual success when the first store is opened and they no longer peddle their wares on the streets. Of greater success and then sudden defeat, finally to rise once more to wealth and affluence.

George Sidney, famous character actor for many years and former friend of David Warfield, has the role of the auctioneer and has given the character life that is real. Marion Nixon and Gareth Hughes head a supporting cast which fits into the story without the slightest friction. "The Auctioneer" will be shown all week in addition to the stage show of five Keith vaudeville acts.

Alamo No. 2.

"Stolen Pleasures." That may mean anything from playing hookey to drinking bootleg booze in ordinary life but to an author or playwright it is the stuff from which great dramas are made and has usually to do with cheating sweethearts, husbands or wives.

It is therefore the title and the theme of the new photoplay feature at the Alamo No. 2 theater Monday and Tuesday and the management promises plenty of action amid the dramatic and thrilling series of marital mix-ups. It is a story of foolish husbands and wives in the clutch of the green-eyed monster, jealously. It is a big story a powerful and dramatic preachment that will be especially interesting and pointed in its lesson to husbands and wives.

Wednesday and Thursday, Ricardo Cortez and Florence Vidor in "The Eagle of the Sea." Friday only, Cecil B. DeMille's "Forbidden Fruit." Saturday Wolfheart the wonder dog in "The Courage of Wolfheart."

"CAMILLE" OPENS AT GLOBE IN NEW YORK

Norma Talmadge in her big production of "Camille" opens at the Globe theater, New York, April 21, for an indefinite run at a $2.20 price scale, with only two performances daily, the same as other big Broadway attractions. The film, directed by Fred Niblo follows closely the original Dumas story. Camille, herself being a product of all ages, fits as well into the modern settings of the picture version as into the background of the early nineteenth century, in which it was written.

Miss Talmadge's cast includes Gilbert Roland, Maurice Costello, Harvey Clark, Alec Francis, Helen Jerome Eddy, Rose Dione, Lilyan Tashman, Evelyn Selbie and other supporting players of prominence.

West End.

The new screen motion picture program at the West End theater this week features the latest Columbia pictures production, "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," with Shirley Mason in the title role to be shown on Monday and Tuesday. The story is based on the famous song of that name, written by Maud Nugent twenty years ago.

"Aloma of the South Seas" is the picture scheduled for showing on Wednesday, featuring Gilda Gray, the beautiful and famous dancer in a picture filled with flaming situations in a setting of tropical isles. A love romance weaves its way throughout the picture. It is a Paramount picture directed by Maurice Tourneur.

Capricious Bebe Daniels comes to the West End theater Wednesday in "The Manicure Girl," the story of a manicurist who falls in love with the son of a rich man and the resulting love affair and complications that the two encounter.

Girl Crosses Ice ---Nope, Not Eliza, But Marion Davies

Six acres of ice—"hot ice," at that, for it was frozen so cold that it burned like fire, is the strange scientific paradox that made possible one of the most effective scenes in Marion Davies' latest Cosmopolitan spectacle, "The Red Mill," which opens a week's engagement at the Metropolitan theater Monday.

By means of freezing pipes under the water, a great canal, lined with Dutch houses for the picture, was frozen over, and several hundred people skated on it, in a colorful winter fete that marked one of the more elaborate scenes in the new production.

The canal was frozen over by an ice plant erected alongside the set; a Dutch village along the canal that covered more than six acres; one of the largest and most elaborate settings ever constructed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

The new picture is a hilarious comedy romance of Holland, based on the famous stage hit of the same name by Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert which, some years ago, was one of the biggest theatrical attractions in America.

The Cast.

Miss Davies appears as a Holland girl, in blonde pigtails, quaint Dutch costume and wooden shoes, in the new picture. Owen Moore plays her lover, a happy-go-lucky English tourist.

Enrico Leide and his Metropolitan orchestra present for the overture selections from Victor Herbert's comic opera, "The Red Mill." Mr. Leide's musical score for the feature photoplay is original in which he employs much of the score of the "Red Mill" and Dutch and Holland music. "Because You're You" is the love theme. The extra screen attractions will include a new Christie comedy featuring Bobby Vernon and titled "Jail Birdies" and the latest issue of the Metropolitan News and Views.

Ponce de Leon.

The real inside story of backstage Broadway, its glamor and bright lights, pathos and humor combine in making "The Song and Dance Man" which will be shown at the Ponce de Leon theater Monday and Tuesday of this week a most entertaining picture. Tom Moore, Bessie Love, and Harrison Ford take the leading roles.

A play upon all human emotions is accomplished in the showing of the marvelous picture, "Robin Hood," which comes to the Ponce de Leon on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. Douglas Fairbanks was never more brilliant and entertaining than in this stupendous production of the days of the twelfth century.

"Best People," featuring Warner Baxter, Esther Ralston and Kathlyn Williams to the Ponce de Leon Friday. It is the story of the novel situation of a girl of a wealthy family pleading with her father's chauffeur to marry her.

On Saturday, "Hell's Highroad," the drama of a love that was sold with a check book and bought back with a pistol is to be shown. Leatrice Joy takes the leading role and is assisted by an exceptional cast of players.

SHEESLEY SHOWS TO ARRIVE HERE TODAY

The Greater Sheesley shows, known as one of the largest and most modern of outdoor amusement organizations of the collective type, will arrive in Atlanta today on its special circus train and erect its tents on the Marietta avenue showgrounds for a week's engagement. The Sheesley shows come from winter quarters in Valdosta, Ga., and all equipment is said to be spick and span for the season's route, which will take the company of more than 500 people and animals in the middle west and Canada. Captain John M. Sheesley, one of America's best known showmen, who has many friends in Atlanta, travels with the circus train and is in personal charge of all departments. The shows are said to carry a wealth of modern riding devices and thrillers and an attractive array of tented attractions. Captain Sheesley is a charter member of the showmen's legislative committee, which conducted the "clean up" campaign to purge the tented midways of undesirable features and followers of past seasons.

Tenth Street.

Elinor Glyn demonstrates by the picture, "Love's Blindness," which opens the week at the Tenth Street theater Monday and Tuesday of this week, that she well knows the public's taste in pictures as well as in fiction. The film was produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and features Pauline Starke and Antonio Moreno, two popular favorites.

"Wild, Wild Susan," which appears Wednesday, gives Bebe Daniels an excellent opportunity to demonstrate her power of acting and she takes advantage of this fact with a resulting picture of great merit. It is the story of a girl who had the weakness for getting into trouble.

No greater picture has been screened than "The Thief of Bagdad," starring the famous Douglas Fairbanks in an amazing spectacle of fantastic adventures that outdo the Arabian nights with a background of bewildering, beautiful and brilliant fancy. There is plenty of romance produced by "Doug" himself as the bandit. The picture will be shown on Thursday and Friday of this week.

Saturday, Richard Dix will be starred in "The Lucky Devil," which is a comedy with all the thrills and laughter you have been looking for. Dix had two weaknesses, women and speed, and he found plenty of both in the picture to be shown Saturday.

If you "take it easy" in youth you'll take it hard in later life.

The gent with the wild-looking whiskers and the spear is Robert B. Mantell, who is seen in Shakespearean roles this week at the Erlanger. Next—Genevieve Hamper, seen opposite Mantell. The gypsy maid and man are seen in "Roaming Gypsies," the Publix presentation at the Howard this week. Top right—two of the principals of Marie Sabbott and company, headlining turn on Loew's Grand stage this week. Lower left—Madge Kennedy and Sidney Blackmer, stars of the repertoire company which will be seen at the Erlanger this summer in Broadway successes. Rhea Dively, one of the stars of the Forsyth Players, is shown next. The Forsyth Players offer this week the famous success, "Two Fellows and a Girl." Lower right—Peggy O'Neill, who is featured on the all-girl bill at Keith's Georgia this week.

Fairfax.

"Let's Get Married," featuring Richard Dix in the title role, will be shown Wednesday. As far as action is concerned no Dix picture has ever exceeded this one. It is filled with comedy and entangling situations. Thursday and Friday, "The Amateur Gentleman," a romantic novel by Jeffrey Farnol in scenes laid in England with Richard Barthelmess in the leading role will be shown. The story concerns the adventures of a youth who would be a "gentleman" and contains a remarkable all-star cast in support.

Get Ready, Folks, Annual N. V. A. Week Is in the Offing

As this year marks the tenth anniversary of the founding of the National Vaudeville Artists' organization, Easter Week, starting April 17, will be a particularly gala occasion. Vaudeville houses throughout the country will offer special features and extra attractions and outside of the theaters, managers are planning to give balls, banquets, luncheons and benefits with which to raise funds and swell the N. V. A. sick and benefit fund for the needy in the profession.

The National Vaudeville Artists constitute what is recognized as one of the most perfect organizations of its kind in the world. Its annual expenditures for the insurance of its 18,000 members, its relief of aged and ailing, its assistance to artists in temporary distress, the care of widowed or orphaned dependents of deceased members, amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is for this reason that one week each year is set aside in which to raise funds. Since the inauguration of "N. V. A. Week," artists and managers have contrived to make it a week of outstanding features, and have established it in the public mind as one of the happiest periods of the entire season.

The interest of the public in vaudeville and its artists, always emphasized during this special week, is largely traceable to the unfailing generosity with which these people of the theater respond with their free services to the causes of charity, education, religion, patriotism and civic activities.

"Jubilee Week" this year will mark the further enrichment of all vaudeville programs and tend to create a red letter week wherever there is a vaudeville theater.

Tudor.

"Thunder Mountain." — What is probably one of the most powerful dramas ever made by Victor Schertzinger, "Thunder Mountain," will be shown at the Tudor Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

"Thunder Mountain" is a story of raw hate, of a man who kept a town ignorant so they wouldn't find him out; of a girl who drifted into this place and caused new hate to spring up, with a final great catastrophe climaxing, a mountain of thunder belching forth disaster.

Madge Bellamy, Paul Panzer, Leslie Fenton and Russell Simpson have important roles in the production.

The limbs of trees are bleak and bare
Wherever eyes may seek,
But flapper limbs at which we stare,
Though bare are never bleak.

The world may be your oyster, but not until after you have learned how to break through the shell.

LADIES MONOPOLIZE KEITH GEORGIA BILL

"The All Girl Revue," a show unique in a season of vaudeville surprises, opens at Keith's Georgia theater this week. The slogan of the production is "What Girls Can Do" and from advance notices you will be agreeably surprised at the talent and versatility of this particular group of young ladies, 35 in number, presenting a varied program ranging from athletics to jazz and classical music. On the screen will be "The Auctioneer," starring George Sidney in what was one of David Belasco's greatest stage successes.

If we must to enumerate the various and sundry stunts that girls can do we will begin with Marie and Tomah Genaro. They are graceful athletes and novelty dancers who have surrounded their offering with a stage setting of attractiveness.

Then we have the St. Claire Girls, Nola and Winifred. Their vaudeville production probably has something to do with men, or money, or marriage for it is programmed "The Same Old Story."

Next we introduce Grace Elder and her five dancing girls. They present solo and ensemble dances and impersonate other notables of the stage, including Eddie Leonard and his famous "tap dance."

Now we come to a comedy playlet, "Cook's Tour," presented by Carol Racine and Dorothea Ray, and with it comes the big surprise of the show—they have a mere man in the act! Fred Lloyd is the guide in this ramble of the rubbernecks and has the distinction of being the only man on the entire program.

Peggy O'Neil, known as the female Paul Whiteman of syncopation, is the leader and director of 25 musical maids. A band of Ingenues with a program which takes in the popular and the classic in music and in which various members of the organization prove that musical genius is not confined to the sterner sex. The result is a feminine congregation easy to look at and pleasing to hear.

You may be always looking for things
And never finding them,
But did you ever try
Looking for trouble?

LAST FROLIC OF YEAR BILLED FRIDAY AT 81

The last and biggest colored show of the season! That's the promise of Manager Tom Bailey of the 81 theater regarding Irving Miller's big "Brown Skin Models" company which features at the last midnight frolic of the season Friday night at 11 o'clock.

With two big acts and 24 scenes, in addition to a galaxy of stars, the "Brown Skin Models" company bids fair to prove Manager Bailey's assertion to the letter. Irving Miller, regarded as the foremost colored producer of the country, says that "Brown Skin Models" is his biggest show and those fans who are acquainted with the high type of show that Miller puts out will understand the significance of this statement.

Intsead of signing one well-known star as the feature and neglecting the rest of the cast, it is Miller's policy to assemble a company composed of stars of the first water in the colored show world and "Brown Skin Models" is an excellent example of this policy. The cast includes Minstrel Morris, Dodo Green, Lily Yuen, Lavenia Mack, George Williams, Eva Metcalf and six other stars in featured positions in addition to the remainder of the cast.

The chorus, which in colored shows is usually a chorus in very little else except name, has been especially selected by Miller to complete the dazzling array of talent composing the show. Sixteen "Brown Skin Models," who are said to be the last word in dancing and singing ability compose the big chorus.

Manager Bailey says that although he is incurring the biggest expense of the entire season in presenting "Brown Skin Models" to Atlanta midnight frolic patrons, there will be no increase in prices for the show. He is expecting a record crowd for this, the last colored show of the season. Tickets for the Friday night frolic are on sale at Chess' Place at Five Points and at the theater, 81 Decatur street.

"But I have an option on the place," declared the victim of the fake land salesman, throwing down the paper.

"No," replied his lawyer, after examining it; "you just have an optional delusion."

'Two Fellows and a Girl' Plays at Forsyth Theater

Another wonderful new comedy show, "Two Fellows and a Girl," called by George M. Cohan one of the best things he ever appeared in, hits Atlanta Monday night for a solid week's run at the Forsyth theater, Dick Stevenson and Ellis Baker heading the list of stars composing the cast.

The coming attraction, accepted by critics as one of the finest shows ever to leave New York for a tour of the country, is a comedy of the highest caliber, and is a "wise-cracking" proposition in which a fine mesh of love is strewn—just enough to make it snappy, breezy and interesting.

"Two Fellows and a Girl" is a type of play that has not been officially defined but is more generally accepted as "wise chatter," a rippling, haunting, lilting sort of comedy that is free of suggestiveness and vulgarity, and wholesome in the nth degree.

The play is one of youth, with the charms of that period. The old and young alike will enjoy it—the young will see themselves "as is," and the elders will see themselves as they "wuz." It will hark back to the eternal triangle, but what a strangely refreshing and different triangle the play really is. It lacks sex, suggestiveness, vulgar interpretation, so it must be a tremendously heavy comedy to have such a fine appeal to the average theatergoer.

Two young fellows are in love with a girl, a beautiful, strikingly fascinating girl, who cannot make up her mind whom she likes best. She decides to determine it by the toss of a coin. None of the trio knows how the cat will jump, so to speak, and the plot rollicks along, encircling and unwinding and tangling again, as only the lovesick can be tangled and enmeshed. Someone gets jealous, she marries one of them, but then the plot, instead of easing off, gets more messed up, with the result that audiences almost go frantic at the amusing and laughable situations that follow in lightning-like rapidity.

Dick Stevenson, Ellis Baker, Betty Laurence, Rhea Diveley, Lawrence Keating and others of the all-star Forsyth Players' cast will have wonderful opportunities this week in this light, airy, romantic, cheering comedy that has played to capacity houses over the country for the past few months.

Mantell-Hamper Company In Shakespearean Plays

The wonderful success of the Mantell-Hamper company last season in a tour that attracted more gross receipts than many of the musical attractions, and the approval that has greeted them in New York last season, would seem to indicate that the interest in Shakespearean drama is not only real, but is as permanent as it is possible for anything to be in the theater.

At least such is the belief of Robert B. Mantell. "Audiences are barometers of feeling," remarks Mr. Mantell, "even though I reveal nothing new in saying that. Many seasons ago, it was noticeable that virtually all those who attended Shakespearean performances were regulars, who 'observed Shakespeare,' if I might say so, with the same regularity as they observe Christmas. Recently, in the past two seasons, say, there has come to the theater another group, heretofore absent. These are the average theater-goers, in lieu of a more definite characterization, who have regarded Shakespeare as being too 'highbrow.' To their astonishment, they have discovered that his plays are really entertaining, with laughs, tears, thrills; everything, in short, that they look for at the theater. The lyrical lines, the dramatic suspense, all these are found in the plays of the great poet. And so, gradually but none the less surely, the public is again realizing that Shakespeare is human, entertaining, lovable even. And therefore, their interest is more marked, and lasting because of its genuineness."

The Mantell-Hamper company comes to the Erlanger theater for an engagement of one week, beginning tomorrow (Monday) night, in the following plays: "The Merchant of Venice," Monday night and Saturday matinee; "Richelieu," Tuesday; "As You Like It," Wednesday matinee; "Julius Caesar," Wednesday night; "King Lear," Thursday; "Hamlet" (in modern dress), Friday; "Macbeth," Saturday night. Seats for all performances may be secured at the theater box office, and at M. Rich & Bros. Co., store.

LOEW'S HEADLINER FEATURES SATIRE

Dainty Mary Sabbott, musical comedy star, will head a big company of singers and dancers in a satirical skit, "It's All a Fake," as the headline offering on the new bill of vaudeville at Loew's Grand theater this week. In Miss Sabbott's company are such well known stars as Jack La Frack, who appeared in Atlanta recently as star in "No, No, Nannette," Carol Solga and the Vee Elle girls. This is a real singing and dancing show which possesses the unusual feature of being extremely funny throughout. Miss Sabbott is one of the foremost vaudeville artists of the country and has surrounded herself with a company of players of the very highest ability. This act has won great success wherever it has been offered.

Good old Al Abbott, of comedy fame, is one the new bill in his skit "At the Old Town Hall." This popular singer and comedian has a wealth of new funmaterial and a bunch of great comedy songs. He still scores heavily with his harmonics and accordeon. Al Abbott is as staple in funmaking as flour in a grocery store and he always manages to keep his act right up to the minute in all the latest things in comedy.

One of the pretentious offerings of the new program will be "A Golf Fantasy," presented by Smith and Colton company consisting of seven people. This is a comedy novelty with musical and dancing numbers. The act is odd and unusual and contains some pleasing surprises.

Potter and Gamble will present a cute little kiddie turn entitled, "In a Nursery." This is an appealing little sketch with songs and dances.

The opening number will be a great Spanish dancing act offered by the Santiago Trio, Argentine entertainers. The act is mounted with beautiful scenery and some gorgeous costumes are worn.

The feature picture on the new program will be "The Taxi Dancer," with Joan Crawford and Owen Moore in the leading roles.

FRED RAYMOND JOINS FORSYTH STOCK GROUP

Fred Raymond, in seasons past a member of the famous Lyric and Forsyth players, and one of the most popular stock players ever to appear in Atlanta, has signed a contract with the present Forsyth Players, headed by Miss Ellis Baker and Dick Stevenson, it was announced Saturday by Manager Martin L. Semon, of the theater.

FRED RAYMOND.

Mr. Raymond will succeed Alan Devitt, second mand, who left the company two weeks ago.

Mr. Raymond played in Atlanta stock companies many months all told and is personally known to hundreds of theatergoers. He is very popular here and his addition is expected to strengthen the present group.

In the support role to the two leading stars, Mr. Raymond will have excellent opportunities to demonstrate the work that made him so popular here.

National Forestry Land Acquisition In Georgia At Mountain Source of River

The above map shows the Georgia lands already acquired, and now under process of being acquired, by the United States government.

This area occupies many thousand acres of land in Union, Lumpkin, Towns, White, Rabun and Habersham counties, and it is proposed to extend it along the Cohutta mountain range in Fanin and Gilmer counties to protect the head waters of the Coosa river. The head waters of the Savannah river are in Rabun and Habersham counties. The heavy black area in Lumpkin and White counties comprises the source of the head waters of the Chattahoochee river, the top of this black area being the crest of the Cohutta mountain range. North of this crest the Hiawassee and the Toccoa rivers, tributaries of the Tennessee river, have their source. South of the Cohutta crest, following the top of the black area, the several tributaries of the Chattahoochee river, indicated in the white lines in the black area, have their source, and this entire area is now under process of acquirement by the federal government.

Three important highways from Atlanta north, traverse this U. S. forestry region—one by way of Marietta, Canton and Ellijay to Blue Ridge and Blairsville; another from Atlanta to Alpharetta, Cumming, Dawsonville and Dahlonega through Neal's Gap to Blairsville; the third, the Appalachian Scenic highway, from Atlanta to Decatur, Lawrenceville and Gainesville through Neal's Gap to Blairsville and Murphy, N. C., another route going from Gainesville to Clarkesville and the Tallulah Falls section of Rabun county. All of these highways connect with the paved highway system to the mountain section of North Carolina.

BY BONNELL H. STONE,
Secretary Georgia Forestry Commission.

This map shows location of the lands now being acquired by the United States, along the south side of the Blue Ridge mountain divide, at the headwaters of Chattahoochee river.

Friendly condemnation proceedings have recently been completed by which the United States secured title on some 35,000 acres from Smithport Extract company in the counties of Lumpkin and White.

Purchase agreements have been signed now for some 42,000 acres which the United States is acquiring from Morse Brothers Lumber company in the counties of Habersham, White and Lumpkin and additional tracts of smaller acreage will bring the total up to approximately 100,000 acres of national forest lands on the Chattahoochee watershed.

Link Forest Lands.

It will be noted on this map that these new land purchases by the United States are linking up the Cherokee national forest lands in the counties of Union and Fannin with the Nantahala national forest lands in the counties of Habersham and Rabun, entirely along the south side of the Blue Ridge mountain divide in Georgia.

Since the Nantahala forest lands in this state have given some protection to the headwaters of the Savannah river, it will be noted that the Cherokee forest lands in Georgia have heretofore given protection only to the headwaters of the Toccoa and Hiawassee rivers which are tributaries to the Little Tennessee.

Therefore the extension of national forest lands at this time is most significant for Georgia because of the fact that public funds from all sections of the United States are being used for land purchases now at the headwaters of the Chattahoochee river which is one of the most important streams in the south. From the standpoint of industrial development in Georgia, it should be noted that a large acreage of mountain forest lands in the western portion of Rabun county is under private protection by the Georgia Railway and Power company.

These privately owned lands in Rabun are linked up with the intensive system of private forest protection on 62,000 acres in Towns and Union counties owned by the Pfister and Vogel Land company, where their lookout station on Etowah mountain, at the elevation of 4,800 feet above sea level, is the highest point in the state.

Other Purchases Planned.

With this 62,000 acre tract and all of the Cherokee forest lands protecting the Tennessee watershed up to this time; with the Nantahala forest lands and the power company lands in Rabun county protecting the Savannah watershed, it will be of further interest to the public to know that the United States is now negotiating for the purchase of considerable acreage in the Georgia counties of Gilmer and Murray, at the headwaters of the Coosa river, in the Cohutta mountains.

Since this state has granted permission to the federal government to acquire lands only in our mountain counties for watershed protection and other national forest uses, the possibilities for recreational development in the Georgia mountains should be adequate for all of the South Atlantic and Gulf states in the future. The extension of these federal purchases at the headwaters of the Chattahoochee and Coosa rivers is also greatly to be desired for the benefit of industrial development in Georgia.

Development Planned.

It has been known for a number of years that Chief Forester William B. Greeley plans to enlarge and develop these national forest lands in the state as rapidly as possible and there has never seemed to be any need for agitating the matter of a national park in the Georgia mountains when a fully developed national forest will afford all of the advantages and none of the disadvantages of a "park." Any public ownership of forest lands gives tax exemption problems to local counties where said lands are situated, but in the case of a national forest where 35 per cent of all revenues from timber sales and other uses are given to the local counties for their road and school funds we receive adequate compensation in lieu of tax values, at the same time receiving more liberal privileges for hunting and fishing on a national forest, in contrast with the other uneconomic restrictions of a national park.

Georgia mountains add to the water supply of all adjacent states, while the Empire State of the South receives no water from any of her neighbors. So may we establish our forest areas through adequate protection and perpetuation as a demonstration in fire prevention for the benefit of our entire nation!

Georgia is connected with Quebec, Canada, by the longest unbroken pavement in eastern America—1,550 miles north from Neel Gap in Union county.

Forestry Officials Coming to Atlanta.

I have just had a conference with James Denmark, surveyor for the U. S. forest service, who has now arrived with a large field party to begin the survey south of the Blue Ridge divide in the counties of Lumpkin, White and Habersham. He tells me that Major W. B. Stewart, chief of public relations, and Major E. W. Kelley, district forester in charge of all national forests east of the Mississippi, will come to Atlanta on April 8 for a luncheon at the chamber of commerce.

The active interest of Atlanta citizens in the development of recreational uses of national forest lands within 100 miles of Atlanta should be sufficient to induce the U. S. forest service to speed up the construction of forest roads and trails, the establishment of public camping grounds and the general opening up of the area for the south's greatest playground.

The Pfister & Vogel Land company has recently given to the state of Georgia a few controlling points, such as the top of Blood mountain, the top of Neel Gap and a beautiful basin within the loop of the Appalachian Scenic Highway which includes a waterfall, several springs and an ideal site for a state forest park, so with this gift of 16 acres to the state of Georgia our state forestry department is now in a position to offer cooperation in forest fire prevention and control which is essential to the newly acquired national forest on the south side of Blood mountain.

TALLAPOOSA INSTALLS DR. DOWNEY AS MAYOR

Tallapoosa, Ga., April 2—(Special.) Dr. C. W. Downey Wednesday was inaugurated mayor of Tallapoosa. John B. Fitzgerald, J. B. Hansard and L. G. Groover being installed at the same time as members of the city council, following a decision in their favor in the contest proceedings instituted several weeks ago by C. E. Crawford, who was defeated in the annual city election on March 5.

Pageant at Dawson.

Dawson, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) The Shellman Epworth league will present the pageant, "Golden Youth," at the Dawson Methodist church next Sunday night. The league will have charge of the evening service.

JEFFERSON CREAM STATIONS SUCCEED

Louisville, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) The third poultry car for Jefferson county this year will be run on April 4-5, according to County Agent W. H. Hosch. The car will be in Louisville on Tuesday morning.

The cream stations which have been established in this county within the last several months, due to the efforts of Mr. Hosch, are a success. The shipments brought in only a few dollars the first week, but now the shipments bring into the county something like $500 per week, and the business is still growing. There are stations at Wrens, Louisville, Bartow and Avera.

"MIDNIGHT LOVERS," —OH, THESE TITLES

"Midnight Lovers," Carey Wilson's screen adaptation of J. E. Harold Terry's play "Collusion," will be the piece de resistance at the Metropolitan theater soon. The play has been produced by First National with Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson in the featured roles, Chester Conklin and John Roche have important parts.

The story deals with after-the-war life in England and is said to provide a most amusing as well as romantic picture of the period.

Studio Shots.

Marie Dressler has been wooed back to the screen, thanks to the overtures of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who will give her an important role in "The Calleahans and the Murphys" Kathleen Norris' story. This will be Miss Dressler's first appearance since she made that memorable "Tillie's Punctured Romance" with Charles Chaplin in the old Keystone days.

Word comes from Corona, Colorado, where the largest location camp in screen history has been established for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Trail of '98," that Clarence Brown, the director, has started actual camera work here on this spectacular story of the Klondyke gold rush, after months consumed in preliminary research work and the transportation of supplies to the Continental Divide.

Laurence Stallings, author of "The Big Parade," has been signed to write exclusively for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Stallings first achieved national prominence three years ago when the play on which he collaborated with Maxwell Anderson, "What Price Glory," was produced in New York. His war novel "Plumes," was another great success and "Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Big Parade" is now a matter of history, having shattered all motion picture records during its present run in New York.

Dolores Del Rio will play the feminine lead in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's ambitious screening of Robert W. Service's 'The Trail of '98," according to announcement by Irving Thalberg, following the signing of a contract in New York with Edwin Carewe, to whom the actress is under personal contract.

Hobart Henley, who has just completed the Marion Davies production, "Tillie the Toiler," will direct "Spring Fever," the William Haines starring vehicle adapted by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from Vincent Lawrence's stage hit of the same name.

WORTH DAIRY COWS TO BE GIVEN TEST

Sylvester, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) The dairymen of Worth county have been notified that arrangements are being made with the State veterinarian whereby all dairy cows in the county may be tested for tuberculosis. Many farmers are expected to avail themselves of this opportunity as it is understood the service is free.

Waycross, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) J. A. Kersey, of Lawrenceville, Va., lessee of the Farmers' Tobacco warehouse here, is sending an experienced tobacco man to Waycross April 15.

This man will be available to all the tobacco growers of the Waycross territory as a demonstrator and advisor free of any charge whatsoever.

Atlanta Plans Observance Of National Music Week

Forty members of the woman's division of the chamber of commerce will assemble Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Morgan-Stephens Conservatory of Music to make definite plans for observance of National Music week, May 1 to 8, under leadership of Mrs. Theodora Morgan-Stephens.

The committee on arrangements includes the entire governing board of the division, a number of other prominent business women, and about 10 leading musicians of Atlanta.

Several features already have been announced by Mrs. Morgan-Stephens. On Sunday, May 1, observance will be opened by special programs in many of the churches of the city. Hymns and anthems by American composers will be used for the most part.

Tuesday night, May 3, an artists' recital will be held at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium, in which many leading artists will have part. The week will be officially closed by an afternoon concert at the city auditorium. The program will have a community appeal and will include selections by Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., city organists, and others.

Other activities sponsored by the woman's division and programs conducted by various music clubs, schools, theaters and other organizations, will complete the program for the week.

REPERTOIRE COMPANY TO PLAY TEN WEEKS

"Love-in-a-Mist" Opens Season Monday, April 11.

For the first time in local theatrical history, an original New York production will be offered in Atlanta at popular prices, with the identical cast used in its metropolitan presentation, when on Monday night, April 11, the Erlanger theater opens a ten weeks' series of productions with an all-star cast of players, headed by Madge Kennedy and Sidney Blackmer, in "Love-in-a-Mist." This great company of players will come to Atlanta for ten important and artistic productions, through an agreement reached by Manager Lewis Haase, of the Erlanger theater, and Charles L. Wagner, noted New York producer.

Those who witnessed the recent presentation of "Love-in-a-Mist," at the Erlanger agreed that it was easily the best-acted play seen here in years. That such a company in such great plays can appear in Atlanta at popular prices is made possible through the desire of both Mr. Haase and Mr. Wagner to establish the organization as a permanent feature each year at the beautiful new Erlanger theater. "Love-in-a-Mist" will open the ten weeks' engagement Monday night, April 11, with Miss Kennedy and Mr. Blackmer in their original parts, supported by their own company, which includes Jack Willard, Mary Marble, and Alice John. This is a charming play, full of bright and clever lines, with numerous ludicrous situations, and Miss Kennedy and Mr. Blackmer have parts that fit them like gloves.

Later, during the production season of ten weeks, will be offered such high class attractions as "Fair and Warmer," with Miss Kennedy in one of her best roles: "The Mountain Man," with Mr. Blackmer in his original New York role; "Rollo's Wild Oat," a sparkling comedy; "Quarantine," and other late successes. It is also planned to put on at least two new productions here for the first time on any stage. Mr. Wagner now has several most promising plays under consideration. It will be the policy of Mr. Wagner to bring leading actors and actresses of the country to Atlanta for special engagements with the Kennedy-Blackmer company.

Priestly Morrison, one of the best directors in the country, and the man who staged "The Barker," one of the big reigning successes in New York city today, will devote his entire time to the direction of all the plays produced during the season.

Mail orders are now being received. The box office seat sale will start Thursday morning.

TALLAPOOSA PLANT MAY BE PURCHASED BY POWER COMPANY

Tallapoosa, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—A whirlwind campaign to secure assurances from registered voters of Tallapoosa that permission will be granted to sell the Georgia Power company the municipal electric light plant here for a consideration of $35,000 has been under way here this week. Following conferences between citizens of Tallapoosa and representatives of the Georgia Power company earlier in the week the campaign to secure written permission of the voters for the acceptance of the power company offer was decided upon.

Tuesday morning the city council adopted an ordinance carrying its acceptance of the power company offer for the plant, certain legal matters to be settled if no protest against the sale is registered within the time allowed by law.

TENNILLE MAN NAMED HEAD OF RAILROAD

Louisville, Ga., April 2.—(Special.) At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Louisville and Wadley railroad company, held here, J. J. Pelley, president of the Central railway, was named on the board of directors to take the place of L. A. Downs, former president of the Central.

On this board was also named Philip Abbot, of Louisville, who succeeds his father, the late W. W. Abbot, who died last May. All the other directors are old members on the board, and they are E. M. Clark, of Louisville; S. C. Evans, of Wadley; W. L. Phillips, of Louisville, who was named local counsel; A. R. Lawton, of Savannah, and Charles Maloney, of Tennille, who was made president.

This is one of the short line railroads that is making money. Besides a handsome dividend declared some months ago, a further dividend of 6 per cent was declared in the meeting held Tuesday.

MUSIC CLUB SPONSORS EMORY GLEE PROGRAM

Emory Glee club will be featured at the Wednesday morning program of the Atlanta Music club on April 8, at 11 o'clock at the Woman's Club auditorium. Dr. Malcome Dewey, who has been their instructor and to whom much of the credit is due for their triumphs here and abroad, will be in charge, and announces the program will consist of a variety of numbers both from the old masters of song and the new. The Emory university orchestra also will take part, rendering the overture from the "Magic Flute," and a selection from "Oberon," by Weber, assisted by the glee club chorus.

Several soloists will be heard, Mr. Edward Kane, tenor in "Charity" by Hagermann and George Baker, baritone, in "Arm, Arm, Ye Brave" from "Judas Maccabaeus," by Handel. The chorus will give two compositions by Oley Speaks, and a negro spiritual for which they are famous. Mr. Alton O'Steen will be heard in a piano number, a concerto by Grieg.

Miss Minna Hecker will join the glee club in singing the Italian street song from Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta," the light opera which last summer drew crowds of Atlantans.

The Atlanta Music club under leadership of Mrs. Cliff Hatcher, sponsors the series of morning musicales. Admission to the performance is by card. The glee club from Emory university is one of the largest attractions presented this year, and a large attendance is expected. A charge of 50 cents is made non-members of the club.

BRITISH ADVERTISING EXPERT SPEAKS HERE

Sir Charles F. Higham, of London, formerly a member of parliament, writer and expert on advertising and business subjects, will address a meeting Monday night of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers' association, and the Atlanta Automobile association. The Capital City club will be the place of the meeting which will be preceded by a dinner at 6:30 o'clock.

Sir Higham is one of the real big business figures of Europe. He represented Europe at the international convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, held here in 1921, and is widely known among business men of America. It was during the course of his membership in parliament from 1918 to 1922, that he was knighted in recognition of his work in parliament and because for distinguished service during the world war.

The subject he has selected for his address is "How To Get the Most Out of Advertising," and outside of the practical benefit to be derived from his address will be the interesting views he will express along European advertising and sales lines.

The appearance of Sir Higham before the retail merchants of this section will be a big event, and the capacity of the Capital City club is expected to be taxed.

BRITH SHOLOM SPONSORS MUSICAL CONCERT TONIGHT

A free musical concert will be given tonight at 8 o'clock at the Jewish Educational Alliance, 318 Capitol avenue, under auspices of the Atlanta Lodge No. 303, Independent Order Brith Sholom.

In addition to the musical program several brief introductory talks will be made, after which refreshments will be served.

Included in the program will be several numbers by Paul Rafferty, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Rafferty; vocal numbers by Cantor Aaron Lipitz, a number of violin selections by Alvin Nissenbaum, accompanied by Dorothy Shukoff and songs by Oscar Gershon, accompanied by Miss Bessie Geffen.

COMMERCIAL HIGH CLUB WILL OFFER NOVEL OPERETTA

"Little Almond Eyes," a Chinese operetta, will be presented by members of the Commercial High Glee club at two performances Friday, April 8, one at 2:30 o'clock and the other at 8:15 o'clock, in the school auditorium. The play is under direction of Mrs. Kate Rawls.

Members of the glee club have been practicing daily for the past month and expect to make it one of the best performances of the school year.

Tickets are on sale at the school on South Pryor street.

IN THE EARLY DAYS OF '61, SECESSIONISTS OF MARYLAND TORE UP THE RAILROADS AND BURNED BRIDGES TO PREVENT NORTHERN MILITIA REACHING WASHINGTON. WHILE SOLDIERS AND WORKMEN LABORED TO REPAIR THE DIRECT LINE, UNION TROOPS WERE CARRIED TO ANNAPOLIS BY WATER AND THENCE BY RAIL TO THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

THE COUNTRY BETWEEN ANNAPOLIS AND WASHINGTON WAS MADE THE "DEPARTMENT OF ANNAPOLIS" WITH GEN. BENJAMIN BUTLER IN COMMAND. THE U. S. NAVAL ACADEMY WAS CONVERTED INTO A GREAT MILITARY DEPOT AND ITS CORPS OF MIDSHIPMEN REMOVED TO NEWPORT, R. I., FOR THE DURATION OF THE WAR.

BUTLER'S TASK WAS TO MAINTAIN AN OPEN ROAD TO WASHINGTON AND TO THIS END HE PLANTED BATTERIES AT POINTS ALONG THE RAILROAD. ON MAY 5, 1861, BUTLER SEIZED AND FORTIFIED THE VIADUCT AND STATION AT RELAY HOUSE, THE JUNCTION OF THE RAILWAYS LEADING TO WASHINGTON AND HARPER'S FERRY.

IN THE SAME MONTH, BUTLER'S TROOPS CAPTURED, AT ELLICOTT'S MILLS, THE FAMOUS WINANS STEAM GUN, INVENTED BY DICKINSON, WHICH WAS EXPECTED TO REVOLUTIONIZE THE ART OF WARFARE.

Fundamentalists To Hold Ninth Annual Convention In Atlanta During May

Many Nationally-Known Foes of Modernism on Eight-Day Program Announced by Leaders.

Further unification of all forces opposed to what they term the menace of modernism will take place in Atlanta from May 1 to 8, when the World's Christian Fundamentals association holds its ninth annual convention in this city.

Many of the country's leading ministers, educators, scientists, statesmen and business men will appear on the eight-day program announced this week, the list comprising such names as the Rev. Robert Dick Wilson, of Princeton; Canon F. E. Howitt, of Hamilton, Ontario; the Rev. P. W. Philpot, pastor of the Moody church, Chicago; Rev. Paul Reed, president of the Bryan league; Dr. J. D. Eggleston, president of Hampden-Sidney college; Governor-elect L. G. Hardman, of Georgia; Dr. J. S. Luckey, president of Houghton college, and many others.

4,000 to 6,000 Expected.

Churches throughout the country have been invited to send representatives and it is believed that between 4,000 and 6,000 persons will be in attendance on the sessions to be held thrice daily throughout the week. A local committee is now selecting a large central building for the meetings, which will be brought to a close, it is planned, with a mass meeting to be held in the city auditorium Sunday night, May 8.

The spread of modernism in the colleges will be one of the chief topics to come before the gathering and entering into this discussion will be representatives of the Orthodox Colleges association, an organization of 140 American colleges which retain the old established tenets of religion in their teaching. The Orthodox Colleges association has recently became amalgamated with the Christian Fundamentals association.

That the recent widespread wave of student suicides is the result of modernistic instruction in institutions of learning is the belief held by many fundamentalists. This topic will be extensively dealt with in a report of a standing committee which, during the past year has made a thorough study of modernistic tendencies in schools and colleges. Other standing committees will report on their investigations of the spread of modernism in the pulpit, the press and among the country's legislators.

Darrow Debate Seen.

That a debate between Clarence Darrow, well known liberal thinker, prominent in the Scopes trial, and Rev. W. B. Riley, founder and president of the World's Christian Fundamentals association, will be a feature of the convention in Atlanta is a strong probability.

Dr. Riley, who also is pastor of the First Baptist church, of Minneapolis, Minn., attended during the past week a meeting of prominent ministers and laymen in Atlanta to make final preparations for the convention. At that time he announced that following the evolution debates in which he claimed victory, he had issued a challenge to Darrow and had every reason to believe it would be accepted.

According to Dr. Marion McH. Hull, prominent layman of Atlanta and a director of the Fundamentals association, the program of the convention here has been arranged with the idea not so much of conducting as assault upon modernism as of presenting a clear idea of the fundamentalist position. Fundamentalists in many differing walks of life have been busily gathering facts to bear out their conviction that the old established religious beliefs—the divinity of Christ and the inspiration of the Scriptures—are necessary for the well-being and progress of the nation. They believe that modernism is marching across the century hand in hand with individualism, hedonism and decadence and they expect to present statistics to bear out this belief. Not a few scientists who have refused to accept the evolutionary hypothesis will explain their stand and point out weaknesses in the Darwinian theory. Leading educators will describe the results of modernism in the universities and colleges of the day and ministers will tell of their experiences in the church.

Wilson's 45-Year Program.

The Rev. Robert Dick Wilson, of Princeton university, who will have a prominent place on the program, has been called the greatest living authority on the Semetic languages. At the age of 30 Dr. Wilson determined that he would devote 15 years of his life to the study of languages connected with the Old Testament, 15 more to a study of the Old Testament in the light of these languages and then 15 years to a proclamation of the truths this intensive study had disclosed. The outstanding reputation he enjoys among scholars and the great demand for his lectures are fitting results of the determination and success with which he carried out his plan.

Others who will address the Atlanta convention include Harry I. Rimmer, noted scientist of California; Clinton Howard, of Rochester, N. Y., credited with doing more than any other man toward furthering the eighteenth amendment to the constitution; George F. Washburn, well-known Boston capitalist; Arthur I. Brown, Vancouver surgeon who gave up an immense practice to devote himself to the fight for fundamentalism; the Rev. W. R. Dobyns, prominent Birmingham minister; the Rev. R. C. McQuilken, head of the Columbia, S. C., Bible school; Professor H. U. Roop, of Wheaton college, Ill.; the Rev. Albert Sydney Johnston, of Charlotte, N. C., son of the famous general and the vice president of the Fundamentals association; the Rev. Luther Little, prominent minister of Charlotte; Gerald Winrod, of Wichita, Kan., head of the Fundamentalists' "Flying Squadron"; the Rev. Richard Orme Flinn, pastor of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, Atlanta, and the Rev. W. H. Houghton, pastor of the Atlanta Baptist Tabernacle.

Local arrangements for the convention are in the hands of a committee of 20 leading ministers and laymen, in which all evangelical denominations are represented, under the chairmanship of Eugene Calloway. This committee is bending every effort to make the gathering here the most successful ever held by the association.

LEADER OF JEWS ACCUSES RUMANIA

BY RABBI TZIRELSOHN, Rumanian Senator and Head of the Rumanian Jewish Congregations.

(Rabbi Tzirelsohn delivered a "terrific" two-hour speech on the floor of the Rumanian senate denouncing the Rumanian officials for systematically persecuting the Jews, Baptists, Lutherans, Roman Catholics, Unitarians and Presbyterians throughout the kingdom. He attacked Queen Marie's "theatrical behavior," and charged her with harboring grandiose political ambitions. General Coanda presided. The Greek patriarch, who also is a senator by virtue of his office, violently attacked the rabbi, and, on his motion, the Rumanian senate voted to omit from the official bulletin the offensive speech. Below are given a few salient phrases from the suppressed speech.)

Rumania today is the sole survivor of that barbarism—the persecution of peoples because they have chosen to worship in the form of other faiths than that prescribed by their countrys' established church—which every other nation in the world has abandoned. Until the war it was the fashion for the Rumanian nation to persecute the Jews. Today the Jews are not the only victims. Since the acquisition of the neighboring territories there has come into the Rumanian fold considerable elements who worship in other forms, like the Roman Catholics, Baptists, Lutherans, Unitarians and Presbyterians. My heart aches for the sufferings of all, but my tongue can only speak for my own flock—the Jews—who have, ever since the inception of Christianity, been the victims of the eastern church. And today, even when the diverse branches of the Greek Orthodox church have bestowed upon the Jew a considerable degree of freedom, the Rumanian nation persists in following in the footsteps of those who have blotted the history of the Christian faith with untold infamy. . . .

I make no threats. Every page of history is filled with warnings. Nations who persist in persecuting their minorities will shrivel, decay, and become extinct. The Turkish and the Russian empires are two examples. (At this point a voice cries "stop." The senator-rabbi retorts, "I shall not stop until I have told all I wish to tell, . . ." pointing his forefinger at General Coanda, the president of the senate.)

I charge the government, and through it the Rumanian nation, with complicity to exterminate the Jews.

I charge the government with the organization of anti-semitism throughout the kingdom.

I charge the present government, together with its predecessors, with the deliberate organization and instigation of secret societies to rob, beat up, blackmail, torture and murder the Jews.

I charge the government with inspiring false information regarding the plight of the minorities now incorporated into the kingdom.

I charge the government with systematically restricting the number of Jewish applicants to universities, thus making it impossible for them to receive higher education. Out of 15,000 students attending the Bucharest university only 250 of them are Jews. The differential rules the government has drawn for the Jewish applicants have made it impossible for 4,000 Jewish boys to enter the university.

. . . . At this moment, when the heartrending agony of the persecuted Jew in Rumania is rising to the clouds, our gracious queen is returning "from the Jewish promised land beyond the Atlantic," her theatrical tour a failure, her ambition shattered. She is returning to her kingdom to read the handwriting on the walls of her court—the scarlet handwriting which reads: "You have persecuted my flock, I shall shatter your ambitions until I have cast in the dust your arrogant pride." (At this point the senate becomes a scene of wild voices and gesticulations.)

. . . . My king is a Christian gentleman, upright and honorable, but he is surrounded with wolves of many colors and hues: Brittianu, who has taken a perpetual mortgage on the resources and the soul of the kingdom; our present government which maintains its authority by sheer number of bayonets; the peasant party, who are clamoring for the return of Carol, who has made the kingdom a laughing stock throughout every corner of the world by his matrimonial perversions; and our gracious queen, who is obsessed with the ambition to herself become a Balkan Napoleon. (At this point the rabbi is again interrupted by wild clamors.)

Since the war the Rumanian government has cast into prison 22,000 Jews. They have served an average of 14 months without even a trial. Forty-two thousand Jewish men, women and children have been beaten up. Over 4,000 Jewish tradesmen have been blackmailed by leaders of the anti-Semitic Rumanian gangs, and forced to pay 250,000 pounds ($2,500,000) to render them immune to systematic mob attacks. Only the other day a Jewish student was shot by one of the members of the Rumania Jew hunter gangs. (The Jewish student, David Falik, was shot by Tautu. He was acquitted by a Rumanian tribunal who justified the murder because the murderer "was inspired by patriotic motives.") Over 2,000 Jews, during the last three years, have died in prisons of disease and torture while awaiting trial.

The latest recreation of the Rumanian anti-Semitic gangs is to go through moving trains and tramcars and throw the Jews off. During the last six months 6,000 Jews have thus been treated. (A solitary voice, "shame, shame on us.") A thousand shames on the Rumanian nation, whose barbaric behavior will remain a blot in the annals of the twentieth century civilization.

HEINZ IS BUILDING ELEVENTH FACTORY

With completion of its new plant at Berkeley, Cal., the H. J. Heinz company will have eleven tomato product factories that dot a belt running clear across the continent, according to announcement by officials of the widely-known business house Saturday.

"With such a tremendous organization," the officials said, "Heinz standards are so fixed and definite that Heinz tomato ketchup is exactly uniform at all times regardless of the location of the kitchen in which it is prepared. Ketchup produced at Salem, N. J., is exactly the same in appearance, flavor and every other quality as that prepared and cooked in the company's other kitchens, and this statement may be applied to Heinz chili sauce and Heinz cream tomato soup.

"The company is now building an attractively designed plant at San Pablo and Heinz avenues, Berkeley, on one of California's principal thoroughfares. Spanish lines of architecture are being followed and the building will be set back from the street to provide for a plot of grass and flowers. The thousands who motor past this point will not fail to notice a California home of the '57 varieties.' By next summer the Berkeley plant will be producing tomato products and also pickles. Heinz business has been built upon standards of quality which are strictly enforced and result in uniformity in all of its products.

"For more than half a century the company has been propagating seed and it has brought the tomato to the point of perfection. Tomatoes are grown where soil and climate unite to produce the best. In such sections the company builds greenhouses and nurseries for the development of seed and the growing of plants which are distributed to growers and its own farmers. Seed and plant are cultivated under the supervision of Heinz experts and the rules established after long experience. When the tomato is ripe, red from stem to tip and without a shade of green on it, it is pulled from the vine and rushed to the kettles, for Heinz standards demand a minimum of time between the vine and the bottle. Bottling of ketchup within 24 hours after the tomato leaves the vine is a common custom in Heinz kitchens.

"The same recipe is used in all kitchens and the result is a ketchup that carries the rich color and flavor of the ripe tomato, a delicious sauce thick with the best of the fruit, spices gathered where the best spices grow on personal investigation by Heinz men who go to the spice field, Heinz vinegar and only cane sugar.

"This is the reason experts find it impossible to distinguish any difference between bottles of Heinz tomato ketchup, regardless of where they were filled."

RITES IN AMERICUS FOR W. P. PERSONS

Americus, Ga., Apuril 2.—(Special.)—Funeral services were held here Friday morning for William P. Persons, who died Wednesday night following a stroke of paralysis sustained several months ago. Interment was in Oak Grove cemetery, and the obsequies were conducted by Rev. Joe M. Branch.

Mr. Persons, who was 80 years of age and a Confederate veteran, had been resident agent for the census bureau here for 35 years. He was a native of Marion county; a member of the First Baptist church; Camp Sumter No. 642, U. C. V., and Washington Camp P. O. S. of A.

He is survived by his widow and four daughters, Mrs. E. B. Patterson, of Bartow, Fla.; Mrs. J. L. Knowles, of Bainbridge, Mrs. R. L. Hampton of Fitzgerald, and Mrs. A. C. Keilly, of Birmingham, Ala.

CONFEDERATE CHIEF NAMES MANY WOMEN

Nashville, Tenn., April 1.—(AP)—General Harry Rene Lee, Nashville chief of the staff of Commander in Chief M. D. Vance, Little Rock, Ark., today announced the complete official list of matrons, sponsors and other ladies appointed to accompany the Confederate veterans to the general annual reunion of veterans to be held at Tampa, Fla., April 5-8.

As an innovation for this year's reunion, said General Lee, two ladies, Confederate Dames, from each southern state will be officially honored as those who made highest rank in the sale of coins for the Stone Mountain memorial, near Atlanta, commemorating the deeds of valor of the Confederacy.

The list of appointments follow:

Public Will See New Automatic Victrola Monday

Introducing to the public for the first time the latest innovation in the phonograph industry, Atlanta Victor dealers Monday will have on display the new automatic Orthophonic Victrola, "the machine that changes its own records."

The unique and interesting new Victrola was viewed by dealers here some days ago, but this will be the first time that the machine is given public demonstration. Atlanta business establishments which will have the machines on hand will be Duffee-Freeman, the music department of M. Rich & Bros. Co., the Cable Piano company, Phillips & Crew, Bame's, Inc., and LeRoy Webb & Co.

They all extend to the general public an invitation to call and inspect this novel Victrola, which plays 12 records automatically.

Hailed as "the greatest forward stride since the invention of the Orthophonic Victrola," the new automatic record changing device allows listeners to hear an entire symphony or series of opera selections without interruption, and also provides dance and other music without the trouble of changing the records by hand.

The twelve records are placed in a "magazine" and a mechanical hand puts the record on the turn-table. When the record is completed, the mechanical hand puts it in a drawer and places another on—this process continuing until the entire hour's musical entertainment is closed.

FITZGERALD POULTRY SALE IS SUCCESS

Fitzgerald, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—The cooperative poultry sale held here Wednesday netted the local poultrymen about $1,200, over 4,600 pounds being sold. One farmer received $160 for his lot and others made satisfactory sales.

Friers brought 42c per pound. In the sale were ducks and geese, which also brought satisfactory prices.

Motorists in 44 States Use 8 Billion Gallons Gas in 1926

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—With a gasoline sales tax higher than that of any other state in the union except Kentucky, South Carolina motorists yielded $4,496,968 in revenue to their state government in this form of tax during 1926, says the department of agriculture in figures on the 1926 gasoline consumption and revenue issued tonight.

Kentucky, which like South Carolina, has a five-cent tax on every gallon of gasoline, received $4,935,078.

Automobile users in 44 of the 48 states last year consumed a total of about eight billion gallons of gasoline for which they paid their various state governments in taxes, $187,603,231. In the only states which levy no gasoline tax, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York, it is estimated that an addition of two billion gallons were used.

Range of Taxes.

With taxes ranging from one cent in Rhode Island and Texas to five cents in Kentucky and South Carolina, the average levy was 2.38 cents per gallon, two cents being the rate in nearly half of the commonwealths.

California, with a two-cent levy, yielded the greatest sum to its government, $16,502,123, while Ohio, with the same rate, reported collections of $13,257,266. The smallest amount was collected in Delaware, $39,414, from two-cent taxes.

Of the total collections, $129,441,520 was allocated for state highways, $42,609,479 for county and local roads, $5,238,869 for payments on road bonds, and $9,313,363 for miscellaneous purposes.

Fewer changes were made in the tax rate than during former years. Kentucky increased its levy from three to five cents, Mississippi from three to four cents, North Dakota from one to two cents, and Virginia from three to four and a half cents.

Other increases which became effective after the close of the year 1926, were in Alabama, which state raised its levy from two to four cents, and in Montana, from two to three cents in January, 1927.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TBALOID

GRACE LIVINGSTON HILL.

Job's Niece. By Grace Livingston Hill, author of "Coming Through the Rye." No author has written stories of more human interest—stories that touch the home and the heart—than Mrs. Hill. Her readers who have followed her for years have become so much attached to her that they now look upon her as a real friend. The name of "Doris" is familiar—a number of lovely girls have borne that name and it always seemed to stand for happiness and pleasure. Therefore it was strange that Doris Dunbar (though many other girls who were not heroines have felt that way) should feel like there was nothing left to do but to get out on 'the ashheap and hunt for a potsherd and, like Job, gave herself up to lamentations." She was the victim of many disappointments and trials. Milton Page failed her just at the time she needed him most; her little sister-in-law, though pretty, had very little principle and she, too, tried to make her just as unhappy as possible, and Jack, her brother, wild and thoughtless, was another thorn in the flesh, and then there were other little worries to combat, and altogether the burden she was carrying seemed too big for her back.

But as you recall, Job had a comforter and so did Doris, and this comforter alone was, and is always willing to help carry the burden, and while Doris believed that she would have this support she could not believe that Angus MacDonald had noticed the troubled expression, the heart ache of her sad eyes as she performed her daily duties as companion to his lonely mother. But even with his love and sympathy at that time there was not enough sunshine to run all the shadows away.

In some way Doris' mind again reverted to Job and his trials, and then she remembered that it was but a test of Job's love and faith, and that his troubles were, after all, to be turned into blessings, and this became a bulwark of strength to her. And ere long she found the blessings in the shape of so much happiness that it was hard to realize that it was intended for her, Doris Dunbar.

A real, genuine love story, full of the sorrows and joys of an every day life, one that will be read with both love and sympathy for the heroine, and one, too, in which the reader will share the happiness in the end. (Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

A LOYAL DOG.

The story is that of a beautiful Irish setter—a thoroughbred who becomes a champion. The author is a well-known dog enthusiast and through his activities in field trials, and in his magazine articles he has contributed much data that is most interesting to dog lovers.

This book will appeal to many people, especially lovers of dogs and sports, for it is filled with humorous episodes and incidents in which people and dogs are the subjects of the most interest.

And then the author, like many authors, draws his characters from real life and of course they are full of interest. For instance, there is General Bowron and Colonel Kincaid whose only quarrel is that one believes in the superiority of pointers and the other in that of setters. But there comes a time when they decide on a more important subject, that their boy and girl shall marry—John and, Alice—both are splendid and both are popular, but they do not like the idea, especially Alice, of matrimonial plans being made for her.

It is while everything is in this uncertain state that the magnificent setter, "King of Mapledale," is introduced and voluntarily plays an important part. Among others is Uncle Tom, an old farmer and neighbor of both families, and Patrick Callahan, the loyal trainer of the Mapledale kennels. If you love a dog, not like Albert Payson Terhune, but just like a good clever, every-day human being, read about the loyalty of this magnificent setter. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

A Free Soul. By Adela Rogers St. Johns, author of "Skyrocket." The question in this story is can a woman ever be free? The author in the clever style for which she is noted gives her answer to the question.

"Jan Ashe's" father brought her up to believe a woman can do anything, provided she always "plays straight" with herself.

It is a dramatic novel on the usual theme that it is more than necessary for a young woman to know the true definition of the word "freedom."

Miss St. Johns is a well-known short story writer and is a "self-taught authority on modern youth." (Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, New York.)

The Old Countess. By Anne Douglas Sedgwick. Grant Overton, at some time, somewhere, made the following remarks in connection with the author of "The Little French Girl:"

"Why know Anne Douglas Sedgwick?

"Because no one now writing understands men and women better, and no one else now writing portrays a man or woman with such completeness."

What is her new story about? "It is a story of the interwoven destinies of four persons." There's Dick Graham, an English painter, whose work is quite popular, and who is one of the four persons the author introduces in her first paragraph. "You are an artist, Monsieur?" The Old Countess, so old and yet so thoroughly alive, asked the question with a droop of the eyelid; Martha Luderac, a French girl, and in some way closely connected with the Old Countess, and Jill, Dick Graham's wife.

There's the usual contrast of French and English traits, but after all, the part played by the Old Countess outstars all the others and it will hold the reader's interest until the end. (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston.)

The Drums of Aulone. By Robert W. Chambers. The author is recognized as a modern writer of historical novels, and this, his latest story with its attractive setting and with the France of Louis the Fourteenth, the greatest of all monarchs, in the opening scene.

The story is filled with brave deeds, court luxury, cowards, hope and despair. This is one of the pictures that is presented: The court of Versailles. A gay throng. Among the crowd can be seen Michelle de Maniscamp, a young and spirited French Huguenot girl of the noble house of Aulone.

Another picture is before the reader. It is the court at Whitehall, where the scepter is already slipping from the feeble hold of King James, and the next thing you are in the new world—America—and at Quebec some of the most interesting incidents take place. "Fearing God Alone" is the motto of Michelle's noble house. It means suffering and sorrow, but she never forgets the motto and in time comes to her, through the love that was to bring her the happiness she so richly deserves and which was to surround her during all the days of her life. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

The Outer Gate. By Octavus Roy Cohen, who was a newspaper man of Birmingham, Ala., and whose books written with that state for a background have all been best sellers. He has woven his new story around Bob Terry, who for three years had had to suffer for a crime he did not commit—and now he was free.

This is the story that the writer presents in such an interesting style and while the reader does not lose sight of the problem that looms up, he feels the thrills and the excitement that grips him as he enjoys the details of the story. (Little, Brown, & Co., Boston.)

Burning Witches. By Marie de Montalvo. The title seemingly tells the foundation of the story of which it is said: "The author has written in a beautifully restrained style a keenly search story. She has taken her theme that 'witches' no longer burn in our modern life and develops it with skill and freshness."

The author dates her story back to 1666, recalling the fate of pretty Joan who was cruelly burned at the stake as a witch. And then she describes the modern girl, and her ways, making comparison of the girl of long ago, of yesterday, and of today, presenting a problem and asking the question and making the statement "This is a different age and a different environment, but are there not witches and witches today who, while not burned at the stake, suffer punishment in some form just the same?" (J. H. Sears & Co., New York.)

Uharna. By Cervez Baronti. "Uharna is the romance of a century. It is considered a tremendous book. It is the story of the Orient and Occident blended in one person. She has the occultism, the poetry of the Orient, and the twinkling eyes of the western aesthete." (Dorrance & Co., Philadelphia.)

The Law of the Talon. By Louis Tracy, who is the man who wrote "The Black Cat," which William Lyon Phelps called "the best detective story I have read."

So here's another case that is so mysterious that the whole of Scotland Yard will have to be called out to even find the trail which leads through the heart of Scotland's aristocracy and which has for its leader a marvelous dog. (Edward J. Clode, Inc., New York.)

SECRETS OF THE WHITE HOUSE.

A great deal of interest has been displayed in learning about the inside life of the white house—the home of the presidents of the United States—and Mrs. Elizabeth Jaffray, who was housekeeper from the days of Taft to Coolidge, contributes some interesting data.

While Mrs. Jaffray can only discuss the ins and outs of the scenes behind the domestic curtain in the white house during the administrations of Presidents Taft, Wilson, Harding and Coolidge, but she tells the story of the experiences of these president's and their wives, as she knew them. To sum it up, it means the worries, big and little, the pleasures in the same proportion, the disappointments and even the triumphs just like any other home.

In writing of the White House and its occupants she sums it all up in the following words: "I have known four presidents and five First Ladies of the Land as intimately as one knows the members of one's own family. I have lived in their homes; for, after all, the white house is no remote castle, but a plain white house—a home for our presidents."

The following little criticism will be read in a kind of human interest way: "Taft was the best natured president; Woodrow Wilson was the kindest president; Harding was the best dressed; Coolidge saves the most money. Mrs. Taft was the tiniest First Lady; the first Mrs. Wilson was the most motherly. The second Mrs. Wilson the most affectionate; Mrs. Harding had the loveliest clothes and Mrs. Coolidge seems the happiest," and of this she says, "these are only bits of memories that I carry away from those 17 years."

The book also gives White House menus and recipes that will interest and perhaps be valuable to others who give public functions. The last recipe given is that for the plum pudding that has been used in the White House for many years and which has been copied and tested all over America. (The Cosmopolitan Book corporation.)

BOOK FOR THE HOME.

The Spanish House for America. Its Design, Furnishing and Garden. By Rexford Newcomb, author of "The Old Mission Churches and Historic Houses of California." With frontispiece in color and 97 plates of Spanish houses and their details.

This is a most attractive book and is especially filled with interesting designs that will please the eye of the builder of an American home. (Lippincott's, Philadelphia.) $3.50.

The Practical Decoration of Furniture. Veneering, Inlay and Marqueterie. Painting, Gildings, etc. by H. P. Shapland, editor of "The Cabinet Maker," London. The author is a lecturer, member of the council of the examiner in the Society of Arts, etc.

This is the first of a series of three books to be sold separately which will present a complete type of every type of decorative designing. (Payson & Clarke, Ltd., New York.)

Home of Famous Americans. Vol. II. By Chesla Sherlock, author of "Better Homes and Gardens." Among the homes that are attractively illustrated is Gunston hall, Sagamore Hill, the boyhood home of Mark Twain; home of President McKinley; Orchard house, the home of Louisa May Alcott; The Wren's Nest, the home of Joel Chandler Harris; Fort Hill, the home of John C. Calhoun.

The author having visited these famous homes personally, taking in every detail of their attractiveness, is in a position to present them in their true settings, describing the beautiful surroundings of these old historic homes. (Meredith Publications, Des Moines, Iowa.)

Collecting Hooked Rugs. By Elizabeth Waugh and Edith Foley. Every woman knows the story of the hooked rug—it is an American art—the craze for making them is sweeping the country, and very few homes are without them somewhere in the house. The simplicity of their design, the beauty of their coloring, the ease and charm which they add to any interior decorative scheme, all place them among the true arts, and that is where America has placed them.

This book contains a simple but complete history of the hooked rug, together with incidents and episodes that will add to its interest. It is really a valuable book for connoisseur and decorator. (The Century company, New York.) Price $2.50.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Causes of War and the New Revolution. By Tell A. Turner. This book presents the causes, events and results of over 60 important wars of the past three and one-half centuries, in a series of condensed narratives. (Marshall Jones company, Boston.

The Living Constitution. A consideration of the realities and legends of our fundamental law. By Howard Lee McBain—The Ruggles professor fo constitution law in Columbia university. (Published by The Workers' Education Bureau Press, New York city.)

Anthony Comstock—Roundsman of the Lord. By Howard Broun and Margaret Leech. These two writers have made a story out of the Puritan who led an army of grandfathers and maiden aunts against the younger generation.

The picture of Anthony Comstock, portly figure with flowing whiskers, has been the subject of many artists and his work has been on the line of the livest questions in America for he was always a fighter against vice and not until he laid down his work in 1915 did he ever falter in doing what he thought was his duty along this line. (Albert and Charles Boni, New York.)

The Road to the Temple. By Susan Glaspell, author of The Glory of the Conquered. The author has written a fascinating biography of her husband, George Cram Cook, who "from his youth in the pioneer lands of America to his later days in Greece, where he lived as a shepherd among shepherds, for he was from the very beginning a Greek in spirit.

In writing of the book a critic says: "By virtue of the very beautiful frankness with which the life of Susan Glaspell with George Cram Cook is told, it becomes also an autobiography of one of the most remarkable women writers." (Frederick Stokes company, New York.)

BOOKS ON RELIGION.

War Against War or the Joy of Peace. By Daniel Allard, author of Masters of Destiny. The author in his own style gives an honest description of the greatest character of the New Testament. (The Stratford company, Boston.)

The Three EE's. A treatise of new thought, by Rev. Clement D. Brown. (The Stratford company, Boston.)

The Trial of Jesus. By J. M. Floyd, a well-known member of the Georgia, Florida and United States federal courts and lecturer on religious subjects. The book is presented as a drama. (Christopher Publishing House, Boston.)

Can the Churches Unite? A symposium. Published under the auspices of the world conference on faith and order. (Century company.)

SCHOOL BOOKS RECEIVED.

The New Practical English for High Schools. Second course. By William Dodge Lewis and John Fleming Hosic.

Essentials of Junior High School Mathematics. Books one and two. By Samuel Hamilton, Ralph P. Bliss and Lillian Kupfer. (American Book company, Atlanta.)

JUNIOR BOOKS RECEIVED.

The Ten Dreams of Zach Peters and How They Led Him Through the Constitution of the United States. By Hermann Hagedorn, author of "The Boy's Life of Theodore Roosevelt." A most appealing story in which young America will be greatly interested—in fact it is a story in which any American will find it interesting, impelling, illuminating and informative.

Zach Peters proves to be a wonderful boy and with his dog becomes well known as the reader will learn if he will only read the first dream—for that means that he will follow the boy through the other dreams as faithfully as his dog does. The illustrations are by Frank Godwin.

Heading North. By Ralph Henry Barbour and published by Fleming H. Revell company, of which Ellis Parker Butler, author of "Pigs Is Pigs," says: "I never in the world though that I would sit up till 2 o'clock in the morning reading a 'boy's story' because I could not stop, but that is what I did. The boy who don't like Heading North should be reclassified—he's girl. It's the only kind of a boy's book that has been worth the hoot of a pop-eyed own since 'Tom Sawyer.' . . . Heading North ought to stick out like a wild cat in a convention of guinea pigs!"

Walter Garvin in Mexico. A most interesting book for boys, by General Smedley D. Butler and Lieutenant Arthur J. Burks, of the United States marine corps. While this book was written for boys there is so much in it that brings the story of Mexico of a few years ago that grownups will find it of real interest for it tells of historical events. (Dorrance & Co., Philadelphia.)

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

The literary career of Mrs. Louise Breitenbach Clancy is an emphatic answer to the mooted question as to whether a woman can successfully pursue two careers at once. Mrs. Clancy's well-ordered home (she lives in Detroit) is evidence enough that she has not neglected her domestic duties for the pen. And, on the other hand, her growing list of books would indicate she finds time aplenty to write. She has written five successful stories for girls, including the Hadley Hall series, and a gay and refreshing novel—You're Young But Once—all published by Page, Boston. "If a woman is persistent enough," says Mrs. Clancy, "she can follow her home life and an outside career, provided she does not let the one take too much time from the other." And to prove her theory Mrs. Clancy proceeds to do both jobs well!

Spanish rights of John Erskine's fairly well-known book, "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," have been sold to Editorial Cosmopolis of Madrid, Spain.

Add Bruce Barton "Man Nobody Knows" anecdotes:: A business man, slightly deaf, requested his friend to recommend a best-seller to read, upon which his friend suggested Bruce Barton's "The Man Nobody Knows." The deaf gentleman walked into a book shop and confidently asked for a copy of "The Man Nobody Owes," by Bruessgarten!

P. S.: He got the book.

The Carnegie Foundation for International Peace placed an order for 130 copies of Islands of the Mediterranean, by Paul Wilstach, for distribution among small country libraries. The foundation believes that only by placing before as many people as possible the better books on foreign countries can interest and closer knowledge and relationship be stimulated. And that, of course, is the purpose of the Carnegie foundation.

Modern Masterpieces In Silver

If you were to ask a master silversmith why he is proud of his calling, he would probably reply, "Because Paul Lamerie, Paul Crespin and Paul Revere were silversmiths also." Perhaps the good craftsman places too little value on his own fine talents in his enthusiasm for the three immortal Pauls of silversmithing. The modern worker in silver has produced many notable pieces to be gloried in future ages as much as they are today.

The Freeman collection of silver plate includes both modern masterpieces and many others that drew their inspiration from the triumphs of the three immortal Pauls.

Burns-Saye Wedding Is Recent Lovely Church Event

Photograph by Elliott and Leonard.

Mrs. J. Ferman Saye, who before her marriage Saturday, March 26, at Druid Hills Presbyterian church, was Miss Lelia Mae Burns. Mr. and Mrs. Saye are at home at 847 Greenwood avenue, N. E.

The Druids Hills Presbyterian church was the scene of a pretty and impressive wedding Saturday, March 26, when Miss Lelia Mae Burns and James Furman Saye were united in marriage by Rev. Wade H. Boggs, at 2:30 o'clock. To the strains of the bridal march from Lohengrin, played by Mrs. R. L. Wilmot, the pride entered with her sister, Mrs. J. Guy Smith, matron of honor, and was met at the altar by Mr. Saye and his brother, Sam W. Saye, who acted as best man.

During the ceremony the "Sweetest Story Ever Told" was played softly. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played while the bridal party left the church.

Lovely Bride.

Mrs. Saye is the lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles David Burns, of Pittsboro, N. C., but Mrs. Saye lived in Washington, D. C., before coming to Atlanta, where she has made her home with her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. J. Guy Smith. She has made many friends here.

Mr. Saye is well known in Atlanta. He attended Georgia Tech and was a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity. He is employed in the engineering department of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Saye, mother of the groom, and Sam W. Saye, vice president of the Georgia and Florida railroad, who is a brother of the groom.

The bridal couple left immediately for a trip to Florida and will be at home to their friends at 847 Greenwood avenue, N. E., Atlanta, after April 1.

Mrs. Norman Sharp To Preside at Camp Fire Board Meet

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the Atlanta Camp Fire Girls, will preside over a very important meeting of the board of directors of the organization, Tuesday, April 5, at 12:30 o'clock in the chamber of commerce basement club room. This is the regular meeting of the Camp Fire executive body and every member is urged to attend. Reservations may be made for the luncheon of the occasion by calling Camp Fire headquarters, Walnut 3577, by Monday.

At the last meeting many interesting facts were brought out about the value of the program adopted by the Camp Fire organization of Atlanta. Among the members discussing this program was Dudley Cowles, past president, who has for several years been an ardent supporter of Camp Fire activities. Mr. Cowles said he had been in the book publishing business for years and never had he read any book which contained a finer educational program, than is adopted by the Camp Fire organization. He stressed the great importance of developing youth in the proper manner and above all, the character building of the young girls.

Miss Florence Heintz, field secretary in the Camp Fire work, was present at the meeting and brought to the attention of the members that the program was especially beneficial in that it provides differently for the western, eastern and southern girls, according to their localities. She said New York girls like outdoor activities, while it is well known that the western girls are partial to indoor sports. The city girls, stated Miss Heintz, have to encounter the passing of commodious homes and live in apartments and even some have to occupy garages, temporarily, but these girls who have had this splendid training can soon evolve the temporary abiding places into attractive homes.

The English people, it was learned, have adopted much of the program of the American Camp Fire program. There they have their camp at an old castle, which makes the work very unique and beautiful. In Paris, it is said, Mdme. Pavlowa, the famous dancer in choosing her phase of philanthropic endeavors, she has chosen that of fostering the Camp Fire recreational activities for the young girls, and has also adopted much of the splendid program.

It was the sense of the meeting held recently here in Atlanta, that the Camp Fire work means a carrying on of the fundamental principles taught in church, school and home, to their greatest and highest fulfillment, by the youth of every city, state and nation.

Haitowitsch To Play Thursday At Woman's Club Auditorium

Abraham Haitowitsch, who overcame the handicap of blindness suffered at the age of 2 and became one of the foremost violinists of the day, will be honored by Atlanta society at his concert at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium Thursday evening, April 14.

There will be many fashionable parties, the patrons and patronesses include Mrs. Cliff C. Hatcher, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, Mrs. Frank M. Inman, Mrs. John M. Slaton, Mrs. Benjamin Z. Phillips, Mrs. A. Ten Eyck Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Elsas, Mrs. Robert C. Alston, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hirsch, Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Victor H. Kriegshaber, Dr. David Marx and Mrs. Edgar A. Neely.

The two combined appeals of musical and social interests unite in promising the success of this entertainment. Mr. Haitowitsch is an artist of the highest and most dignified standing and has been heard with great approval in New York, Boston, Chicago and other large cities of America.

Chamberlin's Fashion Show Heralds Approach of Opera

Heraldin the rapid approach of the opera season and its attendant interest in feminine styles, is the fashion show to be staged by the Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose apparel shop Monday between the hours of 11 to 12 and 3 to 4 o'clock.

Six lovely society girls, members of the organization of Black Cats, will model the fashionable gowns, coats and accessories. These girls, noted for their beauty and chic, are Misses Mary Louise Brumby, president of the Black Cats; Nora O'Beirne, Jane Small, Polly Hearn, Virginia Howard and Mary Harris.

Dresses to be worn by the girls on this occasion have been carefully chosen, each girl's type being taken into consideration in selecting the gowns she will model.

Distinctive gowns appropriate for every opera occasion—evening, dinner, afternoon and sports wear—will be displayed and posed, according to Mrs. A. L. Egan, buyer for this department. Other handsome gowns appropriate for street wear will be shown. Mrs. Egan herself will wear a handsome Vionnet model of black frost crepe, showing the new sleeve and neckline indorsed by this noted couturier—one of two Vionnet street frocks recently purchased by Mrs. Egan in a group of exclusive imported models. Other importations to be shown on this occasion are models from Chanel, Patou, Miller Soeurs, Phillip et Gaston, Goupy, Berthe, Molyneux No. 38, Lescomte, LeBouvier and Jenny, of Paris.

Informative to Women.

The fashion show will give authentic information to women seeking the correct apparel to wear at the performances of the opera and to the functions attending the social celebration—the barbecues, teas, dances, dinners, fetes and other affairs, formal and informal.

Mrs. Egan will explain the new features of the gowns posed, and Mrs. Fred Shaeffer, style adviser for Chamberlin's, who is working with Mrs. Egan in arranging the fashion show, will be glad to answer any questions relative to style.

"The most exclusive evening gowns will be seen in satins in high colors," said Mrs. Egan. "Georgettes and chiffons, trimmed with rhinestones and other ornaments, are still good, but the newer evening gowns are the satins in pastel shades and black, trimmed with flowers of the same materials.

The fashionable slim miss or matron will, in many instances, be seen in the bouffant style with a long skirt. However, the tailored type girl, with the short, black hair and definite features, will find the straight silhouette more becoming to her type, and this gown will be worn extremely short. The new French models are all very short. Mephisto red is a very good color for the satin gowns. White is another favorite."

Afternoon Wear.

Mrs. Shaeffer pointed to printed chiffons and all-lace as preferable for afternoon wear—at the opera, the teadances and the informal dinner. The printed chiffons are largely of imported cloth, while the handsomest lace gowns are of imported laces—point d'esprit, entre nous, chantilly and cire. Some very lovely evening gowns are also shown in all-lace, both in the domestic and imported kinds. These are worn over slips, both colored and black, and many of them are dyed in grays, blacks, tans and some of the high shades.

Street dresses are strictly tailored, according to Mrs. Egan. Navy and navy combinations are favored. Black and white are also very good, she declared, while tan is a strong leading some of the high shades.

The midsummer shades are the new blues, beiges, flesh and white, according to this authority.

"Distinctive models in sports frocks for country club wear and hotel teadance occasions will be featured in Iceland wool over crepes, and the new knitted cloths with silver and gold threads woven in them are very exclusive," said Mrs. Egan. She also pointed out the ascendancy of Kasha tulle in sports apparel. The simpler frocks for these occasions are of flat crepe and crepe de chine.

Miss Dann Weds George W. Dougherty.

Albany, Ga., April 2.—Miss Eloise Dann and George W. Dougherty were married at the First Methodist church Wednesday morning, March 30, at 10 o'clock, by Dr. E. C. Atkins, of Milledgeville, assisted by Rev. O. F. Cook.

Before the ceremony, Mrs. T. B. Smothers sang "All for You" and "Because." Mrs. Elia Meadors played during the ceremony and before the entrance of the bridal party.

The maid of honor, Miss Dorothy Dougherty, sister of the groom, followed the ushers, Harry Dann, Pete Whiting and the best man, Walter Hayes, of Toledo. She wore green georgette made with cape. She wore a tan hat and carried a colonial bouquet. Mrs. R. G. Means, matron of honor, sister of the bride, wore a dress of beige georgette, and carried a colonial bouquet. The little flower girl, Evelyn Means, preceded the bride. She wore a hand-embroidered dress made of sheer white organdy. She carried a basket of roses. The bride entered with her father, J. L. Dann. She wore navy flat crepe ensemble with a beige panama hat. She carried a shower bouquet of valley lilies and bride roses.

Mrs. Dougherty is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Dann. She has lived in Albany several years. She is a graduate of the University of Ohio, where she was a member of the Delta Delta Delta fraternity. For several years she has been a member of the Business and Professional Women's club. Mr. Dougherty is also a graduate of the University of Ohio, where he was a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. He is a lawyer in Toledo, Ohio. The out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Atkins, of Milledgeville, Ga., and Mrs. Carrie F. Smith, of Columbus, Ohio. The couple left by motor for Toledo, Ohio, where they will make their home.

Baptist Board Is Entertained.

A delightful day was enjoyed in the home of Mrs. A. C. Evins Thursday when Mrs. Evins and Mrs. Frank Mitchell entertained the executive board of women of the Second Baptist church. Interesting reports were made, business of importance discussed and plans made for the future. Mrs. Hal Hentz, president, presided.

Those present were: Mrs. William Walker Brookes, Mrs. John Burress, Mrs. W. E. Campbell, Mrs. Frances Brown Chase, Mrs. J. D. Cromer, Mrs. D. P. Darrington, Mrs. J. R. Dickey, Mrs. Glenn Dodson, Mrs. Davis Fitzgerald, Mrs. Robert E. Harvey, Mrs. Hal Hentz, Mrs. T. J. Jeffries, Mrs. Carter Helm Jones, Mrs. J. F. Lee, Mrs. Bertha McGinty, Mrs. L. L. Olive, Mrs. Fred Patterson, Mrs. J. T. Pearson, Mrs. O. L. Rudisail, Mrs. C. A. Simpson, Mrs. W. J. Thebaut, Mrs. C. A. Wallace, Mrs. Maggie Weimer, Mrs. J. B. Young, and Miss Lucy M. Zachry.

The following invited guests were cordially welcomed: Dr. Carter Helm Jones, Mrs. Carter Brooke Jones, Mrs. W. H. Pittman, Mrs. W. O. Shewmaker and Mrs. R. D. Scearce.

Mrs. Carrick Will Lecture For Fine Arts Club April 8

Mrs. Alice Van Leer Carrick, well-known art connoiseur, who will lecture to the members of the Fine Arts club at 3:30 o'clock Friday, April 8, at the Piedmont Driving club.

The final program of the Fine Arts club will be rendered on the afternoon of April 8 at 3:30 o'clock at the Piedmont Driving club. Mrs. Alice Van Leer Carrick, who lectures on old furniture and its accessories (including rugs, pressed glass, stencils, silhouettes, china, old prints and valentines) and period furniture and its relation to history, will feature the program.

Mrs. Carrick is a woman of versatility, a keen and experienced collector, and plays no favorites. Furniture, glass and lustre-wear, card cases, pewter, samplers, silhouettes, a host of objects large and small claim her attention. "Not only has she artistic discernment and response to delicate workmanship, but she can translate these qualities into lively and enthusiastic writing, as the many readers of her books will be quick to affirm.

Mrs. Carrick haunts auctions in village and town alike. She records the prices of the objects gathered in her search, and gives useful hints for the guidance of others who share her enthusiasms.

When asked about the daily routine of her life in Hanover, N. H., Mrs. Carrick says: "What am I doing? Well, just the usual things, the common 'dailiness of life,' as our north country interprets it; battling with an inefficient maid, writing when heaven sends me a free morning, tramping and motoring in the afternoons (equally given to Providence) and showing 'the next-to-nothing house' all the time! Thursday's the official day, of course, but I really believe that Hanover, not Boston, must be the hub of the universe, for tourists flock unceasingly, and always there seems to be an excellent reason why they should knock at my door and walk in; they're sisters and cousin and aunts of somebody I know, or they've read every work I've written, or they've just bought an old house and are doing it over. Rich folk, poor folk, trooping all together! Some with lowboys, some with lustre, some with cup-plates, but all with a real, genuine love and admiration of the past. And me—except on Thursdays, when the house is swept and garnished and my maid likewise burnished bright—forever forgetting and dashing to the door with pencils thrust through my hair like quills upon the fretful porcupine! That's been my life this year."

Mrs. W. F. Shallenberger, president of the Fine Arts club, is very anxious that every member avail themselves of this distinct opportunity and be present at the Driving club early, as there are a number of important announcements to be made before the lecture. Mrs. Carrick's lecture will be supplemented by a lovely display of rare old antiques.

Pre-School Chairman Issues Message.

Mrs. T. C. Bazemore, Atlanta preschool chairman, urges all parent-teacher associations and pre-school circles to enter "The Summer Round-up Campaign" conducted by the Nation Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Starting in the summer of 1925 with very little time for preparation, the results of the work in Atlanta proved beyond a doubt the value of the project.

Even greater interest was aroused in 1926, and with the full cooperation of the city health office, the principals and pupils of the public school, Professor Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, and some of the leading physicians in the city, and the splendid publicity furnished by the newspapers and the Georgia Railway & Power company, the results were very satisfactory. Of the 1,700 children who entered kindergarten in September, 1926, 1,152 were examined and registered on registration day in the schools during the last week in April. A large percentage of the defects found in these children were corrected during the summer.

Kindergarten registration days this year will be April 28 and 29, and May 2 and 3. Parents who wish to have their children examined by their own physicians are requested to do so before registration day, and to bring a certificate from said physician, showing the condition of their child. The principals of the different schools will be informed as to the date of the registration in each school, and the dates for each school will be published later.

Atlanta Chapter U. D. C. To Sponsor Bridge-Tea.

On April 20 there will be a bridge-luncheon sponsored by the Atlanta chapter U. D. C. at the chapter house, 156 Juniper street, Mrs. G. E. Cooper, chairman.

The three-course luncheon is the contribution of the Hennard Mayonnaise people and will be served promptly at 1 o'clock by Mrs. R. W. Underwood and Mrs. C. W. Jordon.

The game starts immediately after lunch and there will be many lovely prizes.

Freshmen Banquet At Piedmont College.

Demorest, Ga., April 1.—The annual banquet given by the freshman class of Piedmont college in honor of the juniors was a brilliant event. Robert W. Thorburn, president of the freshman class, was toastmaster. The after-dinner speakers were: Professor W. B. Phillips, head of the English department, who spoke on "The Awakening of Spring." A. L. James, president of the junior class, responded to "Spring's Play Time." "Spring Melodies" was the subject of Miss Dorothy Gaede. Charles Long discussed "Sunrise and Sunset," and the "Response to Spring" was given by Miss George Wagner, vice president of the junior class. A. B. Core talked about "Spring Showers" and Miss Priscilla Axtell had "Flowers" for her theme.

Dr. W. M. Jones, head of the department of religion, was the last speaker. His subject was "The Spring of Life."

The famous male quartet of the college sung, with Miss Tony Miller at the piano. Other piano selections were given by Miss Susie Ritchie. Readings were given by Miss Agnes Powell.

An out-of-town guest present was Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, superintendent of the Atlanta Baptist Missionary union.

The hand-decorated programs were the work of Miss Willie Malcolm of the freshman class.

Trinity Methodist Missionary Society To Meet Monday.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Trinity Methodist church will have an all-day meeting at the church Monday, April 4, at 10:30 o'clock. The mission study will be taken up, and the regular business meeting will begin at 3 o'clock. It is requested that sandwiches be brought. Coffee will be served.

West End Civic Club Forms Garden Club

The announcement in last Sunday's papers of the forming of a Garden club in the Civic club of West End, to which all women of West End will be welcome to membership, has brought forth a gratifying response. Numbers of calls and inquiries have been received, signifying a hearty interest and it is hoped that every woman interested in gardening will attend the initial meeting Tuesday afternoon, April 5, at 2 o'clock at the clubhouse, 1115 Gordon street. This committee will take an active part in the better homes exhibit and garden contest to be held in May.

The literary committee of the Civic club meets Wednesday afternoon, April 6, at 3 o'clock at the clubhouse, with Mrs. Dupre Johnson as chairman. Mrs. Murray Howard and Mrs. W. H. Hill will have charge of the program.

The party Monday evening in honor of Mrs. R. Taylor Connally, corresponding secretary of the club, was a delightful affair. There were nine tables of bridge and Mrs. Connally was presented a gift.

Mrs. Edward H. Smith, president of the Civic club, and Mrs. C. C. Shipley, house chairman, attended the convention of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs last week in Albany, Ga.

College Park Club To Meet Wednesday.

The College Park Woman's club will meet Wednesday, April 6, at 3 o'clock, at the residence of the president, Mrs. Oscar Palmour, 206 West Hawthorne avenue.

Mrs. W. W. Bateman, chairman of music for the club, has arranged a delightful program for the afternoon.

Miss Ruth Dabney Smith, gifted violinist, whose playing reflects breadth of study and rare musicianship, will play a number of violin selections.

Mrs. Sam Johnson's lovely voice will be heard in a group of songs. Both artists will be accompanied by Mrs. Julius de Give.

On this occasion the new members of the club will be honor guests.

Tea will be served by Mrs. C. W. Evarts, assisted by a group of lovely young high school girls who compose group No. 2 of the junior organization of the club.

Mrs. Stanfield Is Hostess.

Dr. Newton To Address Citizenship Group on China

Dr. J. C. C. Newton, of Japan and China, will speak at the regular meeting of the American citizenship department of the Atlanta Woman's club, Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock in the palm room of the club, on "Present Conditions in China."

Dr. Newton, who is a well-known missionary, spent 38 years in the orient during which time he was president of a university in southwestern Japan, often visiting that unhappy area of China where citizens of this country have been ruthlessly killed in riots recently. He is thoroughly familiar with Chinese history and has a wonderful insight into the occidental "code of morals," which enables him to throw much lighth upon their present resentment of foreign exploitation.

Dr. Newton is the father of Mrs. E. Marvin Underwood, an ardent club worker, and is a speaker of ability and charm. Every member of the club is invited to hear him.

Mrs. John D. Evans, chairman of the Americanization division, will preside in the absence of Mrs. J. P. Billups, who is attending a convention in south Georgia.

New members may be enrolled at this meeting and visitors will be cordially welcomed.

Atlanta Artists Will Give Operalogues at Woman's Club

The Atlanta Woman's club is sponsoring a series of four operalogues, the first of which will be "Mignon," to be given Wednesday afternoon, April 6, at 3 o'clock, at the club auditorium. A group of talented Atlanta artists will render the operalogue, the group including Mrs. Jack Lester, soprano, who will sing the aria, "Knowest Thou the Land," and "Song of the Swallows;" Mrs. Louisa Wicker Allensworth, coloratura soprano, who will sing the part of Filina, and Miss Carolyn Cobb, platform reader, teacher and lecturer, who will read the opera.

The characters of the drama are: Mignon, a young girl stolen by gypsies; Filina, an actress; Frederick, a young nobleman; Wilhelm, a student; Laertes, an actor; Lothario, an Italian nobleman; Giarno, a gypsy; townsfolks, peasants, gypsies, actors and actresses. The scene of acts I and II is laid in Germany. The scene of act III in Italy.

The overture is full of the grace and delicacy which Thomas' music is celebrated and contains the principal themes, notably Filina's dashing "Polonaise."

ACT I.

Scene—Courtyard of a German inn. Mignon, a daughter of noble parents, was stolen when a child by gypsies, and, as the act opens, is a girl of 17 forced to dance in the public streets by the brutal Giarno, chief of the gypsy band. The first scene shows the courtyard of a German inn, where townspeople and travelers are drinking. After the opening chorus Lothario, a wandering minstrel, enters and sings, accompanying himself on his harp.

The minstrel is in reality Mignon's father, whose mind was affected by his daughter's abduction, and he wanders about seeking her. The gypsy band appears and Mignon is ordered to dance, by Giarno, who threatens her with his stick when she wearily refuses. Wilhelm, a young student, protects her from the gypsy and questions her about her parents. She remembers little, but tells him of her impression of home in this lovely "Connais-tu-le Pay" ("Knowest Thou the Land"), full of tender beauty. The passionate longing of the orphan child for her childhood home is effectively expressed in this superb climax.

Wilhelm, full of pity for the helpless girl, offers Giarno a sum of money to release her and goes into the inn to complete the bargain. Lothario comes to Mignon, saying he must go south, following the swallows, and bids her farewell. Then occurs the charming "swallow duet." Les Hirondelles ("Song of the Swallows"), Wilhelm is now invited to go to the castle of Prince Tieffenbach with the troupe of players headed by the lovely Filina, who has observed the handsome student with an appreciative eye. He hesitates, thinking of Mignon, but she begs to be allowed to accompany him disguised as a servant.

Wilhelm finally yields a reluctant consent, not knowing what else to do, and the act ends with the departure of the players.

ACT II.

Scene 1—A boudoir in Tiffenbach castle. Filina is seated in front of her toilet table, musing on the handsome Wilhelm, who has made a deep impression on her affections. Wilhelm enters with Mignon, who meets with a cool reception from the great actress. Wilhelm makes love to Filina while Mignon watches with a sad heart, as she has learned to love her new master. When left alone she tries by the aid of Filina's rouge to make herself more beautiful—she goes to the closet and puts on one of Filina's dresses and appears before Wilhelm. He tells her he must leave her—in "addio Mignon" (farewell Mignon). Mignon weeps—refuses the money which he offers her and is about to bid him farewell when Filina enters and, seeing Mignon in one of her own dresses, eyes her with sarcastic amusement, which puts Mignon into a jealous rage and she rushes into the cabinet, tears off the borrowed finery and puts on her gypsy garments.

SCENE II.

The Gardens of the Castle—The scene changes to the park of the castle. Mignon, in despair, attempts to throw herself into the lake, but is prevented by Lothario, who consoles her. In a fit of jealousy she wishes that fire would consume the castle in which Filina had won her master's affections. Lothario is puzzled by this and goes off muttering to himself. The actors and guests now issue from the castle, proclaiming the beauty and talent of Filina. In the flush of her triumph she brings the brilliant "Polonaise" (I'm Fair), one of the most difficult and showy of all soprano's airs.

Wilhelm now sees Mignon and is about to speak to her when Filina interposes and asks her to go to the castle on some errand. The young girl, glad to escape meeting Wilhelm, obeys, but has no sooner gone than the castle is discovered to be in flames, the half-witted Lothario having set fire to it having heard Mignon's jealous wish. Wilhelm rushes into the castle and soon reappears with the unconscious form of Mignon while the curtain falls on the striking tableau.

ACT III.

Scene—Count Lothario's castle in Italy. Lothario returns to his castle with Mignon, followed by Wilhelm, who realizes he loves Mignon, his youthful ward. The young girl is recovering from a dangerous illness and as Lothario watches outside her room, he sings a beautiful "Berceuse" (lullaby). Wilhelm takes Lothario's place as watcher and tells of his newfound affection in a beautiful air—"Elle ne Croyait Pa."—Mignon walks feebly to the balcony, sees Wilhelm and becomes agitated; he tries to soothe her, but she insists only Lothario loves her. Lothario enters, announces he has been restored to his right mind by the familiar scenes of his ancestral home and that he is Count Lothario.

He shows the jewels and prayer-book of his lost daughter and tells them her name was Sperata.

Mignon starts at the name—she starts to read from the prayer-book a prayer and drops the book and continues the prayer from memory.

Lothario recognizes her as his lost daughter.

They are reunited and a blessing is bestowed on the young people by Lothario.

Education Group To Conduct Contest for Camp Fire Girls

Mrs. Tom Brooke announces that the applied education department of the Atlanta Woman's club, of which she is chairman, will conduct a contest for the Camp Fire Girls of the city and award two scholarships for the two best essays on "The Need of Reforestation in Georgia."

This subject was chosen by B. M. Lutburrow, forester for the state of Georgia, who has been interested in the work of the Camp Fire Girls. Mr. Lufburrow states that information and literature on this subject can be obtained in the department of forestry at the state capitol.

The terms of the contest are as follows: (1) Contest is open only to Camp Fire Girls who have personally planted a tree or who belong to a Camp Fire group which has planted a tree or trees. (2) Essays shall be limited to 500 words, longer themes will not be accepted. (3) All essays must be mailed to Mrs. Robert B. Cunningham, 1115 Peachtree street, city, and must be in not later than April 25, as contest closes on that date.

The winners of the scholarships will be announced at a meeting of the Camp Fire Girls at the Atlanta Woman's club, Friday, April 29, at which time a program will be given on forestry.

The scholarships which are to be given for the two best essays will entitle the winners to one week of camp free at the Camp Fire Girls' summer camp at Toccoa Falls, Georgia. In the event they wish to attend the entire three weeks of camp, they will have to pay for only two weeks, the scholarship covering fees for the third and last week.

Toccoa Falls camp, a beautiful outdoor camp at the foot of the Blue Ridge mountains. A camp site had been selected and plans for the first summer camp have been perfected. Camp begins June 13 and continues through July 3, and the winners of the contest on "The Need of Reforestation in Georgia" will have the privilege of selecting their own "free camp week."

In addition to the regular camp life a number of athletic events and educational trips have been arranged. There will be contests in archery, swimming and diving. Tennis tournaments have been planned and also boating. One of the educational tours will be through the furniture factory which took the first prize in walnut furniture in a New York furniture exhibit last year. The Kiwanis club of Toccoa has planned to take the girls to view the $1,000,000 dam at Tugalo river and while there they will have the privilege of exploring the cement tunnel which runs under the dam.

Forestry and tree planting embody one of the many phases of work in the Atlanta Woman's club and activities along this line come under the supervision of the applied education department.

Garden Committee To Hold Spring Flower Show April 8

The first spring flower show of the garden committee of Atlanta Woman's club will be held Friday, April 8, at the clubhouse. The show will especially feature tulips, as the garden committee is trying to stimulate more general interest in the planting of this beautiful flower. There will be exhibits, also, of iris, shrubs and all other flowers in bloom at this time.

Mrs. Morton Rolleston is chairman for the flower show and with her committee, consisting of Mrs. Joel Hunter, chairman of the garden committee; Mrs. Fritz Jones, secretary, and Miss May Hudson and Mrs. Robert Campbell, announces the following rules to govern the show:

Only members of the garden committee of the Atlanta Woman's club may exhibit, and all flowers must have been grown by the exhibitor. Flowers will be listed from 9 until 12 o'clock Friday morning, none to be received after 12. Exhibitors are expected to leave their flowers in place until the closing hour, 5:30 o'clock. The show will be open to the public from 2:30 until 5:30, with no charge, and visitors are cordially invited.

Ribbons will be awarded for each division of each class; blue ribbon, first premium; red ribbon, second premium; white ribbon, third premium. In addition to the ribbons, Mrs. Rolleston has secured a special prize for the tulip class, and prizes for each of the other classes.

An Authoritive Glimpse of the Easter Mode---

For Street—Stunning dresses in midnight blue play a profound part in the Easter mode. These of Elizabeth and Crepe Romaine. Three-piece costumes of Canton, with contrasting overblouse, and the all-important jacquette are essential.

Black predominates for the luncheons, afternoon, and dinner—black crinkle crepe—with rhinestones placed, and with ecru lace peeping through the top bodice—very good.

Here is the square silhouette in a Molyneux model that is so good. This one is in tan crinkle crepe. $69.50.

Here is all-important midnight blue—in the skirt; with waist of Venycon tucks, in flesh. A smart combination, with midnight blue cabachons at shoulder and waist. $69.50.

Here is black satin, in the coat of the hour—trimmed in three-tone grosgrain ribbon—a smart idea. $99.50.

Here white and blue moire ribbon alternate to achieve one of the outstanding triumphs of the Easter mode. $79.50.

Evening is in Pastel—soft, wafting, vivid Pastel—with the melody of glittering beads o'er the grandeur of chiffon—with paillettes—exquisite flowers, and embroidery, in place. Irregular flounces, and tiers running to points, are excellent.

The collegiate and subdeb evening—robe de style in glorious pastels—and what Paris calls "twinkling touches."

Mrs. Walker To Compile Book Of Beautiful Atlanta Homes

A feeling of pride in the homes of this city, already of nation-wide fame for its beautiful residences and gardens, is being stimulated by the announcement that a volume de luxe is to be published shortly, containing attractive homes and gardens, and other beauty-spots in the environs of Atlanta.

The book, called "Beautiful Homes in Atlanta and Environs," is published by Mrs. Kay Walker, who comes to the city with splendid recommendations from notables in other parts of the south and east, where similar civic pride has been the means of compiling this record of a city's beauty.

Sponsored by chambers of commerce, and recommended by society leaders, architects, and those interested in landscape gardening, Mrs. Walker has received warm encouragement for her work here.

Atlantans will be especially interested in the experience of the Florida city, Miami, in perpetuating civic beauty through this means. Homes appearing in the Miami volume are those of Curtis James, president of the Southern Pacific; Elliott F. Shepperd, ex-Governor James M. Cox; Harvey S. Firestone; T. J. Pancoast, at Miami Beach, William Jennings Bryan's "Villa Serena;" Curtis James "Four Way Lodge" at Coconut Grove, which has the most beautiful royal palm drive in America; and the palatial residences of Lock H. Highleyman; and the James Deering estate, so large that it was necessary to photograph it from an aeroplane.

Becoming a member of the Detroit Woman's club through the influence of Mrs. Henry Ford, one of the board of directors of the club, Mrs. Walker gained immediate entree to the heart of social life in that city, and her book of Detroit homes contains residences of Commodore Kotcher, Henry Ford's home in Dearborn; J. B. Schlotman; the Toreys, the Dodges, Colonel S. Y. Seaborn and the Russell Algers home, and others of equal prominence.

The object of the publishing of this book is primarily for the pleasure of those represented therein, since the finest photography makes this a beautiful souvenir, but through its placing in the chambers of commerce and public libraries throughout the country it serves as a volume of reference for students of architecture, interior decorating, landscaping, as well as for those who desire to become residents of a city so blessed with beauty.

Mrs. Walker is permanently located in Atlanta and has become a valued member of the Atlanta Woman's club. Work on the volume has started and it will be finished during the summer.

Health Committee of Y.W.C.A. Makes Plans for Health Week

An important meeting of the health education committee of the local Y. W. C. A. will be held Wednesday at the Y. W. headquarters, 37 Auburn avenue to further the plans for health week.

Last Wednesday this committee met for reorganization purposes, and the following officers and subchairman were elected: Mrs. Elizabeth Reamer, secretary; Mrs. Anne Bates Walsh, chairman; Mrs. Albert Pritchard, co-chairman; Miss Rebecca Ashcraft, subchairman of pool; Mrs. Norwood Griffin, telephoning; Mrs. Dan Byrd, secretary; Mrs. Harold Wey, Mrs. Eugene Wachendorff, Mrs. W. L. Champion, Miss Ellen Newell, Mrs. Richard Snow, Mrs. Charles E. Waits, Mrs. B. T. Carter, Mrs. Lloyd Tompkins, Mrs. William Candler, Mrs. O. T. Sterl, Mrs. C. P. Hodge, Mrs. Homer Thompson.

Further news from the health education department includes the announcement of a swimming meet, which will be held at Y. W. headquarters April 16 at 7:30 o'clock. All those who use the pool for lessons or for dips are urged to attend.

The purpose of this meet is to establish some swimming records for the Y. W. C. A. Free style, crawl, back stroke races will be held and form swimming of all strokes will be exhibited. Infants, junior, seniors and professionals will be entered in three classes for each group, and three records will be set accordingly. For further information, call Mrs. Reamer at the Y. W. C. A.

Reports From China.

Mrs. Lively Named President Of Georgia University Women

Mrs. Roger T. Lively, the newly-elected president of the Georgia state division of American Association of University Women.

Mrs. Roger T. Lively was elected president of the Georgia division, American Association of University Women, at the meeting held Saturday, March 19, at the Winecoff hotel. Other officers elected were first vice president, Miss Proctor, Athens; second vice president, Dr. Amanda Johnson, Milledgeville; secretary, Miss Loyall, Macon; treasurer, Miss Mildred Mell, Rome. These officers are to serve two years. Among the interesting guests who attended the meeting was Miss Harriett P. Marsh, of New Haven, Conn.

During the business session of the convention the members voted to have as their aim for the ensuing year an investigation of the standards and qualifications for high school teachers throughout the state, and to work toward the raising of these standards to a uniform minimum, prerequisite of a college degree.

Prominent Lecturers.

The first speaker of the day was Dr. Edgar H. Henderson, of the department of philosophy, University of Georgia. Dr. Henderson is the prime instigator of the Southern Institute of Politics patterned after the famous institute held annually at Williams college, Williamstown, Mass. The southern institute will be held at the University of Georgia at Athens June 28 to July 8, during the summer of 1927, instead of at Greenville, S. C., where it was held for the past three years. Dr. Henderson announced that the purpose of the institute is to create interest in politics in this section, on sectional and national questions.

The partial list of lecturers and conference leaders includes Dr. J. W. Garner, professor of political science, University of Illinois, and an authority on international law; Dr. Edward S. Corwin, professor of politics, Princeton university, authority on jurisprudence in the United States; Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy; Dr. Robert Cushman, head of department of government, Cornell university; Dr. E. C. Branson, head of the department of rural social economics, University of North Carolina; Adamantios Th. Polyzoides, leading Greek publicist and editor of Atlantis, in New York; J. J. McSwain, of South Carolina. Other prominent speakers who have been asked to attend the institute are Senator Borah, of Idaho; Senator Walsh, of Montana; Senator George and Senator Harris, of Georgia.

Dr. J. R. McCain, president of Agnes Scott college, gave an interesting address Saturday, using as his subject, "A Closer Relationship Between High School and College."

Miss Davis to Speak.

Miss Jean Davis, of Agnes Scott faculty, and a graduate of Bryn Mawr, gave a talk on the aims, purposes and results of the summer school for women in industry, which will have its seventh session at Bryn Mawr this summer. Miss Davis is one of the teachers of this school which is the crystallization of a vision of Dr. Carey Thomas, president of Bryn Mawr. Miss Mary Barker told of the opening of a similar school which will be conducted at Sweet Briar, Va., this summer.

Miss Leslie Gaylord, of Agnes Scott, gave a resume of the international conference of university women which convened in Amsterdam during the summer of 1926, saying that the outstanding feature of the conference was the recurrent discussion of the status of married women in the professions and the advisability of women continuing their careers after marriage.

Georgia cities represented in the Georgia division are Athens, Rome, Milledgeville, Augusta, Macon, Savannah and Atlanta, which is the oldest and largest branch.

Garden Club Is Organized At Roberts Home in Fairburn

At a meeting held Thursday afternoon by a group of Fairburn ladies in the home of Mrs. W. T. Roberts, a garden club was organized with an initial membership of 12. Mrs. D. C. Lyle, of College Park, first vice president of the Fifth District of Women's Clubs, was present and outlined the plan of organization.

The following ladies were named as officers: President, Mrs. W. T. Roberts; first vice president, Miss Marguerite Hearn; second vice president, Miss Mollie Hearn; secretary, Mrs. Willie Stubbs Winter; treasurer, Mrs. C. W. Greene.

This organization will function as a civic improvement society and will endeavor to promote good fellowship and the highest form of social life—not only among its members, but in the community and to encourage cultural and civic development. Various lines of study on the cultivation of flowers, bulbs and shrubs and the preparation of the soil will be taken up and the members given the advantage of each other's experience. Speakers of note will, from time to time, address the meetings.

Grace Methodist Auxalin Class Hostess at Party.

The summer home of Mr. Thomas K. Glenn, president of the Atlanta and Lowry National Bank and Trust Company of Georgia, was the scene of a most delightful party on March 26, when the Auxalin class of the Grace Methodist Sunday school were hostesses to the D. B. T. class.

Among the amusements enjoyed by those present were: horse-back riding buggy riding, contests, music, and, last but not least, delicious "eats." Supper was served in the spacious dining room which was decorated for the occasion in festive Easter colors.

A rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Glenn for his generosity in lending his beautiful estate for the picnic. Both Mrs. Charles Anderson, teacher of the Auxalin class and Miss Emma Wilson, who teaches the D. K. B.'s gave short talks of appreciation.

Among the invited guests were Mrs. Abernathy and Mr. Girardeau, superintendants of the young people's department of the Grace Methodist Sunday school; Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Walker, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Judson Andrews.

Jewish Woman's Club To Give Spring Dance.

Girl Scout Troops Activities Of Widespread Interest

Friday afternoon Troop No. 21 held a busy and interesting meeting at Lee street school. The meeting was opened with the scout formation, repetition of scout laws and promise; each patrol dramatized a scout law and held patrol councils and played a series of competitive knot-games.

The most important part of the program was the investiture service, when nineteen girls became scouts and were presented the tenderfoot pin by Mrs. W. F. Talley, local director. This service is an impressive one and means much in the life of a young scout—each girl is presented by her captain and seriously takes the Girl Scout promise, "to try to serve God and her country, to help other people at all times, and to obey the scout laws." Miss Margaret Whittington, captain, presented the following girls: Mary Baynes, Sarah Shupp, Anne Johnson, Claire Salvant, Teddy Southall, Kathleen Stewart, Sybil Turbyfield, Nellie White, Jessie Quinn, Sallie Dale, Bertha Shaffer, Thelma DeLoach, Gertrude Davies, Anne Hawkins, Dorothy Terrell. Visitors present were Miss Rusha Wesley, principal of the school, and the scouts' mothers and friends. This troop was organized in January and is now one of the most active in the city. Girl Scouts from this troop will usher at the Howard matinee on Saturday morning.

Troop No. 14 holds its meetings on Wednesday afternoon in All Saints' parish house. The girls are rehearsing a scout play, "Magic Gold Pieces," which they will present soon. Saturday, Miss Janie Ferrell and Miss Helen Miles went with the troop to camp Civitania for a hike in the surrounding woods.

An Easter egg hunt at Piedmont park is the next interesting thing on Troop No. 15 calendar.

Scouts in the Scottish Rite hospital were leading characters in a playlet, "Sleeping Beauty," given at the hospital recently. The story was rewritten into a play of such form as to permit its being enacted by children whose movement is dependent upon crutches, wheel chairs and stretcher. The characters were the Queen, Dorothy Hollingsworth; King, Harriette Feagin; Wicked Fairy, Recarda Williams; cook of court, Ruby Moore. This was the first play some of the children in the hospital had ever seen, so the Girl Scouts did a good turn in giving the other patients real pleasure.

Home service hours are won at the hospital for such tasks as rolling bandages, patching, distributing and taking up trays at meal times, making beds, dusting and helping with the younger children. Ruby Moore is the first scout to receive the ribbon for fifty hours of this service but other scouts are nearing the 50-hour goal.

Troop No. 5 held a novel meeting on Monday. The scouts, with their leader, Mrs. J. E. Mayo, went to the skating rink at Grant park—each girl was on skates—held the opening and closing formation and played their scout games. The hike home was a nature trail, the girls identifying flowers and trees as part of the second class nature requirement. The mascot of the afternoon was little four-year-old Mary Mayo, who joined the skaters.

Troop No. 32 scout mothers met on Friday afternoon with Mrs. L. D. Burns, at the same time that the troop held its meeting at Mrs. Lee Ashcraft's residence. The mothers are planning to assist their scout daughters by giving them sewing and cooking instructions which is part of the second class requirements.

The following Girl Scout leaders have passed the test and are all registered scouts: Miss Janie Hunter, Kirkwood Troop No. 4; Miss Margaret Whittington, Lee street Troop No. 21; Miss Adelaide Nelson, Druid Hills Troop No. 1; Mrs. J. E. Mayo, Troop No. 5; Miss Elizabeth Floding, Troop No. 7; Mrs. H. L. Parry, Troop No. 9; Miss Helen Forsdick, Troop No. 11; Miss Janie Ferrell, Troop No. 14; Mrs. Vera Hall, Troop No. 15; Mrs. J. S. Brail, Troop No. 16; Mrs. Carl Karston, Troop No. 18; Mrs. C. V. St. Gall Dotted Swisses

A charming material for dainty Easter frocks for children. It is one of the best of the Swiss fabrics, its texture being soft and sheer, and its wearing and washing qualities superb. It is 32 inches wide, and shown in 11 exquisite colors—white dots on grounds of blue, maize, green, pink, rose, helio, light blue, gray, light tan, and white grounds with dots of red, green or blue.

Silk-Cotton Jersey Nainsook

This is the newest of the lingerie fabrics, made of a pure silk combined with fine mercerized cotton—an ideal material for summer gowns, teddies and other lingerie. In pastel shades of rose, pink, helio, Nile, blue, and also white. Width is 36 inches.

Many Cotton Fabrics Featured Monday---All of High Quality

Special Sale of Shirting Madras

29c

A special sale tomorrow in our wash goods section of 1,000 yards of excellent shirting madras, 32 inches wide, woven smooth and even, with a silky rayon cord. You may select from many dainty stripe effects, in a host of pretty new colors. At this special price, you can get enough of this handsome material for a shirt for only 87c.

More New Fast-Color Prints

29c

For Monday we will have 1,000 yards of new, pretty patterns in wanted prints for your selection, at a special price of 29c a yard. They are very soft in finish, 36 inches wide, and shown in dainty florals and conservative designs—an ideal fabric for the popular tub dress styles.

Criterion Ginghams, Monday

19c

Over 3,000 yards of this favored gingham will be featured tomorrow in a special sale at 19c a yard. This well-known material needs no introduction to the average shopper, nor should it be necessary to remind that the regular price is 35c almost anywhere. This lot—fresh and new—will be on sale on a special table in our wash goods section. Many neat checks in all colors to select from. Width is 32 inches.

New Voils, Dimities, Batistes

Another interesting special for tomorrow will be an offering of 3,000 yards of these beautiful sheer fabrics in dainty floral designs at 49c a yard. They are real fast-color fabrics, of sheer construction, and very smooth in texture. Shown in a most extensive array of appealing designs, and dainty, fast colors.

A Monday Sale of 500

Pure Irish Linen Frocks

Four Snappy, Appealing Styles, and Six Choice Colors for Selection

$3.95

Pre-shrunk, pure Irish linen dresses, made in styles that are beautiful and ideal for home, porch, garden, neighborhood, and street wear. The larger sizes possess a trim, slenderizing feature that is appealing indeed to the larger woman.

The trim, as shown in the illustration above, is drawn-work done by hand, and there are also crocheted buttons and crochet edging that give these good, serviceable dresses a soft, appealing appearance. The bow at the neck gives a touch of the most favored fashion incorporated in many of the high-priced frocks. All have short sleeves.

For the benefit of our friends who live in the suburbs, these dresses will not be put on sale until 9:30 Monday morning. The quantity is limited (only 500 in the lot) and we urge that you be here promptly when the sale starts. We have arranged ample try-on facilities for you, and we suggest that you be sure that your selection is a good fit when you try it on, for the dresses will all be sold Monday, and no exchanges can therefore be made later.

A complete range of sizes from 36 to 46, in colors of Green, Blue, Rose, Orchid, White, and a few Yellow, will be accessibly displayed for your convenient selection, and plenty of salesladies will be on duty to serve you quickly, promptly and efficiently.

Keely Company

Whitehall at Hunter—Same Location Since 1869.

AT an early date, so the four of us hear, a magnificent adventure will be launched in our midst!

It will be synchronous with pleasure and amusement, and it is being planned especially for Atlantans!

Its name will probably be "The Green Parrot," or "The Blue Moon," though we aren't definite on this point, a score of attractive titles having suggested themselves to the adventurers. But whatever its name, the adventure itself will be none the less alluring.

By this time you have already guessed that by it we mean something on the order of a tea room de luxe.

Established out Peachtree way it will open its hospitable doors, in less than ten days, adjacent to the theater district—in fact right next door to one of the city's most popular play houses.

There southern hospitality will flower in all its entrancing phases and social history will be augmented by another chapter. Rivaling in smartness the adorable tea shops that abound in the Parisienne's Bois de Boulogne, or those that line the New Yorker's fashionable Madison avenue, an atmosphere of compelling charm will go far toward rendering it the center of things, socially speaking.

There one may lunch with one's friends at midday or enjoy a cup of tea after the matinee. Following the evening performance at the theaters, congenial groups will gather for supper in the enchanting light of a blue moon or under the watchful eye of a green parrot, perhaps.

Redolent of the far-famed tea-gardens of the Orient, a charming garden will soon spring into being at the rear of the place and screened from the view of modern commerce by formal box hedges and a profusion of flowering shrubs and trees, society will be able to chatter over the tea cups in true Elysian delightfulness.

Too, at a later date there will blossom into being a cool, breeze-swept roof garden where in the light of a summer moon and hedged in by a wealth of bloom, social Atlanta may dance away the evening hours.

Aside from its attractiveness, there will prevail in this restaurant de luxe, an illusive charm and a subtle quality that will stamp it as different. For ruling over it as presiding geniuses will be two of Atlanta's most vivid personalities, two whose recognition is little less than celebrated. To them it will amount to a labor of love for their lots are already cast within our most creditable literary circles.

Lending to the venture something of their social status and more of their innate ability, it only remains to succeed, for the fineness of their spirits is unmatched. And beloved as they are, they could not fail, these two—Mrs. Edward Van Winkle and Mrs. W. C. Jarnigan!

SOCIAL and army circles of Atlanta are greeting with much enthusiasm Post Commander General Herbert Owen Williams and Mrs. Williams, who are recent acquisitions to Atlanta's and Fort McPherson's social life. General Williams, commandant of the Eighth infantry brigade, and Mrs. Williams come to Atlanta following duty in Washington, where General Williams was in the inspector general's office.

"The General's Lady," who is much younger than her esteemed husband, is an enthusiastic horsewoman and a great lover of all sports, especially of tennis, at which game she is most adept. Extremely good-looking, chic and well groomed always, with beautiful brown eyes, and black hair parted in the middle and drawn down over her ears, she dresses in an individual style that sets off to great advantage her dark Spanish beauty and slender height.

Mrs. Williams will be a prominent figure and addition to the sport life at Fort McPherson holding sway throughout the summer months. The prospect of a swimming pool at the fort this summer is anticipated with much pleasure, and life there promises to be very gay during the warm season, since it is almost a positive fact that army circles will not be depleted by the exodus of the regiment to Fort McClellan from April to August as has been the case for so many years.

WE AMERICANS have observed so many weeks—Good English week, Rat Extermination week, Eat an Apple week—so many curious weeks—that one has formed the week (not weak) habit. We four have designated this week as "Shakespeare week." And so it is for Atlanta.

Robert Mantell and Genevieve Hamper, with their excellent company, including Miss Sarah Alexander, of Augusta, Ga., are giving Atlantans one entire week of Shakespearean repertoire. Their program is varied and includes the most favored plays. Everyone should be able to hear his "pet" during the week.

"Hamlet," most beloved by the greatest number of people, will be presented in modern dress. To quote our friends, the French, "It is to think." Traditionary silks and velvets that are the accepted garbing of Shakespearean characters! Hamlet in snappy dinner clothes! Ophelia a flapper! Mercy me! But thus is the immortality of Shakespeare's writing demonstrated. It is timeless. Present-day lighting and abbreviated costumes alter it not at all.

THE 1926-27 Debutante club is about to relinquish one of its fairest members, the first of the clan to surrender her single blessedness!

Very soon the social columns will be carrying the interesting news of her betrothal to one of the city's foremost young business and club men. And already, so we are told, elaborate preparations are under way for the wedding, which will be solemnized at an early date.

Famed no less for her beauty than for her charm of manners, she is of a striking brunette type, and has been one of the most admired members of the debutante set. The second daughter of one of Atlanta's most prominent families, she inherits a background of culture and a personal charm that has made her a recognized belle.

The fortunate gentleman, to whom we extend our congratulations, is well known in southern insurance circles, being associated in business with his father. As popular with the members of the younger set as is his lovely fiancee, he holds the good wishes of a host of friends who bespeak for him greater happiness than attended his former matrimonial venture.

NEARBY neighbors and churchgoers were startled last Sunday to find several blocks along fashionable Peachtree circle jammed with handsome motor cars. The occasion for such traffic could only mean either a funeral or a wedding. After investigation, the curious found that a dedication ceremony in the nature of a cornerstone laying was being held at the handsome new home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wardlaw, now under construction. Noted for their originality, this prominent Atlanta couple had invited their close friends to gather around the half-finished brick fireplace, which is a distinct feature of the new home. A manuscript bearing the signature of each guest was placed in an iron receptacle, which was buried deep into the back of the fireplace before the last bricks were cemented. Each name bespoke affectionate friendship and sincere wishes for lifelong happiness in the new home. In the sunset of the lives of this beloved couple beautiful memories will be recalled as the names of their yesteryear's friends are drawn from the earthen jar.

SOMEONE in a poisonous mood defined the Junior League as "an employment bureau for the idle rich." Even so—we must concede that Atlanta's "Employment Bureau" is extraordinarily enterprising and successful. Their activities are legion. All the world knows of their tea room and their special edition of The Constitution. The world does not know of the many kindly, generous things that "the agency" does. All of them unpress-agented, few of them to be discussed in terms of money.

MR. AND MRS. Fred McGonigal proved their charm as delightful hosts and showed their ingenuity for entertaining when they recently gave a beautiful dinner party at their lovely English home on Andrews drive that fittingly bespoke the hospitality of this popular couple.

Following dinner the guests assembled in the spacious dining room and found that they were to be amused by a private moving picture showing. Imagine the delight and pride of fond mothers and "doting daddies" when pictures of their very own children were flashed on the improvised screen.

For Mrs. McGonigal, in her original way, had secretly snapped moving photographs of her guests' children at various times while they were playing in the McGonigal gardens with little Anne McGonigal. So she took this occasion of displaying the reels, which visualized to their parents the play moods of these future belles and beaux of Atlanta society.

THERE'S always something fascinating about youth. Its lavish expenditure of energy and sheer exuberance of spirit is amazing to four who have reached the stage where they like to sit quietly and look and listen.

Which is by way of introduction to the statement that Oglethorpe university's student body includes two of the most interesting young women we could hope to meet. They are Helen and Olive Parrish, twins, whose personality is blended so perfectly that they seem rather to be one person than two.

Their mother is a Frenchwoman of charming bearing, and they come from New York, if they can call any spot on the globe home. They are so accustomed to globe-trotting and new scenery that they fit perfectly—mother and daughters—into any setting.

These young girls of 15 summers speak two languages fluently and have a working knowledge of three others. They're sophomores at Oglethorpe, selecting the Presbyterian college on Peachtree road because they'd "heard it was broad and interesting, and because they just wanted to come here."

The ease with which they devour learning is nothing short of amazing. They are "doing" college much as one would do a museum—in order to get everything improving out of it that it is possible to extract.

If they make a statement that's questioned, they promptly and effectively follow it up with logic so pure as to bear the trade mark of the modern university. They know art and they know books and sociology and economics and a variety of things the average young woman of today regards as utterly useless. In addition to their thirst for knowledge they possess the indefatiguable spirit of the modern college girl, and prove sought-after companions.

A PROMINENT Atlanta clubwoman, who is extremely modest about the honors heaped upon her, met with an unhappy incident during the state federation meeting in Albany last week, where she was in attendance.

Not that it ruffled her calm serenity and queenly dignity, for under all conditions, however trying, she retains her equipoise.

Appearing at one of the elaborate evening functions of the convention perfectly groomed and exquisitely costumed, some one admired her handsome gown. "Oh," she said, "I'm dreadfully disappointed. My husband forgot to pack my gold evening gown!"

Bessie Tilft College Alumnae Association To Take Place Apr. 15

A large attendance is expected at the Bessie Tift College Alumnae association, which will take place at the Hotel Dempsey Friday, April 15, at 1 o'clock. The gold room has been secured for the luncheon and will be appropriately decorated with the gold and blue, the college colors.

The program will be short and entertaining. Members of the college orchestra will furnish the music during the meal and conservatory students will give musical numbers.

The luncheon will be more of a social affair this year, giving the alumnae attending the Georgia Education association and opportunity to renew old friendships.

Dr. and Mrs. Aquila Chamlee will be honor guests of the occasion. Miss Emory Drake, of Griffin, president of the association, will attend the luncheon and give a short greeting. All Bessie Tift alumnae attending the Georgia Education association, who are former students of the college, are urged to attend.

Reservations can be made through Mrs. C. C. Botesweg, Macon, or secured at the Dempsey hotel desk.

Watts-Gaines Wedding Solemnized at Church.

The marriage of Miss Grace Lucille Watts and Claude Richard Gaines was solemnized Wednesday afternoon at 6:30 at the Ponce de Leon Baptist church in the presence of the family and a few close friends. The ring ceremony was impressively performed by Dr. Christie, pastor of the church.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Dewey White, of Tampa, Fla. She wore a gown of rose georgette with hat to match and carried an arm bouquet of Columbia roses.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a model of tan and brown crepe romaine with close fitting hat to match. She carried an arm bouquet of brides' roses showered with valley lilies.

Mr. J. D. Harris acted as best man.

Mrs. Gaines, the youngest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Watts, is a young woman of charming personality and is popular among a wide circle of friends.

Mr. Gaines, formerly of Adairsville, is prominently connected with the firm of Ernst & Ernst and is a young man of exceptional qualities.

After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Gaines will be at home with Dr. and Mrs. Watts.

Spring Vacations Bring Sub-Debs to Atlanta

The center of the social stage for the past week has been occupied by the group of lovely young schoolgirls who are at home for their spring vacations, and the bevy of attractive visitors who are their guests. Among the feted visitors is Miss Janet Riley, of Notre Dame, Ind., at the upper left, snapped with her hostess, Miss Helena Callaway, daughter of Mrs. Frank Callaway. The lovely central group includes (left to right) Misses Frances Barnett, Elizabeth Hall, of Athens; Josephine Sommers, of St. Louis, Mo., and Boyce Lokey, all of Sweet Briar college, Virginia. Miss Barnett is the charming sub-deb daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Barnett, and Miss Lokey is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hugh M. Lokey. They are entertaining Miss Hall and Miss Sommers as their guests during the spring holidays. At the upper right are Miss Catherine Seiberling, of Akron, Ohio, and Miss Nancy Carr, who are being delightfully entertained at Pine Hill as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell during the spring vacation days. Miss Seiberling and Miss Carr are students at Bryn Mawr college, Bryn Mawr, Pa.

Additional Opera Visitors And Plans Are Announced

With the advent of April, Atlanta society turns with a single thought to opera. Hundreds of parties, formal and informal, have already been announced for the week of April 25, when the Metropolitan Opera company leaves New York for a season of southern springtime, and other functions loom into view constantly as new visitors make reservations. Prominent among the visitors who are expected are Mrs. Leigh Palmer, of New York, and Mrs. Howard Tucker, of Washington, who will be the guests of Mrs. Ruth Hallman Hill, and who will be the inspiration of many courtesies during their Atlanta stay.

Scores of Atlantans who have taken seats for the season will use this opportunity for entertaining local friends and visitors at the opera. Among those who have made season reservations are Hugh Richardson, Walter T. Candler, J. H. Ottley, Ben S. Read, Mrs. S. M. Inman, J. H. Nunnally, Robert F. Maddox, W. E. Chapin, Joel Hunter, William Candler, Robert Alston, Victor Lamar Smith, C. V. Rainwater, W. W. Orr, J. J. Goodrum, Jr., and E. P. McBurney.

Others making season reservations include James K. Hines, L. K. Moss, St. Clair Jacobs, Louis Fox, Paul T. Arnold, W. D. Thompson, Mell R. Wilkinson, Walter Rich, Frank Neeley, Mrs. B. Z. Phillips, J. M. Harrison, J. B. McCrary, Mrs. F. M. Robinson, Bolling H. Jones, John A. Brice, T. K. Glenn, H. P. Nelson, Dr. W. S. Elkin, George R. Allison, Dr. DeLos Hill, Hal Hentz, C. A. Rauschenberg, Jr., W. O. Foote, George Winship, Willis A. Sutton, Henry B. Tompkins, S. F. Boykin and B. F. Joel.

Among other prominent Atlantans listed for the season are W. D. Hoffman, Herbert J. Haas, M. B. Bell, W. A. Aichel, H. R. Eichberg, J. C. Beam, John Paschall and H. Y. McCord.

The official social program for the week as announced by H. M. Atkinson, president of the Music Festival association, will include a supper-dance at the Capital City club Monday evening at 11 o'clock at which the directors, officials and artists of the Metropolitan and directors of the Music Festival association will be honor guests.

A second supper-dance will be given at the Capital City club Friday evening at the same hour honoring the board of governors of the club and the Metropolitan visitors. The annual barbecue for the stars, which has been given every season for 16 years, will take place at noon at the Druid Hills Golf club on Wednesday.

The social peak of the season will be reached Thursday evening, when the Atlanta Biltmore will entertain with a magnificent fete and water pageant, "A Night in Venice." The entire hotel, including ballroom, dining room and gardens, will be lavishly decorated. A lagoon will be constructed in the gardens with picturesque bridges and gondolas. Here the Metropolitan ballet will dance. A buffet supper will be served in the main dining room, where the Metropolitan orchestra will be installed and the "bal masque" will take place in the Georgian ballroom.

Miss Augusta Porter Honors Lovely Visitor.

Miss Augusta Porter, who returns to Sweet Briar college Monday after spending the spring holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Russell Porter, at their home on the Prado, was hostess at a small buffet luncheon Saturday at 1 o'clock at the home of her mother as a compliment to Miss Frances Barnett, and her guest, Miss Josephine Sommer.

The home was artistically decorated with a profusion of spring flowers. A color motif of pink and lavender was carried out. Miss Porter was assisted in entertaining by her mother, and also by her sister, Miss Patty Porter. A small group of close friends enjoyed Miss Porter's hospitality.

Covers were placed for a group of the younger set.

Miss Catherine Seiberling, of Akron, Ohio, the guest of Miss Nacy Carr, and Charles Northen, who is now making his home in New York, were honor guests at Mrs. Stacy E. Dell's table. The other guests were Miss Nacy Carr, Miss Rebecca Ashcraft, Richard W. Courts, Jr., Dan Conklin and Connie Seiberling, of Akron.

Mrs. Barfield To Be Hostess at Bridge.

Mrs. Forrest M. Barfield will be hostess at a bridge-tea Wednesday at her home, 25 Peachtree Battle avenue, for Mrs. George Eubanks, Jr., of Rochester, Minn., who is the guest of her parents.

Mrs. Barfield will be assisted in entertaining by her mother and sister, Mrs. Samuel Clifton Orr, and Mrs. Lee McNaughton.

Thirty-two guests have been invited.

Miss Speer To Be Sponsor At Veterans' Reunion.

Miss Marion Speer, daughter of Hon. H. M. Speer, 450 North Highland avenue, leaves Monday for Tampa to attend the United Confederate Veterans' reunion. She will be one of the charming sponsors for the North Georgia brigade of veterans and has the additional honor of appointment by General Vance, commander in chief, as a Georgia representative upon his official staff. Miss Speer has many friends among the veterans, the matrons and sponsors, and will be one of their most popular participants.

Miss Hammond To Wed George Owen Sheffield

Of interest to a wide circle of friends and relatives in Georgia and Mississippi is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Fay Richardson Hammond of Kosciusko, Miss., to George Owen Sheffield, of Atlanta.

Miss Hammond is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hammond, of Kosciusko, Miss. She possesses beauty of the lovely blonde type and a charming personality which has made her a favorite in the social circles of her city. She attended school at Randolph-Macon, later graduating from the University of Alabama, and continued her studies at Columbia university. She was very popular in all school activities and is a member of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

Mr. Sheffield is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Sheffield, Sr., of Atlanta, and the brother of Miss Evelyn Sheffield, Miss Nellie Sheffield and I. M. Sheffield, Jr.

He received his education at the University of Alabama, where he was a member of the Chi Phi fraternity. Mr. Sheffield is very popular in both the business and social circles here, associated in the insurance business with his father. He is a member of the Capital City club.

The marriage of this popular young couple will take place April 16 in Kosciusko, Miss., at the First Presbyterian church.

New York Visitor Is Complimented.

Miss Sylvia Kress, of New York, who is the feted guest of her aunt, Mrs. Lon Leary, on the North Decatur road, was honoree at a beautiful seated luncheon Saturday at the Athletic club, given by Miss Elizabeth Branch.

Pastel shaded blossoms were used in decorating the attractively appointed table.

Miss Branch was assisted in entertaining by her sister Miss Evelyn Branch.

Covers were placed for Miss Kress, Miss Elizabeth Branch, Miss Evelyn Branch, Miss Harriett Wynne, Miss Gates Eckford, Miss Nancy Frederick, Miss Dorothy Collier, Miss Margaret Brawner, Miss Virginia Cooledge, Miss Sarah Sharp, Miss Ida Nevin, Miss Elizabeth Everette, Miss Bernidette Clark, Miss Betty Gilmore, Miss Helen Bivings and Miss Jane Sharp.

Mrs. Nina H. Grant Weds Mr. Bigelow, of Boston

Much cordial interest accompanies the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. Linton C. Hopkins of the marriage of their daughter, Mrs. Nina Hopkins Grant, to Prescott Bigelow, of Boston, which took place Saturday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins on Seventh street.

Only the members of the immediate family were present at hte ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Bigelow left for a motor trip, and will arrive in Boston about May 1, where they will make their home.

Mrs. Bigelow, who is one of society's most admired members, is known no less for her piquant beauty than for her great personal charm. In addition to her aristocratic bearing, inherited from a long line of distinguished ancestors, the cultural advantages of social prestige and extensive travel have rendered her a recognized elle. Her entree into society has been universal and it is with sincere regret that Atlanta society relinquishes her lovely presence.

Mr. Bigelow, a representative of one of Boston's most prominent Back Bay families, is an outstanding figure in the financial and social life of the city. Business connections have brought him many times during the past year to Atlanta, where he is no less esteemed than in his home city.

Mrs. Bigelow will be one of the most notable additions of recent years to exclusive society of Boston.

LaGrange Alumnae Honors Seniors.

The LaGrange College Alumnae association of Atlanta entertained the High school senior girls of Atlanta and Decatur at a tea Friday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. Warren A. Candler, on North Decatur road.

P.-T. A. Urges Observance Of 'Be Kind To Animals Week'

Mrs. Katherine Weathersbee, humane education chairman for the Fifth District P.-T. A., issues the following article apropos of the observance of national humane Sunday:

"April 3 is national humane Sunday. April 4-9 is celebrated throughout the land as 'be kind to animals week.' England has had its annual 'mercy Sunday' for half a century, but the idea of having an entire secular week set aside and officially proclaimed as a time set for reviving the gospel of kindness in our hearts' giving thought to our duties toward the subhuman races, originated in the mind of a southern gentleman of Charleston, S. C. This suggestion met with the approval of the American Humane association and was heartly indorsed by Presidents Wilson, Harding and Coolidge. The National Congress of Parents and Teachers saw the object of this phase of humane education would be as great a benefit to mankind as to the animal and heartily indorsed this as one of the plans to teach the child that no living creature is here from choice; all come from the hand of God, and that we and the beast are kin. Man has nothing that the animals have not at least a vestige of; the animals have nothing that man do not share. Since animals are creatures with wants and feelings different in degree only from our own, they surely have their rights. Many celebrations of the week will be carried out in great variety over the state, as public schools are putting on humane programs, editorials ando news stories explaining the plan and significance of the observance, ministers speaking on the subject from the pulpit, and mayors issuing proclamation and moving picture houses running trailers to tell the story."

Mayor's Proclamation.

The following proclamation is issued by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale urging the observance of "be kind to animals" week:

"Whereas, the week of April 4-9 will be observed as national 'be kind to animals' week; and, whereas, the objects of thoughtfulness and humanity back of the week should commend themselves to every person; and, whereas, humane societies, public schools, civic organizations, the pulpit and other agencies of humanitarian spirit will assist by impressing in their respective ways the lessons of mercy to the helpless; and, whereas, these lessons can accomplish great good toward the prevention of hardships and needless cruelty to animals, both domestic and wild creatures; therefore, I, I. N. Ragsdale, mayor of the city of Atlanta, do proclaim the week of April 4-9 as 'be kind to animals' week in Atlanta, and hope that its observance will stimulate the kindly feeling of those who love animals and aid others to cultivate a kindlier regard for the helpless. The Atlanta Humane society is to be complimented for the useful work which it has done in Atlanta and Fulton county."

Bass High P.-T. A. To Hold Daddies' Meet.

The Bass Junior High P.-T. A. will hold the daddies' meeting April 6 at 7:30 o'clock in the Moreland school auditorium. A splendid program has been arranged by the principal, Professor J. H. Smith, and the teachers and students have been working on these plans for two weeks. The music will be furnished by the Bass orchestra, Mandolin club and band, and the physical training will be demonstrated by Miss Clapp and pupils. Students from each department will outline the outstanding features of their particular department.

After the program the audience will be conducted to the first floor of the Bass Junior High building, just across the street, where exhibits will be displayed showing the achievements of the various clubs, the various types of work done in the manual arts department, the excellence of the work accomplished by the girls in the household arts department, the type of work turned out in the department of applied arts, such as decorating and designing.

Joe Brown Junior High P.-T. A. Reports Meeting.

The P.-T. A. of Joe Brown Junior High held one of its most enthusiastic meetings of the year Monday evening. Mrs. J. H. Savage, president, presided.

Reports from all chairmen showed active work going on through all branches of the organization.

Much stress was laid on the coming baseball games by Mrs. Fred Stewart, athletic chairman.

A tinfoil campaign through the school for the Junior Red Cross has been very successful.

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, principal speaker, made a most interesting talk on "Christian Citizenship."

Miss Bertha Banks gave a humorous reading on the "Seven Stages of Man."

Professor Martin called attention to 13 new pictures, all copies of famous paintings, bought by the school and placed in the different rooms of the building.

The April meeting will be open house to all parents and visitors. The pupils will furnish an interesting program.

Grant Park P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The March meeting of the Grant Park P.-T. A. was presided over by Mrs. W. C. Byers, who introduced Mrs. Charles Foster as the principal speaker.

Several pupils from high 6-1, Mrs. Jesse Hall's class, gave a musical program. Miss Alleyne Spiller gave a piano solo, a chorus from the grade song, "Over the Summer Sea," and "Dixie," while Miss Geraldine Robertson, Jewel Lawson, Mary Love Heisler and Mary Hazel Scott rendered a ukelele quartet, "Mary Lou."

Good reports were heard from the various committees. A paper sale was planned, and Mrs. Sam Deavours announced a benefit party to be held at the home of Mrs. R. C. Goff, the proceeds to go to the P.-T. A. It was moved and seconded that the association send a delegate to the state meeting at Macon in April, the delegate to be named by Mrs. Byers.

Miss Doris Gaston's class, low second, won the prize for having the most mothers present. Miss Arlevia Burson won the "on time" prize.

2nd City-Wide Y. W. A. Rally Is Held.

The second city-wide Y. W. A. rally was held Tuesday evening, March 29, at 6:30 o'clock, at the Third Baptist church, jointly with the Atlanta Association of W. M. U.'s. W. A. Bass P.-T. A. Recreation Chairman Outlines Program

Mrs. J. C. Miller, recreation chairman of the William A. Bass P.-T.A., outlines in the following article the recreational program adopted at the Bass Junior High school:

"This year has seen the already generous recreation program at Bass Junior High school reach out and expand by leaps and bounds.

"First, under the able direction of the Parent-Teacher association's chairman of grounds, our athletic field has been doubled in usable space, giving us one of the largest fields in the city, and when finished we stand ready to see that it is the most modern and fully equipped athletic field to be found anywhere. The arrangemen, to accommodate outdoor basketball, baseball, football, track and drill teams, as well as the degree of military training given in junior Ligh schools. We are justly proud of the fact that a father consented to act as chairman of athletics for the Bass P.-T. A.

"Second, Clapp gymnasium has been remodeled and equipped with the most approved basketball requirements for girls and also accommodates classes in physical culture, aesthetic and folk dancing. These improvements have been brought about by the tireless effort and foresight of our beloved principal, Mr. Smith, in cooperation with the various Parent-Teacher association chairmen and supported financially by the the association.

"We have organized and have functioning at Bass more than 60 clubs of recreational nature. Various language, music and dramatic clubs, household, manual and applied arts, curio, coin, stamp and civic clubs, as well as a full quota of Junior Red Cross, Boy and Girl Scout troops, Girl Reserve and Campfire groups, who sponsor and promote their many activities under personal direction of teachers with tendencies toward building helpful and useful citizens of our children.

"Mr. Smith and his staff of teachers again with the cooperation of the P.-T. A. chairman of recreation, has been at great pains to arrange demonstrations and exhibits of many of these clubs for our April 6 P.-T. A. meeting, at which time Clapp gymnasium will be officially dedicated and parents allowed to inspect the new art gallery.

"There is a field day event planned for early May and by the end of that month we shall feel that we have put in a very active recreational year and be in excellent shape to look forward to the next year with great anticipation."

First Presbyterian P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

"Substituting public opinion instead of parental authority often solves the problems of parents with girls at a particular teen-age," was the message Mrs. Harvy L. Parry gave the mothers of the P.-T. A. of the First Presbyterian Sunday school Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Parry's wide association with the teen-age girl makes it possible for her to realize the important discipline at this age. She urged the mothers to have their girls indulge in such worthy social activities as Girl Scouts, Girl Reserves, Camp Fires and the summer camp. The summer camp being stressed as a spiritual developer as well as physical developer.

Mrs. Poteet announced the state parent-teacher convention is to be held in Macon April 12-14, at which time this association will be represented by two delegates.

The nominating committee was appointed for the new officers for the next year, Mrs. Philip Wiltaer, chairman; Mrs. W. W. Anderson and Mrs. J. L. Rankin forming this committee.

Health Playlet Is of Interest.

Mrs. Elton Chapman, of Atlanta, has written a playlet, entitled "Soldiers All," which has been given with much success by several associations. This play may be given in costume or pantomime, in 15 minutes. Other P. T. As. desiring to use this playlet may have same by writing to Mrs. M. F. LaHatte, 5 Delmont drive, Atlanta. This would be a good plan for making money for the party at the end of school.

West End Club Board To Meet.

One of the most successful and attractive benefit bridge parties yet held at the West End Woman's club was that sponsored by Mrs. Chester W. Johnson, president, on the occasion of her birthday, Friday, April 1, for the benefit of the general fund of the club.

The club rooms were attractively decorated, and 300 ladies were assembled. The club members presented Mrs. Chester Johnson with a basket of roses, as a birthday remembrance. The presentation was made by Mrs. Benjamin F. Starr.

The regular executive board meeting of the West End Woman's club will be held Wednesday afternoon, April 6, at 2 o'clock, at the clubhouse, 1100 Cascade avenue, Mrs. George Grant, presiding. Following the board meeting, an attractive "kiddie" program will be presented by the child welfare committee, Mrs. J. S. Nunnally, chairman.

The West End Woman's club, through Mrs. Chester W. Johnson, president, extends a most cordial invitation to the women of West End to become members of the club, and share in the work and pleasures of the club. Application may be made through any member of the membership committee; Miss Elizabeth Young, chairman; Mrs. J. H. Legien and Mrs. Chester W. Johnson.

Elson Art Exhibit In Waynesboro.

Waynesboro, Ga., April 2.—The Waynesboro P.-T. A. brought to the city the Elson art exhibit and the pictures have been on display the past week in the new school building. All the grade children were given the opportunity of seeing the pictures and having them explained to them by the teachers. A large number of interested people visited the building during the exhibit.

Waycross P.-T. A. Is Honored.

Waycross, Ga., April 2.—Mrs. A. M. Knight, of Waycross, has been appointed a member of the credentials committee for the fourteenth annual convention of the P.-T. A., which is to convene in Macon, April 12.

Press Breakfast To Feature State P.-T. A. Convention

The third annual press breakfast of the Georgia convention of Parents and Teachers will be held Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock at the Hotel Lanier, Macon, Ga., during the state convention. Presidents of associations are requested to make reservations at once for their press chairmen and for any other members who wish to attend. Write to Mrs. J. Newton Barnes, Boulevard avenue, North Highlands, Macon, Ga. The covers will be 75 cents and any person, press chairman or not, has the privilege of attending. Reservations will be closed Tuesday evening, April 12, after the evening session.

Every member of the P.-T. A. throughout the state is required to communicate with Mrs. Charles A. Hilburn, Macon, Ga., by card, stating when she joined, the name of the organization and whether high school, grammar school, church, or pre-school P.-T. A. She also requests that all women who attended the first convention of the P.-T. A. communicate with her at once. This information is wanted in connection with the pioneer breakfast to be given at the state convention.

Miss Ballard Presents Pupils in Recital.

Miss Kathleen Ballard, of Forest Park, presented the following pupils in a piano recital Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. C. Dameron, of Hapeville: Misses Virada Culver, Thelma Daniel, Evelyn Daniel, Gladys Dameron, Vivian Dameron, Gladys Porter, Mellie Weitherspoon, Glenice Weitherspoon, June Summers, Vardis Summers, Dorothy Boss, Eddye Lowe Ballard, Annie Walker, James Reeves, assisted by Virginia Dameron whose reading added to the attractiveness of the program.

The program was of unusal interest. Stories were used as an outline and idea of their respective compositions, and they also used songs as a means of giving uniformity to the work.

A large number of patrons and friends were present.

Ella Smillie School Program.

A delightful program was enjoyed by the members of the Ella W. Smillie school, Friday, April 1, when Miss Lowe's second grade pupils played "The Raggedy Man," and Mrs. John W. Lloyd, president of the better films committee, gave an interesting talk. Miss Hollingsworth's and Miss Dugas' rooms won the prizes for the most mothers present.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. R. W. Underwood, of Peeples school.

A May day festival and a candy sale will be held in the near future.

"China for The Chinese."

All Christendom is interested in the anti-Christian movement in China today. Deep concern is felt by all evangelical denominations about the safety of their sacrificing devoted missionaries, laboring now on the great missionary fields of the world.

For information concerning conditions in China we depend largely upon what our trusted missionaries tell us. Mrs. W. W. Adams, missionary living in Darien, Manchuria, writes in the magazine "Home and Foreign Fields," "The New Movements in China Are Many and Varied." After Mrs. Adams enumerates at least ten of these movements, she sums up all of them under one big head, "Nationalism, or China for the Chinese." She tells of the nation-wide agitation against Christianity as demonstrated by the recent observance of "Anti-Christian Week." Most of the leaders of this movement, she says, have at some time been students in Christian schools, and they declare the Christian religion is opposed to growth, progress, harmony and self-reliance. Mrs. Adams further says: "One reason for the position which China takes in this disorder is because she feels she has not been treated fairly by other nations. Great Britain introduced the traffic in opium in China, thereby helping to weaken the nation; our own America is a party to the slogan, 'A cigarette in the mouth of every Chinaman.' In this, the British and American Tobacco company have succeeded all too well. Other countries, not our America, I am glad to say, have taken slices of China to hold and govern for their own. Do not be harsh in your judgment of the youth of China. They are only trying to do their part in righting some of the wrongs. I do not say they are right in the course they pursue, but we shall hope their agitation will help to do away with some of the things that are wrong."

China has suffered much at the hands of other nations, and they are now in open revolt. Sad it is that after more than 100 years of the modern missionary movement in China on the part of so-called Christian nations, the Chinese still have reason to doubt the truth and efficacy of our religion. It is time for grave reflection, when a prominent newspaper editor of the Orient makes bold to say: "The greatest of all tragedies is the paradox found in the Christian religion of today."

STATE EDITOR.

Young People's Program At Meeting of W. M. U. Association.

Following the all day associational meeting of the Atlanta Baptist W. M. U. at the Third Baptist church on Tuesday, March 29, the junior organizations held their meeting that evening, with Mrs. C. H. Terry, the Y. W. A. leader presiding. The devotional and music were given by members of the Y. W. A. The Sunbeams of the third church gave a demonstration of a Sunbeam band in session, stressing sacrificial giving.

The Oakhurst Royal Ambassadors gave their R. A. yell, motto and song. Then, with one boy, bound hand and foot (representing our home mission board, bound by debt) the other boys, one by one, presented the needs of mountain schools, Indians, foreigners, and other departments of home mission work, the home board unable to give help.

A play, "Aunt Tillie's Tithing Band," by the East Point G. A. was an answer to all arguments against "tithing."

An inspirational address by Rev Carter Helm Jones closed the program.

Cascade Methodist Plans for Week.

Sunday, April 3, ushers in an interesting week at the new Methodist church on Cascade avenue. This congregation has built and paid a good sum on their new church, and now they are having a full week of services sponsored by the different departments. Monday is laymen's night Tuesday is Epworth league night Wednesday is Woman's Missionary society night. Thursday is grand rally night, and Friday is Sunday school night.

At all these meetings there will be special speakers, among whom are Rev. Marvin Williams, Deaconess Bessie Allen, Dr. W. G. Henry, of Emory university; Dr. H. W. Howard, also of Emory, and Judge Humphries. Special music and other good things assure all visitors a pleasant and profitable time spent with the Cascade Methodists.

Martha Brown Memorial Notes of Interest.

The Young People's society, under Mrs. Leo Sudderth will have charge of an "April Fool" party at the home of Mrs. J. S. McWilliams on Saturday night, April 2.

The adult Wesley class will give an "April Fool" party at the home of the teacher, Mrs. L. V. Kennerly, 765 Woodlawn avenue, on Friday night, April 1, after a short business session has been held. A special guest will be Ray McDaniel, of Belgrade, Jugo-Slavia, who is the guest of his parents, Rev. and Mrs. Charles B. McDaniel, on Clifton road.

Revival services lasting two weeks will begin on Sunday, April 3. The pastor will be assisted by Dr. Wallace Rogers, of Trinity.

Circles 4 and 5 sponsored a play, "The Whole Town's Talking," presented by the Fulton High Alumni association at the John B. Gordon school auditorium. The play was fine and a large and appreciative audience made it a financial success.

Oakhurst Baptist W. M. U. Meets.

The season of prayer for home missions was observed by the Baptist W. M. U. of the Oakhurst Baptist church by an all-day meeting on Wednesday, March 23, at the church, Mrs. W. M. Carswell, vice president, presiding. The morning devotional was led by Mrs. Cates, the pastor, Rev. F. W. Rollins, leading the prayer.

All objects fostered by the home mission board were discussed and prayers offered for each, that southern Baptist might be able to more effectively carry on the work.

The following took part on the program, and by their earnest words, prayers and songs added to the interest of the meeting: Mrs. T. H. Wingfield, Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. R. H. Enzor, Mrs. Welsh, Mrs. R. J. Scott, Mrs. Davies, Miss Mary McDonald, Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Paul Simmons, Mrs. Cook, Mrs. Ragsdale and Mrs. Daniels.

The pastor, Rev. F. W. Rollins, gave a splendid address on "He Hath Not Dealt So With Any Nation."

The Junior G. A., the Intermediate G. A. and the Sunbeam band took part on the program.

Epworth Methodist Bible Class Meets.

Mrs. R. K. Suber entertained the woman's Bible class at her home, 492 Clifton road. Plans were discussed and brief talks were made on how to bring up the membership and finances. Those present were Mesdames Whitaker, Shepard, Suber, Fox, Hannan, Noble, Brogden, Mitchell, Thomas, Brumby, Brooks, Ball, Thompson and Miss Suber.

Hartwell Baptist W. M. U. Study Class.

An all-day mission study was held at the home of Mrs. W. A. Duncan, of the Hartwell Baptist Missionary society, March 18, under the direction of Miss Berta Brown, mission study chairman.

The book studied was "Decade of B. W. M. U. Service" and the leader was Mrs. G. C. Hays, assisted by Mrs. J. H. Skelton, Sr., Mrs. H. I. Alford, Mrs. T. L. Matheson, Mrs. J. H. Skelton, Jr., and Mrs. G. P. Short. A test was taken at the conclusion of each chapter, so at the end of the study, all examination papers were finished. There were eighteen women present for the day, and each contributed to a bountiful lunch which was served by a committee previously appointed.

This meeting proved a very interesting and helpful one, and it is believed by all present that the information received from the study of the book will be of lasting benefit.

Kirkwood Methodist Society Meets.

The local department of the Missionary society of the Kirkwood Methodist church met at the church Monday afternoon. The first half hour was devoted to prayer for the coming revival and led by Mrs. S. E. Wasson who read a part of chapter III, Luke, as the lesson.

The president, Mrs. O. A. Spruell presided over the business session which was given several splendid reports from committees and circle leaders. Mrs. Ben Paul, of circle No. 1; Mrs. W. E. Hope, circle No. 2; Mrs. T. M. Smith, circle No. 3; Mrs. D. L. Cline, circle No. 4; Mrs. L. G. Dewberry, circle No. 5. The "Missionary Voice" has a wide circulation among the members. Circle No. 1 entertained with a program and dainty refreshments.

Briefly Told

The missionary program, which will be given at the Woman's Council of the First Christian church Wednesday, April 6, at 3 p. m., will be in charge of the young matron's circle. They will present an attractive play in costume.

The Woman's Missionary Society of First Methodist church, will meet on Monday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, at the church.

The city mission board will meet on Tuesday morning at 1 o'clock at Wesley Community House, 306 Whitehall street.

The countless friends of Mrs. E. L. Connally are delighted to see her resuming her church and social activities since Dr. Connally is happily convalescent.

The North Atlanta district meeting which was to have been held April 28-29, has been changed to April 27-28, at Wesley Memorial church, at 10 o'clock. Note change of date and elect delegates at once.

Miss Annie Campbell, who went as a missionary to China from Woodlawn church, Augusta has been appointed secretary and treasurer of the woman's work M. E. church South, China mission. Miss Campbell has many friends here who rejoice in her success in the mission field.

The executive board of the North Georgia conference has been in executive session for two days at the Ansley hotel. Plans for the work were made, outstanding among these being a school for missions to be held at Emory, September 19-23. Many branches along the line of missions and cultural study work have been planned. Several of the faculty of Emory university and other eminent educators will be instructors in this school. Definite information will soon be ready to present.

The date of the LaGrange district meeting has been changed to June 16-17. Please note change.

Among the interesting plans for the young people of north Georgia is the camp at Highland where their conference session can combine work as well as play. Mrs. L. M. Awtrey, superintendent of the young people has the plans under her supervision.

Park Street church begins its revival Sunday, April 3. Rev. Marvin Franklin, the pastor will conduct the meeting, assisted by the Eden-Spinks Evangelistic party, well known musicians who have assisted in several successful revivals in the city.

Among the visitors who sat in conference Tuesday and Wednesday at the Ansley hotel were Mrs. Beauchamp, wife of the bishop; Miss Daisy Davies and Mrs. H. H. Harris.

Mrs. Virlyn Moore as the head of the social service department made the statement that Georgia was at the bottom in all health statistics, and her work plans to remedy this through legislation. Dr. Abercrombie, chairman of the board of health of Georgia, is framing a health bill to be brought before the legislature and all organized women are asked to interest their organizations in helping to secure its passage.

Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary-treasurer of Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia, was in Athens, on March 25, representing the union when "Denominational Week" was observed at the Prince Avenue Baptist church under the leadership of the new pastor, Dr. T. W. Tibbett, late, of Vienna, Ga.

Mrs. Harry Ethridge, who has been teaching the "How and Why of Foreign Missions" to the Baptist advanced study class, will conduct the last lesson of this text book at 10 o'clock, Thursday morning, April 7, at Rich' conference room.

The trustees of the Mary P. Willingham Industrial School for girls will meet in annual session at the school, Blue Ridge, Ga., Tuesday, April 12. Mrs. W. J. Neel, president of Georgia Baptist W. M. U. and also of the board of trustees will preside at the meeting.

Mrs. L. A. Witherspoon, auditor of executive board of Federated Church Women, and also a member of the executive board of the Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia, is recuperating after a slight operation at a local hospital.

Mrs. John S. Spalding and Mrs. Samuel Lumpkin, member of Second Baptist church of Atlanta, have been elected members of the board of managers of Spelman university. Mrs. Spalding and Mrs. Lumpkin are the first southern women to be elected to this position.

Mrs. Sims Bray Heads All Saints Episcopal Church P.-T. A.

Mrs. Sims Bray, president of All Saints church Parent-Teacher association. This association, which originated with Miss Rosa Woodberry, was the first parent-teacher association to be formed in any church here or abroad. Mrs. Robert M. Crumley was the first president of this organization.

In an address to the Parent-Teacher Association of All Saints Episcopal church, the Rev. N. R. High Moor, of St. Luke's church made an earnest appeal that his hearers put God first in their own lives if they would be an influence in the lives of children.

"Our religion and education," said Mr. Moor, speaking as a parent, "is not a thing for us to go through perfunctorily, but such must become the vital center of our being if we would realize the presence of God in our lives. It is the duty of parents," he said, "to build the home solidly on a foundation of faith. Like the altar fire prescribed in the old Levitical law, fire on the home altar should be kept ceaselessly burning. But before there is a home altar, however, there must be an altar in the individual heart, for a sense of God," urged Mr. Moor, "is the greatest need of today."

In Memory of Mrs. C. A. Mauck

Whereas, in the wisdom of our Heavenly Father, a vacant chair was left by Mrs. C. A. Mauck, and

Whereas, on the evening of February 21, 1927, the esteemed family of Mrs. Wallace Rogers and the others were bereaved by the loss of her beloved mother, a woman of exceptional charm, talents and lovableness, and

Whereas, we, the close friends and classmates of our dear sister Mauck, keenly appreciate the sorrow occasioned by her passing:

Therefore Be It Resolved, that the Susannah Wesley class, of Druid Hills Methodist church, do express its silent word of tenderest sympathy to the stricken family.

We can only say to them that their loss is in part our loss, for she was a woman singularly helpful in all activities pertaining to our class, particularly in her beautiful writings for our class paper, the Spotlight.

We can only reach out the steadying hand of friendship and sisterly love in an adequate expression of sympathy and understanding prayerfully.

Be It Further Resolved, that a copy of these words be sent to Mrs. Wallace Rogers as a slight testimonial of our regard and sincerity.

News of Pattillo Memorial Church.

Interesting activities at Pattillo Memorial Methodist church from March 24 to 26 included a meeting of the Woman's Missionary society at the church Thursday, March 24. Mrs. L. B. Sullivan, chairman of Circle No. 2, presided over the meeting. The subject for the day was "The Womanhood of the World." The problem of the underprivileged, the illiterate, the ill-favored womanhood was approached with a keenness of perception. The pastor, Rev. W. M. Twiggs, was present and talked on the need of a revival and a short pep talk on the selling of bonds.

Thursday there was the choir rehearsal at the home of Mrs. L. D. Jolly, with practice of the Easter music; a party given by the Wesley class for the young married contingent, who gathered to promote the various interests of the class. The young people's department, under direction of Mrs. W. O. Slate and W. E. Scott, met at the church.

The intermediates staged an orchestra rehearsal at the church early Thursday evening.

The basketball team of Pattillo Memorial won over First Methodist church of Decatur, 65 to 9.

Friday night the Business Women's league met under the direction of Mrs. Delma Stanley.

A drive for bonds was also carried out this week.

Hapeville Methodist Business Women Meet.

The Business Woman's circle of the Hapeville Methodist church met Friday evening, March 11, at the church. Dinner was served by Mrs. Eva Schenck, Mrs. Van Natta and Mrs. E. D. Hale, members of Circle No. 1.

Devotions were led by Miss Gene Holt, and the program led by Miss Eva Hill.

In Memory of Mrs. A. L. Waldo

Whereas in the wisdom of an Almighty Providence from our mortal circles has been moved Mrs. A. L. Waldo; and

Whereas, on the evening of February 21, 1927, the beloved family and relatives of Sister Waldo were thus bereaved by her passing, and

Whereas, we, the close friends and classmates of our dear Mrs. Waldo do feel keenly her loss and deeply appreciate the sorrow felt by her absence.

Therefore, be it

Resolved, that the Susannah Wesley class of Druid Hills Methodist church do express its loving sympathy to the bereaved family whose sorrow is jointly ours, for we were truly the child of her brain and heart.

We can only mingle our tears with theirs, all the while holding hands in sisterly love and affection, praying for the faith and hope that she had so bountifully.

Be It Further Resolved, that a copy of these words be sent the family as a slight testimonial of our regard and sincerity.

Peachtree Christian Church News.

The Peachtree Christian Church (Disciples) has, every second Monday of the month, what is known as the "teachers and workers' meeting." Supper is prepared and served by one of the classes of the church school. At a recent meeting, it was decided that at every supper meeting hereafter every Christian church in the city and vicinity would be asked, one by one, to become special guests and at these meetings reports will be given and ideas and suggestions advanced that will strengthen and help every person present.

On March 14 over 125 people assembled at the Peachtree church, at least 25 or more of these being from the West End Christian church, on Dunn and Gordon streets, headed by their new pastor, Rev. Gerald Culberson, who has just begun a period of service at the West End church. He lived in West End as a boy. Already new life and fire has begun to creep into the church. Mr. Culberson knows the way to build up a church and augment its strength. He spoke to the crowd assembled at the Peachtree church on the importance of the Sunday school and its influence over the life of the children who compose it, and that all through life the influence of the teachers and their precepts and example live forever in the memory of the children whom they taught and that many very great men have stated that they owed their ultimate success in life to the things they learned at the feet of the Gamaliels who taught them.

Peachtree Road Methodist Executive Board Meets.

The executive board of the Peachtree Road Methodist Missionary society held their first quarterly business meeting Monday afternoon at the parsonage. The treasurer and circle chairmen gave very promising reports of their finances for the quarter. Mrs. R. E. Andoe, the president, gave a most helpful talk on "Being Missionary In Our Own Church and Neighborhood."

A Simple Application That Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those ugly blackheads. Get a little Calonite powder from any drug store, sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth, rub over the blackheads, and in two minutes every blackhead will be dissolved away entirely.—(adv.)

Baptist W.M.U. Has Annual Meet At Third Baptist

The annual meeting of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Atlanta association was held at Third church, Luckie street, near North avenue. The opening session was Tuesday, March 29, at 10 o'clock in the morning. Mrs. T. J. Bowles, president of the W. M. S., welcomed the visitors and delegates. All business, reports and speeches were included in one day's program, instead of two as formerly. The reports were confined to one quarter of the year, in order that hereafter each fiscal year might coincide with the calendar year; and there was no election of officers, but announcement was made that officers elected in October, 1926, have been requested to serve 15 months instead of 12. Sixteen full graded unions were reported in the organization. Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, superintendent and the assistant superintendent, Mrs John T. Thompson, in cooperation with a special committee planned a program of educational interest. Discussion of the 10 points in the standard of excellence was given prominence on the program. Mrs. Jones also spoke on standard.

Mrs. Thompson spoken on "How Where, and When" societies should send in their quarterly and annual reports.

All officers, chairmen and eight district secretaries made encouraging reports. A group of ladies from Gordon Street church, gave a demonstration on "personal service."

Louie Newton, editor of the Christian Index, made a inspirational address, charging this great body of women to be fully alive and alert to the missionary obligations, both home and foreign, resting upon Southern Baptists at this critical time in their history.

On account of the resignation of two officers, Mrs. Jones announced that Mrs. L. A. Witherspoon had been elected secretary of the second district, and Mrs. Ned Pendergrass, superintendent of Royal Ambassadors.

Much appreciation was expressed for the hostess church and for the entire fourth district under the splendid leadership of Mrs. J. W. Smith, district secretary, for the abundant luncheon served at the noon day hour. Over 700 were present, including delegates, visitors and a number of pastors of churches represented.

Second Baptist Women's Activities Are of Interest

The Business Women's League of the Second Baptist church will meet this afternoon in the Sunday school auditorium at 3:30, circle F in charge. Miss Mary Ella Yancey is chairman of this circle, and Miss Pearl Moore, cochairman. Colonel Stiles Hopkins, an eloquent lawyer and an outstanding Bible scholar, will be the speaker for the afternoon. Mrs. Frederic J. Paxon, president of the league, is expected to return from Miami next week. Every member is urged to be present at this meeting, and the public is cordially invited.

The executive board of women was entertained Thursday by Mrs. A. C. Evins and Mrs. Frank Mitchell, in the home of Mrs. Evins. After the reading of reports and an important business session, refreshments were served by these charming hostesses and a delightful social hour enjoyed by all present.

The Women's Missionary and Benevolent society will meet in the church a 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. Mrs. Hal Hentz, the president, requests that all members attend. A number from this society greatly enjoyed the W. M. U. program at the Third Baptist church last Tuesday and the hospitality of those good people. The pastor of this church, Dr. Jones, was the speaker of the evening.

The hostess at the church dinner Wednesday evening was Mrs. W. G. Baskin, and a delightful hour was enjoyed by all present. Mrs. Robert F. Harvey, representing the women's Bible class, exchanging place with Mrs. L. A. Witherspoon, is the hostess for next Wednesday. These dinners are followed by the regular prayer service, which is led by the pastor in a study of the Book of Acts.

The junior business women's Bible class, Mrs. John S. Spalding, teacher, will meet in the church Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock. Mrs. Spalding entertained her history class with invited guests in the home of Miss Sally Eugenia Brown on Peachtree street Wednesday morning. Dr. Carter Helm Jones speaking on "Czecho-Slovakia."

The Y. W. A. will meet Friday evening at 6:15 in the church dining room. The Elementary League of Atlanta meets Tuesday evening, April 5, at 6 o'clock in the Sunday school auditorium. Miss Rosa May King is the president. Mrs. Fred W. Patterson is the leader.

From 3 to 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon the primary, beginners and cradle roll departments of the Second church entertained with a reception Mrs. O. M. Gerald, state elementary secretary for Georgia, Miss Orrie Moody, state elementary secretary for Alabama, and Mrs. James B. Wood, prominent Sunday school worker of Birmingham, Ala. These class rooms were beautifully decorated for the occasion, spring flower were in abundance, and delicious refreshments served by these smiling, fairy-like little ones.

Gordon Street Baptist Baraca Class.

The Baraca class of the Gordon Street Baptist church, Clark Landers, president, and Miss Dora Haynes, teacher, broke all records in Atlanta's Bible schools last Sunday with an attendance of 1,400. The total attendance in all departments of this school was 2,129, according to Superintendent J. P. Bonner. Only recently the adult department was organized with John W. Dalhouse, superintendent, and the growth has been wonderful since the organization was formed.

The first Sunday in each month is Building Fund day at the church and as the new building was erected on the pay-as-you-go plan the contributions run around $2,000 each month. The deacons of the church work through the various organizations and it is confidently expected that next Sunday will break all records to the fund. Deacon John H. Hudson is chairman and with his officials is putting the work over in a glorious way.

Mrs. A. B. Brown is superintendent of the primary department of the Bible school and has associated with her around 22 of the most aggressive and forward-looking teachers in the city. Her department has grown to over 120 boys and girls who are doing superb work. Mrs. B. B. Martin is secretary and Mrs. C. A. Cobb is associate superintendent.

A large number of the officials and workers in the Bible school were in attendance upon the training school held during the week at the First Baptist church. Mrs. O. M. Gerald, of Thomson, Ga., one of the field workers of the Georgia Baptist Sunday school convention, and W. A. Harrell, of Nashville, Tenn., visited the school last Sunday and spoke to several of the departments. They were accompanied by Mrs. W. L. Blankenship, who is the educational director of the Atlanta Baptist Sunday School association.

Miss Evelyn Radford Weds John Butler.

Winder, Ga., April 2.—The wedding of Miss Evelyn Radford and John Clifton Butler was solemnized on Saturday evening, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee S. Radford, Candler street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. M. Radford, of Thompson, uncle of the bride, and minister who had officiated at her parents' wedding.

Preceding the ceremony, Miss Margaret Russell sang "Because" and "All For You," accompanied by Mrs. MacPotts, pianist, and Bertram Radford, violinist.

Three junior attendants, little Misses Bessie Tom Maynard, Mary Pierce Hammond and Robert Luther Carithers entered, opening the white gates through which the wedding party passed. Master Jim Griffith was ring bearer.

Miss Gertrude Butler, bridesmaid, entered with Bertram Radford, groomsman. Miss Naome Herndon, maid of honor, came alone. The bride entered with her father, and met the groom, attended by Carol Spence, before a beautifully arranged altar. The bride wore duchess satin with trimmings of duchess lace and pearls. Her flowers were bride roses showered with valley lilies.

"To a Wild Rose" was softly played during the ceremony by Mrs. Potts and W. C. Horton, violinist. A beautiful reception followed in which a large group of young ladies and matrons assisted.

Mr. and Mrs. Butler left late in the evening for a motor trip through South Carolina and for a visit to Magnolia Gardens. They will later take possession of their new home in Camilla, where Mr. Butler is prominently and influentially known.

THE THRILL OF THE TASK.

By M. Frances Meadors Burghard.

"Give me the thrill of the task,
The joy of the battle and strife,
Of being of use, and I'll task
No greater reward from this life
Better than fame or applause
Is striving to further a cause."

This is the challenge and the quest of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union as it begins its driveless drive for members from April to Mothers' day in May. Already, before the campaign is fully launched, news comes of 41 victorious volunteer captains, each having secured ten new paid members—every captain a volunteer—not appointed nor elected thus the driveless part of the drive. The results of the efforts of these 41 means 410 new members who have signed the pledge, and have paid the annual dues of $1 into the treasury.

There are scattering numbers of new members in the various unions. Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins has secured 135 members, and Mrs. Armor a large number.

Mrs. Dudley Smith, of Eastman, state vice president, is the director of the membership campaign.

Be a Finder in Membership Campaign

The March Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin, published in Macon, carried a membership article which was reprinted in the Union Signal, the National W. C. T. U. periodical, March 19, and is given here:

The possibilities wrapped up in our membership campaign are well-nigh limitless—for good, if well performed—for evil, if neglected. Remember this when trying to win members for the W. C. T. U., the young people's branch, and the Loyal Temperance legion—there is a possibility that God will mightily bless the state, the nation, even the world through the members you gain. You may win a potential Anna Gordon, an Ella Boole, a Mamie Williams or a Lella Dillard.

Be a finder, white ribbon friend like Andrew, as described in the Book of Luke. He found the Master. Oh, glorious find! Then "he first findeth his brother" and brought Peter to Christ. Andrew, probably, was not a writer, but his brother, Peter, was the author of two of the books of the New Testament. That boy or girl you found for the Y. P. B. may be the embryo author of books which shall "turn many to righteousness" even if you are not a ready writer.

Andrew may not have been much of a preacher, but the brother, Peter, whom "he first findeth," preached such a sermon at Pentecost that 3,000 souls were saved at the service. You may not be a temperance orator, but God may allow you to find one who will develop into a Mary Harris Armor with a gloriously golden heart and tongue.

Andrew could not feed the hungry multitude, but he found a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes" with which Christ fed the 5,000. Maybe the lad you found, by leading an L. T. L., or the girl who received training in an L. T. L. through your influence, possesses that which the Christ will use to break the bread of life to multitudes in other lands, hungry because drink-cursed.

Work earnestly for members. Do not be content merely to wish for them. Find and bring recruits to the fight for a clear brain which the temperance reform is making, for a brain unclouded by alcohol can better "think out an epic, compose a symphony, transform a canvas"—can "think God's thoughts after Him."

Mrs. Atkins Active in Field Work.

Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, of Milledgeville, Ga., W. C. T. U. field secretary and national and international lecturer and organizer, is addressing large audiences at public meetings on prohibition and its observance.

She made prohibition addresses to good audiences at Hawkinsville, Naylor, Hahira, Camilla, Donalsonville, Quitman, revived the W. C. T. U. at Vienna, Homerville, Nashville, Colquitt and Donaldsonville and completed the organization at Hahira. She organized unions at Wigham and Newton. The Whigham officers are Mrs. B. H. Belcher, president; Mrs. H. F. Langlois, secretary, and Mrs. S. P. Sivicord, treasurer. The officers at Newton are Mrs. J. T. Odum, president; Mrs. Dan Miller, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Lee Hall, recording secretary, and Mrs. A. B. Ledbetter, treasurer.

There was a wonderful all-day rally at Jesup when she was the chief speaker and at schools in Albany, Homerville, Pelham and at Meigs when fifteen hundred boys and girls, young men and young women, and faculty members, pledged obedience to the eighteenth amendment.

Mrs. R. G. Dickenson, of Homerville, vice president of the eleventh district W. C. T. U. writes "effective appeal to a deeply interested audience" in Homerville, where on Friday she spoke to 350 young people at the high school auditorium. She was the honor guest at a beautiful reception for teachers given by the Albany W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Atkins spoke at the third district rally at Dawson also at Willacoochee. Today she speaks at Pearson and on tomorrow to Broxton, then to Douglas. She is to be the chief speaker at two rallies in the eleventh district, one at Alma and the other at Baxley, this week.

Seventh District Rally at Cedartown.

Mrs. Marvin Williams, Atlanta, state president, and Mrs. R. H. McDougall, Jr., state secretary of the Loyal Temperance Legion, were the visiting speakers at the seventh district rally at Cedartown last Thursday.

One of the addresses was made by Mrs. J. W. L. Brown, of Cartersville, the district president. The state musical director, Mrs. A. B. Cunyus, of Cartersville, delighted with her songs. Mrs. A. C. Fulmer was in charge of the music. Rev. M. H. Massey welcomed the delegates from a number of local unions in the district to which Mrs. L. N. Awtrey responded.

Among others taking part on the all-day program were Miss Harpst, Mrs. A. J. Wiley, Mrs. R. O. Pitts, Mrs. John Terhune, Mrs. M. A. Crabb, Miss Helen Bridges, and Miss Post. The Cedartown W. C. T. U. was hostess at a luncheon.

Temperance Teaching in Schools.

Reports from teachers, pupils, and W. C. T. U. members are still coming of the splendid way in which schools everywhere in the state observed Temperance day in public schools on the fourth Friday in March.

Thousands of suggestive programs, songs, readings, exercises and other materials for use in the observance of the day were sent from the state W. C. T. U. headquarters in Macon, and teachers are still writing for prohibition literature.

In ordering these supplies it was gratifying to the writer that teachers, principals and superintendents frequently said that they read in this column that the materials desired could be found at state headquarters.

Interest in temperance essay writing in schools increases. Scarcely a day passes in which orders for literature to aid in essay writing are not received by the headquarters secretary, Miss Ruby Rivers. W. C. T. U. rules and subjects for essays are requested. The W. C. T. U. is glad to cooperate with teachers in temperance teaching.

The department of superintendence of the national educational association at its annual meeting in Dallas, Texas, last month, adopted a resolution recommending "that a worthwhile health program be carried on throughout the country emphasizing in particular personal hygiene and the evil effects of narcotics and alcoholic beverages."

Miss Sarah Wright, of Elberton, state W. C. T. U. directing of the department of scientific temperance instruction in schools, has advanced some fine ideas for the teaching of the effects of alcohol and narcotics to children in schools. The importance of such teaching is being stressed by community and national thought leaders, for the fight for temperance, sobriety, clean and healthy living is not yet fully won.

News of Interest From Brenau College.

Gainesville, Ga., April 2.—The installation of the Y. W. C. A. officers for the coming year took place in the college auditorium Sunday evening.

The old officers were seated on the stage in the form of a triangle. After the processional "Hymn of Lights," Miss Elsie Kuck, the retiring president, read the scriptures. Following this was solo by Miss Ethelyn Ames. As the retiring officers left the platform Miss Kuck presented the Y. W. C. A. constitution to the new president, Miss Florence Craig, who closed the meeting in prayer.

Saturday evening at 6:30 installation was held of the newly elected student government officers. Miss Mary Jim Oliver, retiring president, gave a talk on the work that has been accomplished at the college this year. She turned the office over to Miss Mary Helen Forrest, president for the forthcoming year. Miss Forrest made a speech of gratification at the honor awarded her and paid high tribute to the retiring president, presenting her with a handsome gift as a token from the student body to the Brenau ideal girl.

Three recitals of interest were given during the past week. Miss Dorothy Thurmond, of Gainesville, was presented in a pianoforte recital Thursday at noon. Miss Thurmond is a very talented pianist and although she is a junior, by diligent effort she was able to perform her recital programs before her senior year. She is a member of Mu Phi Epsilon, honorary musical sorority, and since her first year at the college she has established herself in the conservatory department as a student of musical ability.

On Friday afternoon Miss Lois Gregg Secor presented Miss Juanese Collier in, "He and She," a fascinating three-act play by Rachel Crothers. Miss Collier has taken major roles in many plays given by the Cushman club or Zeta Phi Eta, honorary oratory sorority, both of which she is a member, and always delighted the audience by her personality.

Miss Grace Jean Salls presented Miss Martha Julia Hurst, of Waynesboro, Ga., in her senior recital Tuesday afternoon in the auditorium. Miss Hurst gave, "A Rose o' Plymouth Town," by Beulah Marie Dix and Evelyn Greenleaf Sutherland, a play in four acts portraying eight characters. Miss Hurst in her four years in college has done conscientious work, and in her recital she showed excellent stage presence.

A Camp Takeda stunt at the camp exhibit at Rich's store in Atlanta was put on by Misses Sara Banks Walton, Mary Jane Gaffney, Virginia Bickerstaff, and Elizabeth Lockett, all of whom have spent one or more seasons at Brenau's beautiful camp. Miss Pauline Trimble, director of Camp Takeda; Mrs. H. J. Pearce and Miss Ella De Winfield accompanied the party. The stunt represented a day at Takeda with all camp activities acted in pantomime. Miss Dorothy Gow, of New York city, who has charge of the Cosmopolitan Magazine Camp in Atlanta, accompanied the party back to Brenau to inspect Camp Takeda and the camps at Lake Burton. Miss Gow and Miss Christine Trimble, of College Park, who is councillor at Takeda, were the guests of Miss Pauline Trimble over the weekend.

Pan-Hellenic council, composed of the ten sororities on the campus, gave a dance for the sorority girls at the gymnasium Saturday evening. Features of the evening were the sorority lead-outs, and special solo dances by Miss Kathleen Winn and Miss Ethel Webb. During the latter part of the evening a grand march was held. Music was furnished by Miss Muriel Carrier and Misses Doris and Dorothy McDonald. The committees in charge were: Entertainment, Misses Beverly Wood, chairman, Kathleen Winn, Margaret McCartney; refreshment, Misses Evelyn Fritz, chairman, Ruth Sifford, Annie Laurie Bates; decorating, Misses Helen Mosal, chairman, Matilda Shapiro, Effie Arnett.

Tuesday Brenau had as visitors the campaign workers of the E. Franklin Bandy company, who will represent the college in the endowment fund drive that is to take place in the next six weeks. The visitors were J. W. Burgess, of Sumter, S. C.; Henry M. Johnson, of Augusta, Ga.; John R. Ransom, of Atlanta; Maredin Smith, of Asheville, N. C.; J. M. McArthur, of Atlanta; W. E. Hammond, of Chicago; Miss Paula Thomas, of Atlanta, and L. I. Boyer, of Atlanta. They were shown over the campus by several girls from the junior and senior classes. The visit to the college was taken before they leave to visit alumnae and Brenau clubs.

Dr. Granbury, of Limestone College, S. C., addressed the students at the chapel period Tuesday at noon. Dr. Granbury was well received by the students.

The pledges of Zeta Phi Eta, honorary oratory sorority, in compliance with the duties to be performed before initiation, in groups of threes presented original vaudeville skits in the assembly hall Sunday evening before the members of the sorority.

Wednesday evening the students of the conservatory department gave an interesting concert. The program included organ solo, Othello Prather; piano solo, Marion Cooper; piano solo, Eliza Holmes; violin solo, Jessamy Hume; songs, Marjorie Gallaher; organ solo, William Reid; violin solo, Marilla Griffing; piano solo, Eloise Temple; piano solo, Marguerite Lee; organ solo, Una Cornelius.

Those in Gainesville for Martha Julia Hurst's recital were Mrs. Jennie B. Hurst, from Gaffney, S. C.; Mrs. McMasters, Mrs. Hickson, Mrs. Burney, and Mrs. Sparks from Waynesboro, Ga., and Mrs. Callaway and Mrs. Reeves from Clarkesville, Georgia.

Miss Isabella Poer spent the week-end in Atlanta as the guest of Miss Jean Williams.

Miss Charlsey Reid, graduate of the class of '26, visited at the Alpha Delta Pi house during the past week.

Miss Ellyn Sanderson spent the weekend in Macon.

Miss Mary Jossey Walton and Miss Bertha Todd visited Mrs. John Vogler in Athens the past weekend.

Sigma Chi Fraternity Hosts At Installation Dinner-Dance

One of the most delightful affairs of the college social year was the installation day dinner-dance Friday evening given by the Beta Psi chapter of the Sigma Chi fraternity at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Dinner was served at 8:30 o'clock in the ballroom, the guests being eated at small tables of six.

Following dinner dancing was enjoyed until 2 o'clock.

The young ladies invited included Miss Margaret Kelley, Miss Gladys McClelland, Miss Jane Tway, Miss Catherine Norcross, Miss Virginia Howard, Miss Frances Howard, Miss Sara Smith, Miss Sara Hurt, Miss Josephine Clark, Miss Eugenia Naff, Miss Lucy Marion, Miss Liz Spalding, Miss Josephine Hollis, Miss Pat Roger, Miss Bety Bennett, Miss Adaline Winston, Miss Helen Noble, Miss Lquella Everett, Miss Mary McCarty, Miss Charlie Harmon, Miss Betty Davidson, Miss Kate Thompson, Miss Elizabeth King, Miss Gates Eckford, Mis Venita Viley, Miss Boyce Lokey, Miss Mary Mosely, Miss Calara Belle King, Miss Yolande Gwynne, Miss Helen Barbee, Miss Laurie Linthicum, Miss Mildred Morrow, Miss Pauline Nanny, Miss Maude Nanny, Miss Katherine Stanford, Miss Sara Robinson, Miss Bo McMillan, Miss Anne Spalding, Miss Martha Maddox, Miss Kitty Park, Miss Edna Belle Raine, Miss Ruth Madden, Miss Louise Madden, Miss Sally Kellogg, Miss Louise Nelson, Miss Esther Garrett, Miss Hazel Stamps, Miss Isobel Hunter, Miss Lib Kimball, Miss Norman King, Miss Anne McCoy, Miss Jeannette Staples, Miss Katherine Howell, Miss Muriel Arkels, Miss Serena Riser, Miss Lucy Oliver, Miss Mary McCord, Miss Mary Garwood, Miss Hazel Cole, Miss Virginia McLemore, Miss Julia Vance Carlisle, Miss Julia Meador, Miss Sara Morris, Miss Louise Moore, Miss Frances Barnwell, Miss Eleanor Stanford Miss Martha Powell, Miss Dorothy Short, Miss Ruth Moore, Miss Highland Chaffee, Miss Mary Allison Blodgett, Miss Dorothy Herton and Miss Sue Jolly.

Social News of Emory University.

Miss Frances Wright, of Jackson, Ga., made a recent visit to her aunt, Mrs. Comer Woodward.

Miss Lucy Cole Richards, of Converse college, is visiting Mrs. Plato Durham on the North Decatur road. Mrs. Durham entertained with a delightful breakfast Friday morning in her honor.

Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Forrest are leaving today for Tampa, Fla., to attend the Confederate reunion.

Mrs. Mary Helen Patton, of Memphis, Tenn., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. N. B. Forrest, on the North Decatur road.

Hugh Carmichael and Frank Tucker motored to Athens on a recent visit to friends.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Sellman and daughters, Barbara and Charlotte, are spending ten days in Miami.

Miss Alice Carmichael, Miss Mildred McCraity and Miss Marguerite Nelson are visiting with Miss Evelyn Carmichael at her home on the North Decatur road.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Campbell entertained with a dinner party Saturday evening. The Mr. and Mrs. club of Decatur were the guests.

Mrs. J. C. Lester and Miss Elizabeth Merrett motored to south Georgia for the week-end.

The young matrons' class of Emory Methodist church had a delightful sewing spend-the-day party Wednesday.

The many friends of Miss Annie Campbell, of Shanghai, China, secretary of woman's work of the mission board, were glad to learn from her cablegram of the safety of the Methodist missionaries located in China.

The beautiful tea given by the LaGrange Alumnae association at the home of Mrs. Warren Candler was greatly enjoyed by the seniors of the different Atlanta schools.

Mrs. K. I. Shuck Honored On 75th Birthday

A recent event was the Friday afternoon party at which Mrs. S. W. Jones entertained at her home in College Park in honor of her mother, Mrs. K. I. Shuck. The occasion was in the nature of a surprise party in celebration oft he seventy-fifth birthday of Mrs. Shuck.

Mrs. Jones' home was decorated throughout with fresh spring blossoms of varying hues. The table in the dining room, where delicious refreshments were served, had for its centerpiece a huge birthday cake ornamented with rose icing, each little rose carrying in its heart a white candle, roses and candles being so arranged as to form the figures "75."

An amusing feature was the candle-blowing contest, it being supposed that the contestant lucky enough to extinguish the entire number of candles with one effort would, in the early future, be regaled with the sound of her own wedding bells. The contest was entered into by only the unmarried guests present, Miss Hattie Crenshaw being the lucky winner.

Mrs. Shuck was showered with many lovely gifts and numerous messages of love and esteem.

In her early womanhood Mrs. Shuck, then Miss Kathrine Ingram, of Barnwell, S. C., was married to John Sexton Shuck, the youngest son of Rev. and Mrs. Louis Shuck, the first American missionaries sent out to China under direction of the foregin board of the Southern Baptist convention. Because of her distinguished family connection and because of her own beautiful personality, Mrs. Shuck is widely known throughout the states of the southeast, and is loved and revered wherever known.

Invited to be with Mrs. Shuck on the proud occasion of her seventy-fifth birthday were a number of her intimate friends from both church and social circles.

Assisting Mrs. Jones in the entertainment of her guests were Mrs. Paul Solomon, Mrs. Sue Ledbetter George and Miss Bettie Solomon, the dainty little granddaughter of the guest of honor.

House Party in Americus of Interest.

Miss Alice Harrold, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harrold, of Americus, is hostess at a most interesting week-end house party.

The guests include a group of young Georgians, with the exception of Miss Jean Williamson, of Memphis, Tenn., a student at Sweetbriar college, Va., who has been spending the spring holidays with Miss Lucile Stone, in Atlanta, her former school mate. Miss Williamson has the honor of betag selected as one of the maids in the May Day Court, an annual function at Sweetbrier, which holds sincere interest for alumnae of the college and for students.

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

The Story of a Woman, Who, Cheated by Fate, Fought On and Won a Recompense

Youth seeking escape from the leaden sordidness of the East River via cheap dance halls.

AWAY downtown, below old Washington Square and not far from Greenwich Village, that multicolored side show conducted for the benefit of visitors from Philadelphia and points south and west, and which no true New Yorker attends except at the point of a pistol, stands an old hospital.

The elevated roars by its second and third story windows. Beneath it, the subway trains rumble and grind their couplings. A cross-town surface car rushes by its smoke-begrimed porte cochere, with clanging bell and whining brakes. Hordes of taxis hurrying from the Hudson docks to the palatial uptown hotels with important fares hoot and screech defiant challenges to the Klaxon howls of coal trucks and furniture vans.

Suddenly, a shrill falsetto note stabs the saturnalia of noise—the traffic cop's whistle, before which the demoniacal Klaxons becomes as the bleat of a lamb, and at which the largest ten-ton truck, full of excavation sand, lies down and purrs like a kitten.

For one brief moment there is silence, not a peaceful cessation of sound but an ominous pause, as in the death battle of clamorous prehistoric monsters. Then the stream of vehicles moves the other way, between two walls of suspended traffic, like hurrying Israelites between the stemmed waters of the Dead sea.

One wonders if the site of the hospital had been picked by design to inflict punishment upon the patients for their transgressions against the code, for the hospital is of the variety known as maternity, which in this case was a polite way of admitting that the state of motherhood was attainable without the aid of Christian Science, immaculation, or benefit of clergy. It had been endowed by an old maid, the last of a long line of porcine Knickerbockers, whose great-great-grandfather had run a cauliflower plantation within a stone's throw of where the Woolworth building now stands, a charming lady with a cabbage patch full of skyscrapers, a wart on the left side of her Flemish nose, and a burning desire to perpetuate her name, since spinsterhood had denied her perpetuation of personality.

The architecture of the hospital is a combination of mansard and the early renaissance, and the material used is said to be red brick. Indeed, there lives an aged bricklayer in Weehawken, New Jersey, who claims to have laid bricks there during its construction, but the soot of half a million soft coal furnaces has given it an inch-thick coat of black, as if it had gone into mourning for the sins of its patients.

Within, it is highly sanitary. White woodwork, white uniformed nurses, white walls and ceilings, blue and white linoleum on the floor, white cots and white faces against the white pillowslips. Serious white--garbed internes and an inaccessible, highly starched individual known officially as Miss Crabtree, the matron, and unofficially as Crabby.

Miss Crabtree was an institution within an institution. She had seen interne after interne abandon medicine for the light and lucrative occupation of removing appendixes at from five hundred to five thousand per removal while she herself stuck to the ship and superintended the bringing into the world of future material. She had seen the board of trustees change from patriarchal whiskered gentlemen with van in front of their names to smooth-faced business men with vitz at the end. She had been with the hospital in the capacity of nurse, assistant matron and chief matron beyond the memory of the oldest employee. Still she was hardly ancient, forty-odd, perhaps, certainly no more. She was extremely thin and angular. Her shoulders, between which her head with its great mass of yellowish hair seemed to rest precariously upon the thin, scrawny neck, were sharp and square. Her complexion was sallow except at the point of her somewhat prominent cheek bones, where there were two faintly pink spots the size of a silver quarter, as if the bones had become highly incensed by their futile efforts at breaking through the tightly drawn skin. Her eyes, which were of a clear, penetrating gray, might, in any other face, have been considered handsome. In Miss Crabtree's they were merely clear and penetrating.

She was a silent, efficient woman, as devoid of sentiment as a cafeteria cashier and as disillusioned as a Manhattan taxicab driver. She despised her own sex for the weaklings they were, and hated men with hatred that was abysmal, terrible. She was a martinet. The board of trustees called her a fine disciplinarian; the nurses, a thirty-minute egg.

She had a flat in the Bronx with a taupe rug, overstuffed set, stand lamp, "Dawn," by Maxfield Parrish, built-in refrigerator, and Dr. Cheviot's six-foot bookshelf of tabloid brain exhilarator. Between this flat and her small, spotless office at the hospital she commuted morning and night. With the exception of her short summer vacation spent on the north of Long Island, she never went anywhere. She had no friends. She was a cold, austere woman who seemed to have distilled from the suffering of the abandoned and betrayed a cup bitterer a thousand fold than theirs.

It happened that there was brought to this hospital a small, terrified bit of youth from the east side tenements near the Delancy street bridge, a golden-haired slip of a girl with cornflower blue eyes and the bloom of the Hungarian uplands in her cheeks.

It was the same old story of youth seeking escape from the leaden sordidness of the East river via cheap dance halls, with the same inevitable result. The boy—he was hardly a man—a youth with more time than was good for him, had fled in fear of the consequences.

Miss Crabtree, coming into the ward the day after the baby, a boy, was born, looked at the newcomer and in that brief moment conceived a deep and terrible hatred of this latest addition to the frailer members of her frail sex. As the matron looked down at the girl, her mind went back over the decades, and there was mirrored upon her brain a picture of herself lying thus, in this very ward, twenty-five years ago. She had been like this girl, young and desirable, and her baby had been a boy, too. They had advised her to give it up. She had agreed, too dazed to protest. A home had been found for it, a good home, they told her. The people who had adopted him and whose name she must never know in fairness to them and to the child, were a middle-aged, childless couple in comfortable circumstances. They were going to call the boy James, after his adopted father, she was told.

Upon the advice of the hospital authorities she had taken up training there. For weeks and months she had gone about her—regeneration, they called it—dazedly, like a sleepwalker, with the names James—Jim—ringing in her ears out of a great emptiness. Then she had pulled herself up with a start and had set her face, resolutely and doggedly, for the immolation.

She had gone on wearily at first, then sternly and with unswerving purpose, until today she held in the hollow of her thin hand the power of an emperor; and now, as she looked down upon the face of this girl so like what she herself had been, that power seemed a pitifully futile thing beside youth and motherhood. She knew herself at that moment to be thrice abandoned, and she hated the girl for the memories she had evoked.

She noted from the card hanging on the foot of the bed that the girl's first name was Ann. Her last name was unpronounceable. Miss Crabtree noted, also, the frightened look in the cornflower blue eyes when the nurse took the baby from the girl and returned it to the nursery. The mother's eyes followed the nurse hungrily until she passed out of sight through the door at the end of the ward.

Miss Crabtree walked back to her office and looked up the patient's history and antecedents. It was typical almost stereotyped. The daughter of immigrant parents, the mother a janitress working early and late and the father a night watchman on the docks. The girl, a department store worker with one of the cheaper retail firms that infest old Fourteenth street west of Union Square.

Miss Crabtree returned the card to the file with a stealthy, catlike movement of her bony hand. It lay within her power to make this girl suffer as she herself had suffered. Arising, she walked down to the nursery and looked at the child. She asked the nurse in charge a few sharp questions, after which she called a telephone number in Brooklyn.

"This is Miss Crabtree speaking," she said in reply to the voice that answered the operator's ring. "I think we have a child that'll suit you, Mrs. Amberley. Can you and your husband come down tomorrow afternoon at, say, three o'clock?"

"Yes, Miss Crabtree."

"Very well, Mrs. Amberley, I shall expect you at three, then," she replied, and rang off.

Middle-aged worthy couples on the quest of that which nature in a moment of grim sport has denied them and lavished upon the unworthy Anns of the world are legion, and the Amberleys were almost fictionally true to type.

Mrs. Amberley was a large, comfortable looking woman in rustling black silk through the folds of which her ample form seemed to spill, wheat-sack fashion, as she sat on her chair, hands folded, and listened to Miss Crabtree extolling the virtues of the infant. Mr. Amberley, seated a little behind his wife, was small, nervous, and enormously ill at ease, as if realizing that this visit was an incident of his palpably deficient virility. A fringe of sparse, wispy hair encircled his temples, a pair of fawn-colored congress gaiters his angles, and his thin, bloodless hands clutched the head of a silver mounted Malacca cane like a mariner's clutching a half submerged spar.

The three of them adjourned to the nursery, Mr. Amberley trotting behind the two women as if led to slaughter by some invisible cord. He exhibited a tentative interest in the infant by remarking apologetically that it seemed unusually red of complexion, and suggested that some hidden strain of Indian blood might be coursing unsuspected in its veins. Miss Crabtree and Mrs. Amberley exchanged pitying glances at this exhibition of male ignorance, and the matron explained, curtly, that such complexion was universal in infants of three days. At this information Mr. Amberley lapsed into embarrassed silence while Miss Crabtree extolled the physical perfections of Ann's illicit contribution to Manhattan's seven million.

The Amberleys left and Miss Crabtree repaired to the ward and informed Ann in her crisp, businesslike voice that, pending certain legal formalities, a home had been found for her child. The effect of this information was startling. Ann, the Hungarian, rose on her elbow, her vivid blue eyes blazing.

"You dare take him away from me!" she stormed. "I'll burn this joint to the ground, d'you hear? He's all I got out of—this, and I'm going to keep him. Adopt him out! Say, how d'you get that way? Ain't I his mother?"

Miss Crabtree backed away discreetly from the blazing eyes.

"You call yourself a woman, you old dried up fossil," the girl went on. "You bring him back to me this instant or I'll get up and fetch him myself."

Miss Crabtree fled the ward. The two pink spots in her cheeks glowed a dull salmon red. The attendant brought the child to its mother, and thus restored peace to the ward. Ann, baring her young white breast to the tiny lips, glared belligerently about the ward, a young tigress with a lone cub.

In her office Miss Crabtree sat staring straight in front of her. In the matron's gray, penetrating eyes lay a look of cold, deadly fury, which gradually was superseded by another, that of a woman who has sold her birthright for a mess—a terrible mess—of pottage.

It is rarely that men in unofficial capacity stray within the highly sanitary precincts of this hospital, but it does happen occasionally. They are usually black browed fathers and brothers come to wring confessions from unwilling lips with scowls and reproaches, and who depart mumbling vengeance. But once in a while memories of soft arms, warm lips, a touch of pity or perhaps some vague notion of responsibility brings the other sort there.

It brought one of these now, a dark-eyed youth, who, after cruising back and forth before the smoke-begrimed porte cochere for half an hour to summon courage, plunged through the revolving door and presented himself, cap in hand, before the information desk. Blushing to the ears, he asked for the girl with the unpronounceable name.

The lady at the information desk pressed a button that rang a peremptory bell somewhere. The boy shuffled his feet, tugged at his cap, looked at the ceiling, then at his brown oxfords, stuck his hands in his pockets, pulled them out again, pursed his lips, and tried to whistle, and was then rescued by a white-garbed minion who answered the peremptory bell.

He was led up a wide flight of stairs and into a large room, following dog-like on the heels of the guide, and running the gauntlet of feminine eyes that stared at him curiously, disdainfully, hopefully, each in their own way, from the double row of white beds.

Before one of the farthest cots his guide left him. The boy stood abashed before the girl with the unpronounceable name. He twirled his cap, shifted himself from one foot to the other, grinned sheepishly, and said: "Lo, Ann. How tricks?"

The cornflower blue eyes regarded him soberly.

"Not so worse," she replied.

They looked at each other in silence, these two. They were too young to speculate upon the mysteries of nature which had used their youth to betray them. They only knew that something had come between them and their love, and that this something was more important than love itself.

"Don't you want to see 'im?" the girl finally asked, as she drew the covers aside.

"Surest thing," the boy replied, valiantly. He approached on tiptoe, as if he were carrying something fragile, and he extended a not overclean digit, with which he touched the infant's wrinkled forehead gingerly.

"Gosh, ain't he small?" he said.

"He's no such thing," Ann replied, indignantly. "He weighs nine pounds. Get yourself a chair an' sit down. He ain't gonna bite you." She propounded a question. "Does your folks know you come to see me?"

He shook his head.

"The old man's ravin' about it yet. I hatter sneak off, an' I ain't been home for four days." He glanced at her sidewise. "I was wonderin'—the boss said he'd let me have my job back again, an'—well, I've been kinda looking around for a place." He paused, embarrassedly. "I thought maybe you'd like to get married—or something?" he added, vaguely.

The girl did not reply at once. He looked down at her fearfully. She was struggling to keep tears out of her blue eyes. Man-like, he misconstrued her silence.

"Don't you like me enough to marry me, kid?" he asked miserably. "Fred King said he'd lend me twenty-five bucks and he'll let us pay it back to him by the week."

The girl put forth a small, dainty hand and drew his face close.

"Like you?" she whispered. "I love you, I love you."

At that moment, Miss Crabtree entered with a sheaf of reports in her hand.

"Visitors' hours are over," she announced crisply as she walked up the aisle between the cots like a general reviewing his troops. She glanced at the youth, who had arisen and who stood, hanging his head diffidently at her approach. She prepared to give him her best vitriolic look. "Visitors' hours——" That was as far as she got. She paused, took a step forward, then brought herself up with a start. The sheaf of papers fluttered from her hand and dropped to the floor.

The youth retrieved them, and handed them back with an awkward bow. As her thin hand closed about them convulsively, her gray eyes moved over his face, and the mantle of years seemed to drop from her thin shoulders. She traced his features, hungrily, one by one. There was no mistaking them. The soft brown eyes, the wide forehead, the black unruly hair that never would stay put, the laughing lips and the bold sweep of his chin. It was as if her lover had stepped phoenixlike out of the ashes of the past.

She swayed forward and caught at the footboard of the bed for support. All the pent-up emotions of her starved life clambored for articulation. Love and tragedy, joy and terror clutched at her thin breast in breathless succession. She stared at the lad's face as through a mist, and as if from a long distance heard the voice of the girl saying in a low tone: "Better beat it, Jimmie, before she eats you alive."

Miss Crabtree turned slowly and walked down the aisle.

"Visitors' hours are—over," she repeated in a dry, hollow voice as she stumbled out of the ward, blindly.

It was nearly dusk when she entered the nursery an hour later and sent the attendant away on an errand. When the woman was gone Miss Crabtree crossed to the crib which bore the tag of the girl with the unpronounceable name. She lifted the tiny occupant in her thin arms and carried it to the window, searching each tiny feature hungrily.

Before the window she dropped on her knees, hugging the child to her flat, bony breast. One little hand stole forth and caught a wisp of her dull, straw-colored hair.

"Master, Master," she whispered, "can you forgive?"

* * * *

Mr. Warren, the hospital's legal adviser, leaned back in his swivel chair and regarded his visitor, thoughtfully.

"Certainly, Miss Crabtree—it can be done quite easily."

Under his quiet scrutiny the two pink spots on the matron's cheeks deepened perceptibly, so he dropped his eyes and tapped the desk, waiting for her to go on. Miss Crabtree took from her purse a certified cheque for one thousand dollars which she laid upon the desk.

Arising, she said: "You understand, of course, that the—young couple are not under any circumstances to know wherefrom this money comes to furnish their home. You are to keep me advised about their—progress from time to time."

Mr. Warren nodded. He knew something of Miss Crabtree's history. The two had grown old in service together. He held out his hand in parting.

"The world would be a better place if there were more women like you, Miss Crabtree," he said.

"The world would not be at all if they were—like me," she replied.

AUCTION BRIDGE

By MILTON C. WORK
THE INTERNATIONAL AUTHORITY

TO LISTEN to the ordinary talk which follows a Bridge game, especially those in which the players do not rank in the expert class, one might be led to imagine that overbidding is the greatest fault known at the Bridge table; and that a player who does not bid a No Trump unless he has all four suits stopped, nor bid a suit unless he has the Ace-King-Queen and two others with it, is the partner for whom every one is looking. But while rash and unsound overbidding frequently is followed by very disastrous results, I would unhesitatingly select the partner who notoriously overbids, rather than the one who notoriously underbids.

Underbidding produces more losses than overbidding, although the disastrous consequences of undue timidity are not so noticeable or obvious and consequently not the subject of so much comment, as the losses produced by undue boldness. For example, a Dealer who holds Ace-King--x-x- of a suit may pass, and his doing so may work badly for his side under any one of the following conditions:

(a) The hand may be passed out when a bid by Dealer would have produced game, or at least a worth-while score.

(b) The pass may permit the adversaries to obtain cheaply a profitable contract which the bid would either have kept them from naming or, getting a raise from partner, have forced them to a contract higher than they could make.

(c) The bid may suggest a lead which will be most advantageous. Then again a player with a light No Trump (such a hand as Spades: A-x-x; Hearts: K-J-x; Diamonds: Q-J-x; Clubs: x-x-x-x) may pass instead of bidding, and as a result may lose a game-going opportunity; and it may be that in neither case would anyone at the table notice what might have been. The hands which should be bid initially have been subjected to the most scrutinizing and careful tests, and the resultant conventional system has proved in the long run to be a winner. Therefore, when a player who has a sound No Trump or a sound original suit-bid passes, he places his side at a disadvantage.

One of the difficulties growing out of playing with a notorious underbidder, is that his partner is tempted to overbid, with the idea of equalizing the underbidding; and, when the original pass was properly made—possibly with great weakness—the overbid is very apt to produce serious results.

Many players pass originally with such hands as the following, all of which should be bid one Spade:

Spades: Q-J-x-x-x; Hearts: A-K-x; Diamonds: x-x-x; Clubs: x-x.

Spades: A-x-x-x-x; Hearts: A-J-x; Diamonds: x-x-x-; Clubs: x-x.

Spades: A-J-10-x; Hearts: A-J-x; Diamonds: x-x-x; Clubs: x-x-x.

Spades: K-Q-x-x; Hearts: A-J-x; Diamonds: x-x-x; Clubs: x-x-x.

All initial suit-bids of one or two are made in the same way, regardless of which suit is a bid. A Heart, Diamond or Club should similarly be bid with a hand that contained in either of those suits the above Spade holding and had the side strength shown above.

Many players also pass with the following, all of which should be bid No Trump:

Spades: A-x-x; Hearts: A-x-x; Diamonds: x-x-x-x; Clubs: x-x.

Spades: A-K-x; Hearts: A-Q-J; Diamonds: x-x-x-x; Clubs: x-x-x.

Spades: K-x-x; Hearts: K-x-x; Diamonds: Q-J-x; Clubs: Q-10-x-x.

Spades: A-x-x; Hearts: K-x-x; Diamonds: K-J-x; Clubs: x-x-x-x.

The same tendency to underbid is already, even at this early period, noticeable in the game of Contract. The excuse given is that as the Contract penalties are so severe, the original bids should be most conservative and while there are various ideas as to the strength that should be required, we hear on all sides the cry: "Do not bid unless you have much more than you need to bid in Auction." As yet it is entirely too soon to suggest, other than in the most tentative manner, a system of Contract bidding; but the sensible way of looking at the situation would seem to be that the severity of Contract penalties is offset by the increase in Contract rewards, and that the enormous bonus allowed for winning a Contract rubber fully justifies a reasonable risk. To pass out at Contract a hand which, if bid, would have made game, is apt to be more serious in its result than a similar act would be at Auction; so my first thought is that original bids in Contract should be made with about the same strength as in Auction, but that the latter bidding at Contract should be conducted with considerable conservatism.

Broadway Banter

—BY—
FORNEY WYLY

NO departure for Hollywood has been more genuinely lamented by New York movie circles than that of Gloria Swanson. A favored few of us were asked to meet Miss Swanson at three at the Ritz on the afternoon of her five o'clock departure and have a cup of tea with her before putting her on the train. Never before have I seen her look lovelier than she did in her beige-colored traveling gown with hat and cape to match. She wore a corsage of gardenias and violets. There was no pretense about Miss Swanson's sincere regret at having to leave New York for these next six months. It so happens her next picture is a desert one and almost any fool knows there are no deserts around New York. "The happiest events of my life are associated with New York," Miss Swanson told me. And I shall go one step further and assume that she meant the least happy ones have taken place in Hollywood.

At the station it afforded your entranced correspondent no end of delight to find himself a cared-for member of "Miss Swanson's party." New York papers had proclaimed for weeks the exact hour Miss Swanson and her husband would leave, and so the usual mob was there to see it happen. There was an army of photographers on hand, and by phenomenal shoving and pushing I managed, I believe, to have my beaming face photographed at least once directly next to the Swanson profile. I could not resist the temptation, on being lead through the ropes by a battalion of policemen, to glance carelessly over my shoulder at the bulging crowd on the other side of the rope to see if I saw any of the cronies I had always previously stood against on such occasions. To my immense relief no one of them blurted out as I expected, "Hey, you, get back over here where you belong."

Atlanta has been doing first this and then that in these parts recently. Anne Couper as you know, went so far as to get married while here, and Frank Ellis I saw conducting his afternoon stroll through the lobby of the Plaza not so long ago. No matter where he is, there comes a certain hour during every afternoon during which Mr. Ellis must take a stroll, no matter whether he's at 1 Peachtree circle, at Palm Beach, at Narragansett, or in New York. And so it turned out I caught a glimpse of Mr. Ellis when the stroll was taking place in New York.

Edna Raine decided she'd cut one tea-dance recently and give that time to seeing this Woolworth building she's been hearing so much about. And having done that, there seemed nothing to prevent her doing Brooklyn bridge, Grant's tomb and all the other sights you somehow never seem to find in a supper-club. Edna tells me she is one of those girls who coming to New York for ten days, now finds herself starting upon her second month of unabated stepping. You'll do well to get her back by mid-summer if New York boys have anything to say about it.

"Money From Home" is a fairly amusing play in which the likable Frank Craven is the feature player. Mr. Craven, you know, wrote and acted in "The First Year" and I am afraid he had that same play in the back of his head when he wrote "Money From Home." Without being much like it, "Money From Home" is still somehow a not-quite-so-good "First Year." It would almost seem as though Mr. Craven decided he'd write a play, couldn't think of anything to write about, and so wrote "Money From Home."

At least the hero, played by Mr. Craven, is not one of those Arrow Collar saints whom you could kill with pleasure at any given moment. In fact, this one is something of a crook, who sees the light through his contact with the girl. You won't leave "Money From Tome" a changed person determined to do bigger and better things, but you won't be any worse off for having seen it. Or for not having seen it, for that matter.

* * * *

And now the long anticipated Jeanne Eagels play, "Her Cardboard Lover," has finally come to town. It seems that ever since Miss Eagels stopped being Sadie Thompson, every play she's been connected with has been mixed up in some row. First there was "Chicago" from which she withdrew and allowed Francine Larrimore, incidentally, to give the best performance in her life in the role that was to have been Miss Eagels'. Before the ravishing Jeanne became connected with "Her Cardboard Lover," Laurette Taylor had played the part on try-out. Miss Taylor, so I learn, was rather disastrously cast and so out of the original company only Leslie Howard, playing the named part, was retained. Mr. Howard, you recall, was the excellently-played Napier of last year's "Green Hat." And so good was he in the out-of-town showings of "Her Cardboard Lover" that the management desired to feature him during the New York run. Nothing doing, however, said Miss Eagels. Else she'd be the star alone or she wouldn't play.

And so what do you suppose has happened? With electric lights spelling only the name "Jeanne Eagels" outside the Empire, Leslie Howard is inside walking away with the show. Miss Eagels is lovely but her performance is not to be compared with Mr. Howard's. As she took one curtain call after another on the opening night, it must have been somewhat disconcerting to hear that excited audience yell, "Howard! Howard! Howard! Howard!" It's about time to mention that "Her Cardboard Lover" is an extremely clever and steadfastly entertaining French comedy. While Miss Eagels is charming and lovely, I have an idea that she feels sunshine does not always follow "Rain."

What Has Happened to Justice?

Justice Shifted to Aid Cake Eater Killers

HAVE you noticed that a new unwritten law is coming into custom in American life? The new unwritten law is that society must not execute youthful murderers.

So far as the statutes are concerned, there is no such law on the books. Youths guilty of murder in the first degree are supposed to receive the extreme penalty, all things being equal. But actually this is not done. In the last few years we have had a great many young killers—Leopold and Loeb, Gordon Pirie, Roland McDonald, Willie Cavalier, Lester Gertenberg, Frank McDowell, and now—Herbert Koerber. The new unwritten law has aided all of them.

Some day perhaps this problem will be solved. Some day we will know, perhaps, whether youths of 18 should or should not die for their murders. At present we do not know. Justice seems to think the way to handle such cases is to sentence the boys to death and then, later on, to reconsider.

Is this a wise policy? Would it be better to give these young slayers life imprisonment in the first place, rather than drag the thing out through the usual delays and to the ultimate reconsideration?

Is justice strengthened or weakened by this practice?

* * * *

"Why so many boys and girls of tender age embark upon careers of crime has been discussed from many angles. Many reasons have been advanced; blame has been placed in many quarters, some of it justified and some not.

"The facts we have to face are that these youthful criminals are among us, and that they must be curbed. We must deal with effects as well as causes, and the best way to stop the criminal, whether he be 17 or 57, is to hand out swift and sure punishment."

The above is from an editorial which appeared in an eastern newspaper last year after the five boys who came to be known as the Cake-Eater gang were arrested and arraigned in connection with a series of holdups and the killing of a Jamaica, L. I., restaurant keeper.

Herbert Koerber poses during his last trial

Swift and sure punishment.

Criminologists agree that is the way to curb criminals. The low murder rate in Great Britain is said to be due to the fact that punishment is swift and certain. In this country we do not follow this policy; at least there is little evidence that we do. The murderer whose punishment is swift and sure is the exception to the rule.

In the case of the Cake-Eaters justice appeared to work with considerable speed, and a great deal of to-do was made about the fact. Four of the boys were sentenced to serve twenty years to life, and the fifth, the leader, Herbert Koerber, who actually fired the killing shot, was sentenced to die in the electric chair.

Swift and sure punishment.

Justice Shifts.

But in one instance punishment was not swift and sure. In the case of Koerber, the leader and the killer, justice decided to change her mind, as she does so often in this country. Koerber won a new trial and now has gone back to Sing Sing to serve twenty years to life, the same as his pals.

The reason for saving Koerber was the fact that he was only 18 years old. Some readers may not think that this should be sufficient to save a murderer from the extreme penalty, but it is the custom in this country not to execute youthful killers. There does not seem to be any indication that this custom will be changed.

And that despite the fact that youthful killers are very much on the increase.

The murder of Angelo Mahairas occurred early in the morning of March 21, 1926. According to the cook in the restaurant, who was first held for the crime, Mahairas had been shot by three holdup men who entered the place just before dawn. The robbers had taken $70 from a cash box and $7 from one of two cash registers. The other cash register hadn't been touched.

Ten minutes before this affair, it developed, two young men had held up and robbed an all-night lunch room in the same general vicinity. The proprietor said that six men had come to his place in a taxicab and had something to eat. When they had dined they went out, but two returned almost immediately. They got $15.

The police worked swiftly. Within a few days the young holdup men were rounded up. There were five, the eldest 19, the youngest 16, all products of New York, and of this new age of jazz and bootleg booze.

Five boys, swaggering into the limelight: Koerber, 18; Gustave Fischer, 19; James Green, 18; Frederick Kellerman, 18, and Richard Daunt, 16. Koerber's home was in the Bronx, under the eternal roar of the "L," Green came from Woodside, L. I., and the other three were products of Manhattan's upper east side.

All had been born in New York city, and had lived the greater part of their lives in dingy, congested sections. In almost every respect they had followed the usual path to criminality. Their growth was like that of any number of young men now in jail or on the way to jail. It is an old story.

Koerber was the dressiest one of the lot, and it was largely his personal appearance that won the gang its name. He was a handsome boy in his way. In some of his pictures he bears a resemblance to Georges Carpentier, the French boxer, and in others he looks like Dickie Loeb, of the Leopold-Loeb case. His suits were of tricky cut, and he wore those patent leather pumps that have elastic on the sides.

His dark hair of course was plastered to his skull in true cake-eater fashion, and he had a way of drooping his eyelids languidly, as no doubt he had seen movie sheiks do on the screen.

Koerber's father deserted his family when the children were small. Thereafter his mother, until she died, worked as a janitress on Second avenue, and his grandmother, Mrs. Annie Fitzgibbons, worked in the country and sent money from time to time. The boy attended a parochial school and several public schools, but he never got beyond the third grade.

Many Sweethearts.

His first job was as an errand boy for a chain grocery on Second avenue, and then, due chiefly to his good looks, he obtained a job as a bell-hop, first at the Princeton club, and then the New York club. Later on he ceased working. When his mother died, in 1925, Herbie went to live with his grandmother in the Bronx.

Herbie, as we may expect, had had many sweethearts. The impulse to spend money on the girls contributed, as it usually does in cases like this, to his impulse to criminality. His latest sweetheart was Kitty Kraus, who lived near Third avenue. Her sister, Mary, was his elder brother John's sweetheart.

Now youth has always been pictured as carefree and gayly adventurous, and it was so with Herbie and his pals. But their gaiety and adventurousness had an unwholesomeness about it that spelled, for them at least, ultimate disaster. Their youthhood came to be mostly a matter of drinking parties, dance halls, cabarets, taxicabs, and expensive girls.

Koerber, Daunt and Green had been close friends for some time. They went with the same crowd and drank one another's liquor. Green hadn't a trade, but he had a wife. He had married five months before. He had been arrested for "unlawful entry," but escaped imprisonment—on account of his youth, no doubt.

Fischer, on the contrary, had a good job, for he was a printer's apprentice and earned $42 to $48 a week. Kellerman had gone to the same school as Fischer and was also a typesetter. He had been arrested once for shooting craps. He had known Koerber years before but had met Daunt only two weeks previous to the holdup.

The Cake-Eaters.

The Cake-Eaters. The hard-drinking, hard-riding, hard-boiled Cake-Eaters.

The story of that last wild party begins late in the afternoon of March 26 when Koerber, Green and Daunt were in the Kraus home. They began drinking and in the course of the party, according to Koerber's confession to Assistant District Attorney Charles Froessel, Daunt and Green went down to the cellar and got the revolver and pistol which they kept there.

Mary and Kitty Kraus, the girls identified with the Cake-Eater gang

"Then some fellows came and took us all to a show," said Herbie the nonchalant. "We had some wine and then we got some whisky. We generally always had around three or four quarts of whisky with us. When we went to the show we had a quart and drank it between acts.

"Then somebody suggested we go

—The Story of Herbert Koerber

New Unwritten Law Saves Young Murderers

to some cabarets and we went to a chop suey place and had something to eat and finished a pint of booze. We had Kitty and Mary Kraus with us and my brother John and another fellow and at the chop suey place we met Kellerman and another guy.

Their Wild Time.

"Downstairs I met a couple of girls and they were going to the masquerade ball at the Casino. We took Mary and Kitty home and then went to the ball. I guess we stayed there until about 2 or 3 o'clock. We had some more whisky there.

"When we left the Casino there was Fischer, Kellerman, Daunt and myself, and one of the fellows said:

Mrs. Annie Fitzgibbons, Koerber's aged grandmother.

'What do you say we go on a wild time?' So we went to a cabaret in the colored district. Then we went to another chop suey joint and there was some more drinking.

"From there we went to Ninety-Second street, and there we met my brother John and his girl and we had an argument. He told me to go home and I said I wouldn't. Then we went to Jimmy Green's house and had some more booze."

In his statement in the district attorney's office Koerber said that the next suggestion one of the gang offered was to go out and "stick up some places." He later insisted that he and his associates had no intention of committing any crime when they started out. We may be pardoned if we say that we heard him the first time.

So the boys piled into a taxi at Green's house, with Green accompanying them, and when this taxi proved too slow for our swift young conspirators they changed to another. They had some more liquor with them, but it soon gave out. They came to a lunch wagon and all went in. They invited the driver to come in too.

Having eaten, the boys returned to the taxi and then Koerber, Daunt and Green, (according to Koerber) went back and held up the place.

On the witness stand subsequently Herbie admitted under cross-examination that earlier in the evening they had held up a chop suey establishment "just for fun."

Booze Gang.

The boys were pleased with the way the lunch room man submitted to their orders, and they felt like continuing the party. But as usual the booze had run out. They rode around, looking for a place to get some more whisky, and finally stopped at the Fulton restaurant.

"I couldn't tell you whether it was Jamaica or not—that's how much I know about it," continued Koerber. "Jimmy Green and Daunt and I went in. The man was in the front of the place and we asked him if he had any whisky. He looked us over and said he'd get us some.

"He went into the back room and stuck his head in the icebox like he was going to get something. Then he turned around and shouted curses at us and tore at us, telling us to get out. I was the last one through the door, and he grabbed hold of me. The two of us fell.

"I was on top, and I couldn't really tell you what happened."

And neither could Angelo Mahairas, tell what happened, being dead.

But Nikolas Gula, the cook, said that Koerber had shot Mahairas when the latter tried to push aside the gun. Mahairas had not been as submissive, at any rate, as the lunch wagon man. So he had died for his courage.

Fall Into Net.

Robert Kobak, the taxi driver who drove the boys around that morning, testified that on the way back the gang sang and shouted and that one of them thrust a gun against his neck and ordered him to "step on it." They returned to Manhattan, stopped at the Kraus house, and an hour later Koerber, Daunt and Green left for Danbury, Conn., for a "vacation."

The Cake-Eaters under arrest: (1) James Green, (2) Herbeft Koerber, (3) Richard Daunt

Three days later they returned to fall at once into the net the police had laid for them.

Smiling, debonair Herbie lived up to his role as the gay leader of the Cake-Eaters in subsequent days. He was tried first within two weeks of the killing, and justice in Queens county made short work of him—or thought she did. On the stand he was cool, quiet and self-possessed, a regular young Gerald Chapman even if he couldn't read "big words." His attitude seemed to be that he would be a "regular guy" to the end, even if he "burned."

He stuck to his story about not remembering exactly what had happened in the restaurant. Finally, on the last day of the trial, Froessel asked him:

"Do you know now that you killed a man and that the man was Angelo Mahairas?"

Up swept those lanquid eyelids and the same soft, even voice answered, "Yes, sir."

But Herbie lost his composure when his grandmother, a sad-faced woman, wearing heavy black and curtsying to the judge, said that Herbie had never done anything wrong until his mother died. "I'm heartbroken, your honor," she said. Herbie slumped in his seat and covered his eyes.

When the jury came in and said they had found the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree the boy took it coolly. He said he wasn't afraid, and even made jokes about dusting off the chair before he sat down and burned. Meaning the electric chair.

Death House.

So Herbie Koerber went to the death house at Sing Sing, and presently his four companions, having pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree, also went to Sing Sing to serve sentences of twenty years to life.

A few weeks later John Koerber, 21, went to Sing Sing too, but only to do a three-year term on a robbery charge in connection with one of the gang's numerous holdups.

Nine months passed with the usual stays being granted the condemned youth. Then on December 31 last the court of appeals granted a new trial.

The decision, written by Judge Charles W. Pound, pointed out that in cases where a defendant testified he was so intoxicated as not to know what he was doing, the trial judge must instruct the jury as to the lesser degree of crime permissible in a homicide.

"There was a fellow asked me if I'd rather burn or get life imprisonment," he told a reporter who accompanied him back to New York. "I said life, because life sure is sweet. He said he'd rather die.

"I told him he would be one of the first to cry for mercy, and he was, too. When his mother came in there to see him and his brother, he fell on his knees and cried."

Herbie's Story.

He said it would be all different if he could do it all over again—as well he might. "I was pretty straight until I fell in with the gang," he said. "The books are right at that. And I wouldn't have done any robbing if I hadn't got drinking. I never knew what I was doing until it was over."

Edward U. Green, his attorney, asked about his "fan mail"—letters from girls. Yes, he'd received plenty of letters but he'd never seen any girls except visitors—"all weeping relatives, you know." He said he used to sing for the men the night before they were to die, sentimental old songs that everybody knew.

"You'll be seeing Kitty again now," reminded one of the party.

"She's a nice girl," said Herbie. "She used to write me six or seven times a day."

Then he turned serious.

"God!" he burst out. "I wish I could tell all those fool kids that it doesn't pay! If I ever get out of jail I'll spend the rest of my life telling them it doesn't pay!"

Still a boy, still swaggering in the limelight, but changed after those nine months in the shadow of that chair behind the door in Sing Sing.

He grinned as he came into the courtroom on February 7 and saw the photographers. He had the pose of the movie idol to a T. Whenever he saw a camera pointing at him he adjusted himself quickly and smiled.

But he was graver, on the whole, than at the first trial, and he was attired much more conservatively.

The trial moved along, with much the same testimony as before. Kitty Kraus had to testify against the defendant, and she collapsed as she left the witness stand. The boy's grandmother, too, went on the stand and wept so that she could not talk.

Second Degree Murder.

Dr. William B. Pritchard, famous alienist, testified that Koerber was mentally defective, but on cross-examination was forced to admit that the young man knew what he was doing when he shot and killed Maharias.

On February 11 Koerber was found guilty of murder in the second degree. The jury deliberated about seven hours.

Judge Frank F. Adel — Edward U. Green

Jurist at last trial and Koerber's counsel.

"You are a very lucky boy to have escaped with your life," said County Judge Frank F. Adel. "All the elements of the case indicate that your crime was first degree murder, and I can assure you that only your age saved you from such a verdict."

Later Herbie thanked his lawyers. "You saved me from burning," he said. "I got a good break." On the way "up the river" he remarked that the second trip was "a picnic compared to the first one."

When he was whisked away from the Ossining station between his guards he waved his hand dramatically to the assembled flappers. It was his last gesture.

They Couldn't Eat Cake and Have It

Herbert Koerber's Cake-Eater gang was typical of many other groups of carefree young New Yorkers who see joy in jazz, bootleg liquor, and irresponsible girls.

Society will do well to read their story, and other youngsters, also, will do well to read their story. For the Cake-Eaters are all in prison now, serving twenty years to life, and justice is wearily asking who's next.

Intimate Peeps At a Pa

Charming Mlle. Christiane Yves Latin Quarter Studios, Gi Picture of Her Experienc Artist's Model in P

A TOURIST from Bury-St.-Edmunds or Calgary or Marked Tree, Arkansas, goes nosey-ing through the artists' quarter of Paris on the still hunt for that delightful deviltry he has read so much about.

At the end of a day or two he is usually ready to quit, and is feeling rather resentful toward the guides who lured him so far under false pretenses. He has been in the studios of the artists and had lunch with the models, and has studied both at close range in their classroom sessions. And he has found it considerably less exciting than a school teachers' convention back home. The girls, or most of them, he finds, have as serious an attitude toward posing as American stenographers or social secretaries have toward their jobs. They are as quick to resent the uninvited attention of handsome strangers as working women in Indianapolis, and that old-time Svengali stuff doesn't seem to go any more.

Not that the tourist wants it to, you understand, but a fellow expects something a little bit different and devilish when he is vacationing in Paris.

Shades of the immortal "Trilby"! is this the Quarter? Is this romance?

When he returns to Bury-St.-Edmunds or Calgary or Marked Tree, chances are he will tell the boys that this artist life in Paris isn't half what it's cracked up to be, and hazards the guess that the fellows who wrote the "Trilby" and "Zaza" books must have been loaded to the guardrails with absinthe before they took pens in hand.

The picture above is not overdrawn. Travelers' tales have made the Latin Quarter the best advertised and least understood place of its kind in the world.

In America, particularly, opinion is sharply divided into two classes, both wrong. There is the person who never was in Paris, who thinks the Quarter full of dissolute fellows in smocks and flopping hats and flowing ties, whose main purpose in life is to encompass the downfall of artists' models who are, like "Trilby," beautiful but slightly "dumb." And there are those who think they have "done" the Quarter, and say that talk of romance there is the bunk, and the place is as prosaic as a pickle factory.

Recently, however, there arrived in America a young lady of the easy-to-look-at variety, who knows all about the Paris artists' colony at first hand. And, in an interview which she granted not long after landing in New York, she gives a vivid view of life among the artists, and a balanced idea of the world they move in.

Mlle. Christiane Yves has been a mannequin, an artists' model and a motion picture actress, and made good at all three.

The Latin Quarter studio queen posing very demurely for a New York artist

She was crowned Queen of the Latin Quarter at the famous students' ball of 1926, and probably would have been chosen again this year if she had not decided to seek her fortune in America.

"People who say that artist life isn't what it used to be forget that it never was," says Mlle. Yves.

"It hasn't changed much, because men and women don't change much. It never was as wild and gay as the romantic school of fictionists painted it.

"There have been superficial changes, certainly. For instance, the artists and models now live and work in Montparnasse, on the left bank of the Seine, rather than Montmartre, where they used to be. Montmartre is what you call a tourist paradise now, a show place. Some real artists remain, but not many. Some of the studios and student dances are properties and settings, like the drug addict slouching in a resort in the old New York Chinatown.

"Another thing is that the students and artists and models are not as prosperous nor as gay as they were just before the World war.

"Other classes may have recovered, but struggling artists have not. Works of art, except those by the best-known contemporary masters, do not bring any more than they did. And living is so much higher.

"Still they are gay on Montparnasse. Still there are fêtes, like the one at which I was crowned queen. Still they strut and posture and dream, as in the days of Trilby and Little Billee.

"Smocks and flopping hats and flowing ties, always insecurely fastened, are still worn, particularly by the young artists. Of course, the old and established masters make it a point of pride to be as other men, to look like well-dressed bankers or members of the Chamber of Deputies.

Being Queen of the Quarter, Mlle. Yves explains, makes the petty monarch eligible to preside at all students' functions for one year. It makes her professional services more desirable to the young apprentices of art than rubies or fine raiment. It lets her in for a lot of free suppers and wholehearted applause, and it is "good publicity stuff" if one has ambitions for the stage or the movies.

Posing is not among the highly paid professions, she points out, mainly because the students and younger artists haven't the money to give the girls. That is why she turned actress. Yet it remains a popular calling, partly for more practical reasons.

Questioned concerning the type that become models, and the reality of the romance that is supposed to blossom behind the hangings of the studios, Mlle. Yves becomes impatient.

"It is as senseless to ask whether pitiful, irregular 'Trilby' romances still occur, as it is to ask whether girls are good, or people worth saving," she says.

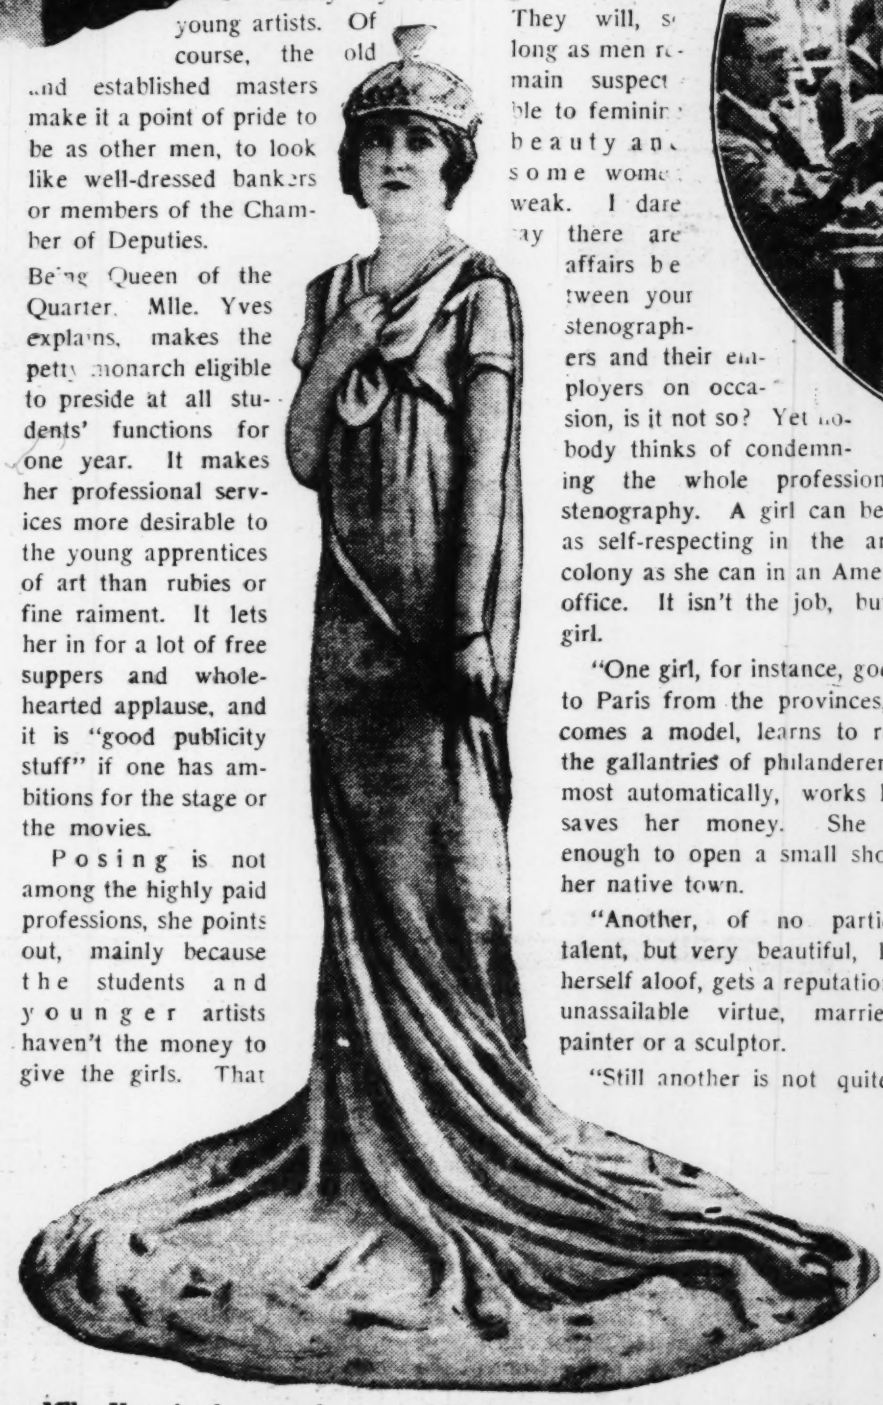

"So foolish to generalize. Of course, those 'Trilby' affairs recur in every generation. They will, so long as men remain susceptible to feminine beauty and some women weak. I dare say there are affairs between your stenographers and their employers on occasion, is it not so? Yet nobody thinks of condemning the whole profession of stenography. A girl can be just as self-respecting in the artists' colony as she can in an American office. It isn't the job, but the girl.

"One girl, for instance, goes up to Paris from the provinces, becomes a model, learns to reject the gallantries of philanderers almost automatically, works hard, saves her money. She gets enough to open a small shop in her native town.

"Another, of no particular talent, but very beautiful, holds herself aloof, gets a reputation for unassailable virtue, marries a painter or a sculptor.

"Still another is not quite so discreet, is swept away by the life, becomes enamored of a shiftless but engaging young artist, and that is the beginning of the end.

"Just like life anywhere, the women have to make their way unprotected in the world of men. The woman pays, true, but she also decides. It is up to her."

Student sculptors modeling from living women in the Academy Julian, the celebrated Parisian art school. The model on the right is Mlle. Fanny, one of the most sought after of Latin Quarter models

"Posing is about one-half of one per cent romance or thrill to ninety-nine and one-half per cent patience and hard work, Mlle. Yves discloses.

Some girls, beautifully built, never can be models, because either their minds or their bodies are not plastic enough.

If a girl has it in her to be a model, it takes time to learn to pose—always excepting the inspired young woman who is an artist in her own soul and knows the requirements of the artist before he speaks.

"And once one is accepted, the work is very hard," Mlle. Yves says. "There is no labor harder than keeping one posture for a long period of time. Sometimes the greater the artist the more drastic his requirements. I have known of a famous master who kept a poor girl standing rigid until she collapsed.

"There are many women artists in Paris now, and, of course, many student classes. The latter, as well as individual painters or sculptors, give the girls work.

"Then, too, many models, since the war, have been adding to their incomes by acting as clothing models part of the time. The demand for pictures may not have increased, but the demand for lovely clothes has. The smart shops always need beautiful models. They pay well. Particularly after one becomes known. When I gained some success as a movie actress I could practically name my own price for an hour's 'work' sitting about in some dressmaker's latest creation."

Mlle. Yves becomes scornful when she is asked if posing for student classes—particularly in the nude or semi-nude—is the hardest part of a model's work.

"It is not embarrassing in the slightest," she says. "Unless they are weak-minded, models take the same matter-of-fact view of the body that the artists do. I never heard a snicker or a giggle in a classroom when a man or woman was posing in the nude. Mixed classes take the most casual attitude in the world toward undraped models. All part of the work. To the artist, even in embryo, the model is only a model. Rarely does he think of her as a woman.

"Furthermore, while the artists are free-and-easy about some things, they would be the first to punish one of their number for taking advantage of a girl who was posing for him. Such an offense would serve to bring artists into disrepute in a city which has come to regard them highly, and such an offender would be sent to Coventry by his fellows.

"How often you see a provincial or a tourist enter the studio of an artist friend, thrilled by the suggestion of intimacy, and furtively on the lookout for mischief, and leave thoroughly disgusted by the matter-of-course attitude of the painter or the sculptor, to whom Yvonne or Delysia or Chloe is just another of the properties of his workshop!

"No misapprehension concerning artist life is more widespread than this; and none is more unjust to both models and artists, as every artist knows. Any danger that lies in the artist life is not there, you may be sure. The perils of undraped posing for artists of any standing are imagined by those least qualified to judge.

"It is not so strange as it sounds. You don't often hear of actors falling madly in love with the leading women whom they are obliged to kiss and fondle in the play. It would be too much like work."

There is no future in Paris for American girl models, even if they would content themselves with the low pay French girls save money on.

Mlle. Yves says that Latin types are preferred, even by expatriated American and English artists, because of the traditions that hover over Montparnasse and Montemartre.

A few American girls earn their living posing. Most of the smart ones get out of it and become gown models, at higher pay. One or two have married successful painters.

If there are few American models in Paris, there are many American artists, and of both sexes, according to Mlle. Yves. Great things are expected of some of them.

"The masters never know quite what to expect of an American student," she says.

"Some of them are afire with artistic impulse and full of potential greatness. Some go over just to enjoy the scenery, have something to do, satisfy a maiden aunt, or 'live the life.' From the first group come really fine craftsmen. The members of the second usually play around for a while,

The Romance of Nikko Cheyne

INSTALLMENT IV.

John Horton, Legionnaire.

NIKKO and Natalie were silent at luncheon, and but for their host's ripple of conversation it is doubtful if a word would have been spoken.

Vilasto talked of painting, great soldiers, his love of gardens flowers, and of open spaces. Fluently, softly, and easily he talked and his voice was like a cello playing in some distant place. And while he talked the boy and girl left their food untouched and looked at each other with eyes that were storing remembrances.

Before Nikko's return Vilasto had pleaded with the little princess, holding her hands.

"Not for myself—not for the good of our people—not even for your sense of duty, but because the boy knew it was right—because his love is strong enough to stand aside—I plead with you——"

In the end he had prevailed.

When Nikko came he had bowed over her hand—kissing the fingers of Princess Natalie like a subject—and Bettany was no more.

Vilasto did not leave them alone together. His faith in love was too strong to take that risk, but after luncheon he moved to a corner of the room and made pretense of examining a time table.

Then it was she whispered:

"I did wrong. I ought to have told you; I had forgotten everything, you see."

"You couldn't do wrong, princess," he said huskily. "Never, never." Then added, "And now you must forget everything again."

"Will you?"

He hesitated.

"That's different, princess. With me there's no need to forget—it doesn't matter."

"I shall always think of you," she said, in a slow, small voice, "climbing up to me, Nikko, and the jump."

They were dangerously near breaking down the rickety defenses.

"The train is at three o'clock, madame," said Vilasto, "if that will be convenient. We can change into a connection at Basle."

"I am ready," said Natalie.

"I gave instructions for a car to be in waiting." He held the gold repeater to his ear. "If it would not be too early to start."

Natalie rose. Nikko held out her coat. For an instant their fingers met, clutched desperately, and drifted apart.

"You will give us your company to the station, Cheyne."

"Yes, Monsieur le Baron."

Vilasto shook his head.

"Monsieur le Baron," he said, "is a person who washes bottles in a royal household. Today let us leave him there. For the few minutes that remain to us, if you do not feel too sourly toward me, I should be proud if you would call me Vilasto, or even, as you English have it, old chap."

Outside the station Nikko bought an armful of flowers and put them in the private compartment Vilasto had secured.

Passersby wondered why the girl at the window and the boy upon the platform were so white and silent.

The guard raised his hand—a whistle was blown.

"Good-by, sir," said Nikko, then raising his eyes, "Good-by, princess."

"Bettany," she pleaded, and her voice snapped like a broken violin string. "O, Nikko! Bettany, for the last time."

But Nikko shut his mouth and stood like a rock.

The couplings wrangled—tightened. From the engine came the "Tchah! Tchah! Tchah!" of released steam. Slowly the train began to move—farther—farther—down the platform.

It was going now—carrying her away forever with gathering speed. But still Nikko stood like one riveted to the ground. Then something—an intolerable restraint that held him—broke loose. Racing forward, he leaped upon the running board, clambered up, and seizing Natalie's hand, smothered it with kisses. A porter yelled. Their white faces brushed together and Nikko dropped lightly to the line. The train gathered speed and swung around a curve. The face at the window was gone.

A cry started from the throat of the little princess:

"You've killed my life—killed my life."

Dropping, she beat the seat cushions with shut hands, then pitched face downward into a cloud of choking dust.

Hands sunk in his pockets, blindly unconscious of what was taking place about him, Nikko Cheyne walked through the streets of Paris. Sometimes he blundered into passersby, who cursed him for a tipsy, ill-mannered foreigner; tram bells clanged; lorries and cars hooted and croaked warnings that he neither heard nor heeded. The world was empty—was a void through which he walked doggedly, aimlessly, without hope or interest. In the Rue St. Dominique a poilu mounted on a bicycle crashed into him and went sprawling across the cobbles.

"Dog of a dog," cried the poilu. "To hell with all such fools;!" Then pointed, "And there's the gate."

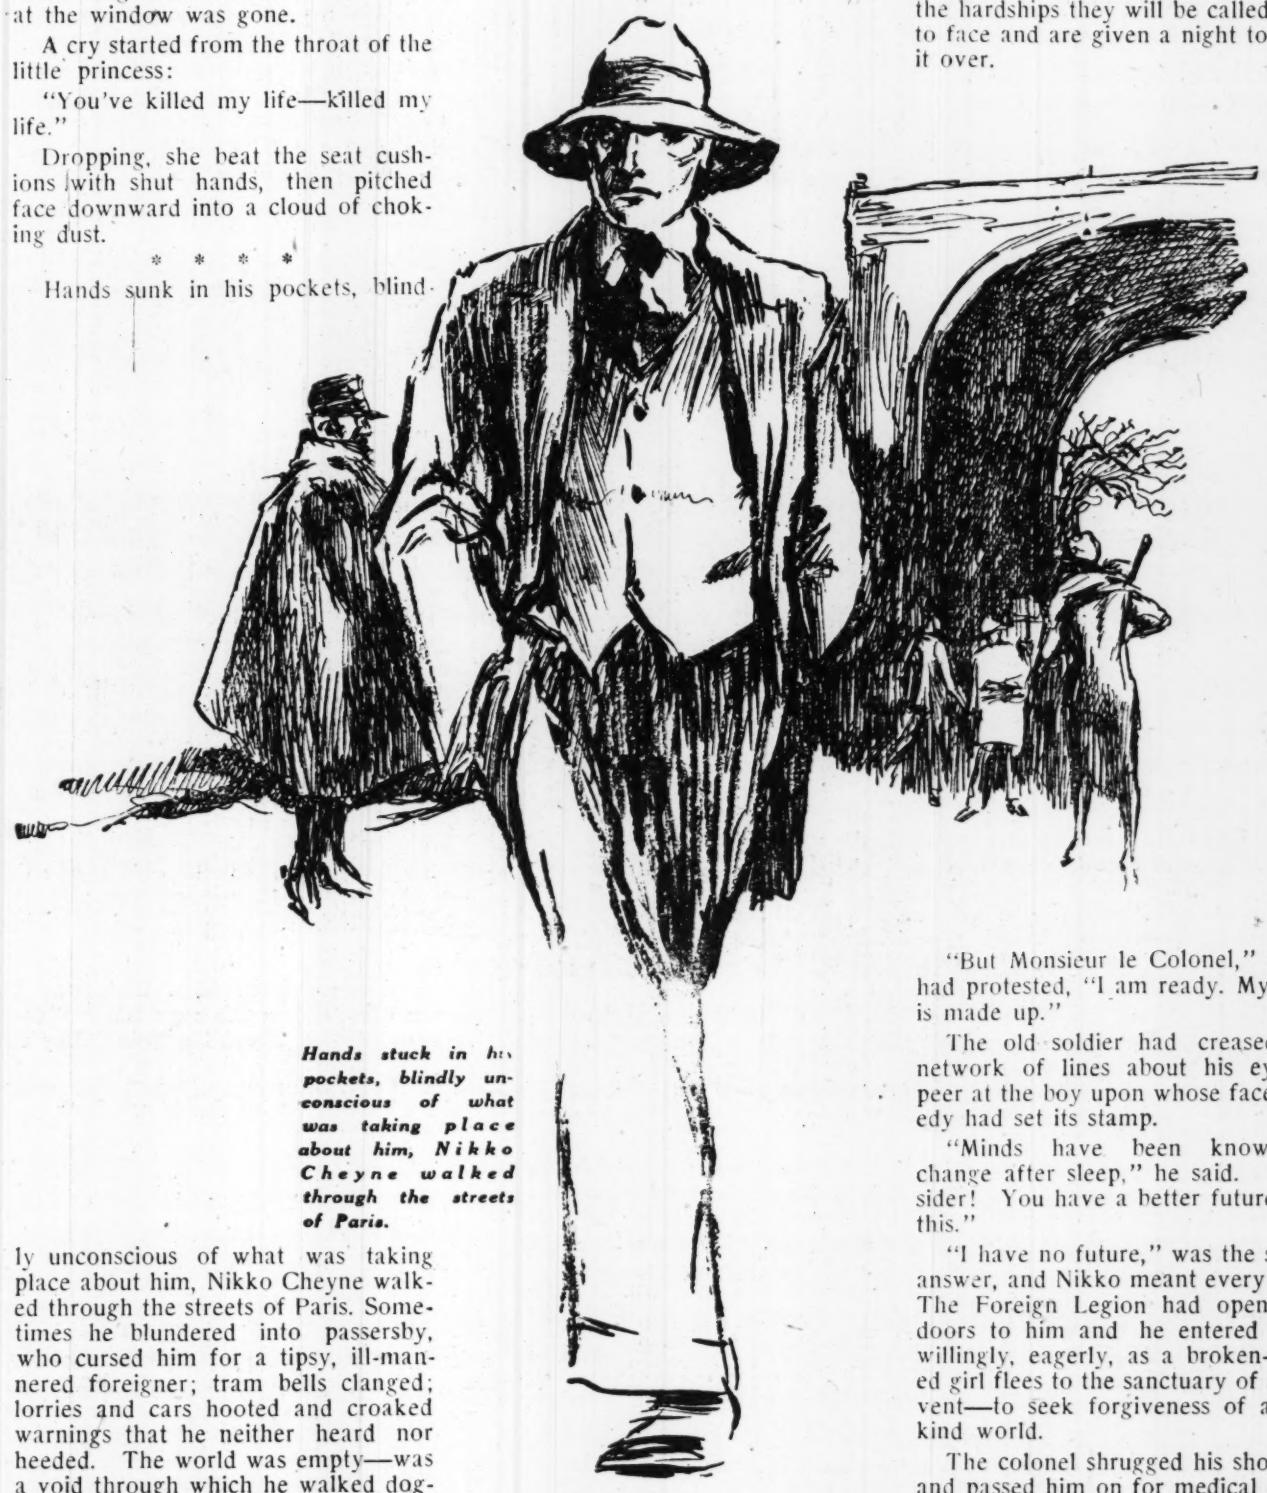

Strung in large characters across a barren wall were the words, "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity."

Nikko looked at them stupidly as the poilu picked up his machine and limped away. Beneath the old republican slogan was a poster, "Bureau de Recruitement pour la Legion Etrangere." An arrow pointed up the street. With a faint stirring of interest Nikko followed its direction with his eyes.

"To hell with all such fools, and there's the gate." A shabby iron gate to a mean and shabby house, before whose front wall leaned and loafed mean and shabby men. The recruiting office of the Foreign Legion! Nikko stopped for no longer than a man might take to light a cigarette, then stiffened, pushed the gate back on its rusty hinges, and, passing the group of idlers, walked through swing doors into the house.

Before him ran a deserted passage, from the far end of which came a rumble of voices.

A door was pushed open and a thick-set individual staggered out, licking his lips and wiping his forehead with the back of an unclean hand.

Seeing Nikko, he said in a scared voice:

"I've done it," and stumbled by into the street.

Nikko pushed open the door through which the man had left.

An N. C. O. in uniform seated at a table stared at him with insolent contempt, tilted back his chair, and inquired:

"What do you want, boy?"

"I don't know—to enlist, I suppose," Nikko replied numbly.

"Suppose? Hadn't you best get back to the cradle till you've found out?"

"I have found out."

"The Foreign Legion is not a cheche," said the N. C. O.

A spark of Nikko's old spirit flashed up in him.

"Monsieur's interests are centered in the nursery; he should have been a governess and not a soldier. Is there no one here to enlist me."

"Of a truth there is," said the N. C. O. grimly. "Follow me, my young friend, and I will put you in the way of wishing you had never been born."

* * * *

Passed fit for service in the Foreign Legion, Nikko walked back toward his hotel through the quiet dusk.

He would like to have completed his enlistment then and there, but the authorities show one mercy to unwary recruits. They are warned of the hardships they will be called upon to face and are given a night to think it over.

"But Monsieur le Colonel," Nikko had protested, "I am ready. My mind is made up."

The old soldier had creased the network of lines about his eyes to peer at the boy upon whose face tragedy had set its stamp.

"Minds have been known to change after sleep," he said. "Consider! You have a better future than this."

"I have no future," was the simple answer, and Nikko meant every word. The Foreign Legion had opened its doors to him and he entered them willingly, eagerly, as a broken-hearted girl flees to the sanctuary of a convent—to seek forgiveness of an unkind world.

The colonel shrugged his shoulders and passed him on for medical examination.

"Return tomorrow then," said he.

"I give my word I will," said Nikko.

As he entered the foyer of his hotel Rosabelle came from her box to meet him.

"Cherie," she cried, "I feared some accident. Twenty-four hours and not a sign of you."

Nikko smiled and gave the porcelain curls a rough caress.

"I am well enough, Rosabelle, but I shall be leaving here tomorrow."

"O, la!" she cried. "But there is a tragedy somewhere. I can see it in your eyes."

Nikko shook his head.

"No tragedy, Rosabelle. I'm a bit tired, perhaps. I have been making the big affairs. I am going to become commander in chief of the French army."

"You have enlisted." Horror was in the voice.

"Why not?"

"O, my son, my son; did I not warn you against chivalry—warn you?"

Nikko turned his head away sharply.

"Are there any letters for me?"

Rosabelle went back into her little box. She knew he was deliberately avoiding interrogation. Her "milord" must have his way.

"A telegram only, that came yesterday morning. I had forgotten, too; there is a gentleman who waits upstairs in your room."

Nikko's brows came down.

"A gentleman. Who?"

"Docteur Smailey—a difficult name."

"Smailey." Nikko hesitated a moment and slowly climbed the stairs, twiddling the unopened telegram in his fingers.

Smailey was asleep on the bed, but he woke with a start when Nikko pushed open the door.

"At last," he said, rubbing his eyes. "I'd begun to despair of seeing you, Nicholas. You know, of course, what has brought me?"

"No."

"But didn't you get the wire?"

"Just now. Why?"

"Read it."

Nikko broke open the seal. The telegram was from Fordyce & Brail, solicitors. It briefly stated that Lord Cheyne had died at Querne on the night of the 14th inst.

Nikko looked up and caught Smailey's watery eyes.

"I am sorry," he said. "Especially for you."

"Thank you; we were old friends. Well, you succeed, Nicholas, succeed to the title."

"I suppose I do." He jerked back his head. "It'll be useful to me where I'm going."

"Goin'? Comin', you mean. Comin' back to Querne with me."

"No. I've other plans."

"They must be changed."

"They can't be changed."

Old Smailey puffed out his red cheeks.

"But damn it, boy, you must be there for the funeral. In self-defense. You know what the neighbors say—that you rode him down."

"I'm afraid that doesn't draw me. Let them say what they like. I am returning to Querne neither now nor later."

"But there's the estate—winding it up. Probate. God knows there's likely to be mess enough. For no other reason you'll be interested in what income you're likely to salve from the wreck."

"Not a bit," said Nikko. "I can appoint some one with power of attorney to attend to what has to be done."

"But why on earth?"

"By this time tomorrow I shall be a Foreign Legionary."

The doctor sat down upon the bed with a gasp.

"God save us," he said, and repeated, "God save us."

"I suppose, if we're any use to him, he will," said Nikko.

With an air of finality, Smailey collected his coat, and handbag, and an umbrella.

"They are all mad, the Cheynes," he said. "Mad, the lot of them. Here you inherit a title and one of the oldest seats in England and it might be a molehill for all the interest you take."

"That is just about the size, it seems to me," said Nikko, and, throwing up his head, laughed and laughed and laughed.

* * * *

As he was preparing to leave the hotel next morning Nikko was addressed in a soft, American drawl by a sprucely dressed man of early middle age.

"Mister Cheyne?"

"Yes."

"My name is Fladgate—James K. Fladgate—and I am an attorney of the city of Philadelphia. I recognized you from the description given me by my daughter."

Nikko looked mystified.

"My daughter is Miss Veronica Fladgate, who is or was a schoolmate of the Princess Natalie, who——"

"Shall we come in here?" said Nikko quickly, for people were passing in and out.

He led the way into the deserted dining room, and together they sat at a table.

"My daughter had, what she considered, the privilege of delivering a note from the princess to you. As a parent, Mr. Cheyne, I reproached her for breaking a rule, but as a man of sentiment I admired her vastly. Being in Paris, I called on my daughter last evening and she told me a very affecting story."

"One moment, sir," said Nikko. "That story is finished and I'd rather not revive it."

The American nodded kindly.

"Why, sure," said he. "Don't imagine, Mister Cheyne, I want to intrude. But a parent is ruled by his offspring, and my little girl wouldn't rest until I had given my word to seek you out and offer what assistance one man may lend to another in a time of trouble."

"That's awfully kind, Mr. Fladgate, but I settled everything yesterday. It was quite simple."

"And would you define yourself as a good settled in your present state of mind?"

"I did what I wanted—I enlisted in the Foreign Legion."

The American's brow went soaring.

"You've grit," said he, "but it seems a kind o' waste."

"I'm joining up today."

"Then I guess that puts paid to everything and cuts me out. I'm really sorry, for if only to please my daughter I'd like to have been of use."

Nikko thought for a moment. An idea came to him and a quick decison.

"You could, but it's a lot to ask. I've just inherited a title and an estate and I shall want somebody to represent me. Now, you as an attorney——"

Fladgate pulled his chair into the table.

"Come on," said he; "let's hear."

It was little that Nikko was able to tell. An old estate incumbered by debts and mortgages—"only the house, I believe, is free of mortgage"—perhaps some investments. He really didn't know.

"I'm not of age or I'd sell out. The place has no memories for me."

"Entained?"

"No."

"No."

"Is there a trust?"

"Not to my knowledge."

"So when you come of age you'll be free to do as you like."

"I suppose I shall."

"And you're burying yourself for five years in the Foreign Legion."

"Five or ten."

"Money, even a little money, in that time, put out judiciously, might accumulate into a big sum."

"I daresay—yes—I suppose——"

But Nikko's mind was elsewhere.

"Are you asking me to take control of your affairs, assuming there are no legal strictures that would make my rulership impossible?

"That's too much to ask. It was just for now I thought—if you really meant——"

"But after the now."

"Things must rip."

The American rubbed his nose reflectively.

"I am a lawyer," he said, "but in this case I'd have you know I'm not looking for a client."

"I know that, sir——"

"But I like you, Lord Cheyne, and just because you've had your wits shaken by a blow that a true democrat would never allow was a fair one, I wouldn't willingly stand by and see you let your whole future go slip. We'll fix up a short deed giving me power to act as your deputy until you come of age. If, after that, you want me to take over and keep the ship afloat, don't be afraid to ask."

"I'm tremendously grateful."

"Maybe," said Fladgate, and took both of Nikko's hands in his, "but I'm going to say you're all kinds of damn fool to trust the first stranger who comes along."

"I can trust myself to tell a friend," said Nikko, and then, with a twist of the features, added, "And, anyway, I don't care."

At a firm of English lawyers a power of attorney was drawn up and handed to James K. Fladgate, of Philadelphia, Pa.

"And now," said he, "you and I are going to eat the finest lunch in Paris, accompanied by the best bottle of wine they can root out of the cellars. For this I have discovered in the course of a long and not unchequered career, no new business and no partnership ended well that started badly. Afterward I shall see you off, Cheyne, and you'll show those bums at the recruiting office the kind of stuff men are made of who talk the English tongue."

* * * *

Nikko Cheyne—or, rather, Legionary John Horton, the name under which he had enlisted,—soldier of the first class of the —th company of the Foreign Legion, had for seven years been regarded by his fellows as a mystery. But as, in that particular branch of service, it was neither held proper nor found healthy to probe into the private affairs of one's fellows, a mystery he was allowed to remain.

Among themselves they said of him that he was fearless, generous, a droll companion upon occasion, but remote. He possessed an ability for withdrawing into mental solitudes of his own from which the noisiest racket in the world—the rattle of tins—the gabble of men's tongues—fights and cursings—failed to arouse him.

When, as a new recruit—a bleu—this characteristic was first observed, steps were taken to jolt it out of him. But the persecution of old soldiers and the savagery of N. C. O.'s alike broke down before a wall of utter indifference. From time immemorial it has been held just and proper that a recruit should go through the mill and suffer bodily discomfort and mental anguish until such a time as his mind and muscle has been broken to the ways of his fellows.

When Nikko thought the persecution had gone on long enough, he had risen from his bed, yawned, and struck his chief tormentor on the mouth.

"You talk too much," he said, "not that it matters to me what you say—but it's a pity to talk too much."

The fight that resulted was the chief subject of discussion in the barrack room for many weeks. They had fought after the fashion of the Legion, with anything and everything, barring pistol or steel, that came to hand. It lasted for twenty-eight excitement-packed minutes, and ended in the mutual unconsciousness of both contestants. Nikko was knocked endways by a loose boot, but not before he had planted a five hundred and fifty pound right swing on his opponent's jaw.

Since it is clearly waste of time to try to annoy any one who is neither susceptible to annoyance nor afraid of taking care of himself, the hazing died rapidly. Besides, as they truly said, it is a foolish and risky business to fight with a man who is not angry. An angry man loses his head and lays himself open to a variety of attacks, but the man who is merely philosophical has a tremendous advantage in a scrap. Nikko Cheyne, for this cause, was left alone. He was not disliked, but was never popular. This was understandable, since popularity in any company depends upon giving away to others bits of oneself. That he never did, hence the mystery that enveloped him, but he gave away what, on the whole, was more greatly appreciated—money and hospitality. His two hundred a year—in that community of halfpenny a day mercenaries—was regarded as riches beyond dreams of avarice.

The —th company became famous as the wealthiest and most blessed in the Legion. Nikko's free handedness was a byword. But he did not use money to buy himself favor or immunity from work, as once had been rashly suggested by a fellow legionary, a Greek, who went by the nickname "Opopo." Nikko took Opopo by the heels and swept the barrack square with him, slinging what was left into the cookhouse rubbish bin.

"Listen," he said, addressing the dusty head that reared itself slowly out of a mess of ashes and potato peelings. "Listen, you Greek swine. I joined the Legion because I wanted work—not because I wanted the favor of scum like you."

It was the nearest approach to a revelation of himself Nikko had ever made, and was the cause of his becoming nicknamed "Le Travailleur"—The Industrious. So Nikko cleaned his own boots—washed his own fatigue uniforms at Hell's Circle—and waxed and polished his leather straps and cartridge pouches as vigorously as the poorest legionnaire in the company.

If only on account of the tremendous degree of physical fitness the life inspired, he found it endurable.

Eighteen months after his enlistment the great war broke out, and so began four years charged to the hilt with hardship and adventure. During those years Nikko fought on a variety of fronts. His company was in the defense of Verdun and stood unshaven before the successive waves of assault flung against the lines by the army of the crown prince. At Verdun, Nikko picked up four wounds, a medaille militaire, and an offer of promotion, which he refused.

While in hospital at Chalons-sur-Saone he came of age and met James K. Fladgate again. The loss of Bettany was still so present in his mind that he shrank from a meeting that would revive the affair into a more vivid light. But Fladgate had traveled from London to see him, and it was impossible to refuse.

The gray-haired lean American was war mad and had come to Europe to prosecute his share of it.

"Don't worry over any polite

A MIDSUMMER NIGHTMARE

A Reporter's Instinct Solves a Baffling Mystery. A Story from Real Life

AS THE sweltering night wore on, each hour seemingly an age, the girl's stuffy little third floor rear room became even more stuffy and unbearable. Sleep was out of the question. The girl tossed from side to side on her narrow bed, all covers cast aside. Even her flimsy silk pajamas seemed intolerable.

Finally, tired of counting the hours till dawn, the girl leaped up, snatched a couple of pillows and a coverlet and opened the door to the hall. No one was in sight. The girl hastened up two flights to the roof. She found she had the roof to herself. She spread the coverlet and pillows on the hot tin behind the stairway shed. Soon a breeze stirred and the girl fell asleep.

While she slept clouds gathered quickly and the wind rose. Lightning played across the clouds and in the distance was the rumble of thunder. Still she slept. Then the storm broke overhead, and the rain descended in sheets. The girl awoke with a start, puzzled. Then came realization.

Frightened, she fled down the stairs and found the wind had slammed her door shut. It was locked, and the keys were in her coat pocket.

Some one was coming up the stairs with a heavy tread. The girl fled back up the stairs, crouching against the door to the roof. The shadow was visible at the bottom of the flight. Terror-stricken, the girl opened the door and stepped out into the rain, closing the door after her and locking it with the bolt. Soon there was a heavy pounding on the door.

The girl hastened to the fire escape and quickly descended. At an open window she paused a moment, then stepped into the room. Groping about in the dark, she bumped into a chair. Her extended hand at the same moment touched a human face. She screamed and slumped to the floor in a dead faint.

Her scream roused every one on the floor. Some one called a policeman, who, receiving no response to the raps with his nightstick, crashed down the door. With the aid of his pocket torch, he located and snapped on the light.

There, in the center of the tiny room, he beheld a man, fully clad, slumped in an easy chair, his head bent far forward, slightly to one side, and an unconscious girl in blue pajamas stretched at his feet.

A knife was deeply imbedded in the man's throat. With hardly a second glance at the man, the policeman hastily bent over the girl, plainly apprehensive. He saw at once she was breathing, and a swift examination disclosed no sign of injury.

"Guess she just fainted," muttered the policeman to the half dozen persons who had followed him into the room. "Get me some water, and one of you telephone to headquarters for Detective Captain Connell."

Liberally sprinkled with water, the girl was soon revived. Fear was in her eyes as she looked about, dazed.

"What happened to him?" barked the policeman, nodding toward the body in the chair.

"I—I don't—know," sobbed the girl. "I never saw this room—before."

"Quit your stallin' and tell me who he is!" snapped the officer.

"I don't know. I never——"

"That's what they all say. You might as——"

The girl swooned again, crumpling in a heap near the bed.

"Well, I'll be damned!" roared the policeman. "Ain't women the limit? They don't blink an eye at sticking a man in the neck, an' then flop over in a heap when asked his name. Don't it beat all?"

The officer busied himself with the water again. The girl was just regaining consciousness when Captain Connell arrived with two detectives and a newspaper reporter.

"What have we here, McGrath?" inquired the captain.

"Guess there ain't much mystery to this here murder, sir," replied McGrath. "Looks like the female here jabbed the gent in the neck, then yelled and keeled over. Her yells woke up the house, somebody or other hollered for the cops, and I broke down the door. The gent was sittin' right where he's sittin' now when I come in, but the girl was in a faint at his feet. I got her to life again and was askin' her to wise me up on the situation when she decided to faint again. That's as far as I got with the investigation. You see——"

"We'll see what we'll see, McGrath," the captain cut in. "Meanwhile, get these folks out of here and question them in the hall. Don't let any one leave until I give you the word."

As McGrath and the others trooped out, the captain bent over to examine the body while a detective tried to soothe the sobbing girl.

"Funny!" muttered Connell. "There isn't a sign of a finger print on that knife handle." Then, turning to the girl, he asked:

"What's your name?"

"Ella Jaycox," she answered. "But I don't know that man, and I've never been in this room before. I don't know how I ever came to mistake this room for mine."

"Where is your room?"

"On the third floor."

"Then how'd you come in here? This is on the second floor."

Miss Jaycox then told how the heat had driven her to the roof, how the storm had roused her and how, finding her door locked from the inside and hearing footsteps, she had fled to the roof. Then, fearing she was pursued, she had hastened down the fire escape in the driving rain, had failed to keep count of the floors, and had entered the first window she found open, thinking it was to her room.

"Reilly, suppose you go up on the roof and look things over, then come down the fire escape and in through the window," Connell directed a detective. "Her bedding ought to be up there yet."

The detective returned in a few minutes, but not via the fire escape. With the soaked pillows and coverlet under one arm and a drunken man held fast with the other, Reilly pushed his way through the door.

"I found this drunk snoring on the steps leading to the roof and the bedding where the girl said it would be. This bird is too drunk even to talk."

At the same time McGrath appeared in the doorway and announced: "They tell me out here the dead one there is Sam Hodges, the lady killer of the carpet weaving plant, and the girl is a stenographer out of a job. Hodges' specialty seemed to be makin' love to the other feller's girl, they say."

Captain Connell stepped over to Miss Jaycox. "I'm sorry, little girl, but I'm afraid we'll have to hold you—at least until we can see what this is all about. You'll have to admit it was rather unusual for you to be found in the same room with a murdered man, even if the circumstances are as you describe them."

"But I didn't do it!" cried the girl, hysterically. "I tell you I don't know the man, never saw him before, and never was in this room until tonight. You can't arrest me for that."

At headquarters the captain questioned her further. But she could tell him nothing more. Several hours later the drunk, sobered, was put on the grill. But he remembered nothing except that he had been drinking most of the night, had returned to his home and climbed innumerable stairs only to find locked what he thought was the door to his room.

After pounding on it a while, he said, he fell asleep. Witnesses also came forward and proved his alibi.

But there was no one to support Miss Jaycox's story. And Harold Turner, a hustling young district attorney, made much of that fact.

Eager to make a showing in his first murder case, Turner called in newspaper men later in the day and announced he would seek to have the girl indicted for Hodges' murder.

"It seems to me," he said, "the case is strong enough to assure conviction. I have an idea that Hodges and the girl were on the roof together, that something occurred and they quarreled; that Hodges returned to his room alone and the girl later followed, using the fire escape, and stepped in and stabbed Hodges while he was probably dozing in his chair. Then, frightened by her deed, the girl screamed and fainted. That's how most women would act. And that's——"

Frank Kennedy, the reporter who had accompanied the police to the murder scene, interrupted the district attorney. "Nothing to it," he declared. "That girl's innocent. She isn't the type that would go to a roof in pajamas to meet a man, in the first place. In the second place, no one has disproved her statement that she did not know Hodges, that she had never seen him before. Of course, you can easily indict, but you'll never——"

"O, won't I?" shouted the district attorney. "Well, you may be sure I'd never ask an indictment if I wasn't pretty certain of a person's guilt. Gentlemen, that's all I care to say today."

Kennedy went immediately to police headquarters and obtained permission to talk to the girl in the detention room. "Please do not believe, Miss Jaycox," he began, "that I am one of those who wish to fasten this crime upon you. I know you are innocent and I want to prove to others that you are innocent. I hope you will let me help you out of this tangle."

There was something about Kennedy's frank blue eyes and red hair that appealed to the girl.

"Thank you, Mr. Kennedy," she said. "I hope you can, but I shouldn't like to inconvenience you."

The reporter wasted no time in rushing to the aid of the girl. Straight back to the scene of the murder he went. He found Patrolman McGrath still on guard at the door. McGrath let the reporter in. Kennedy made a rapid examination of the room.

Nothing there offered a clew. He stepped out on the fire escape and made his way to the roof, looked over every inch of it, then went back to the fire escape.

Kennedy was about to enter the room where Hodges had been slain when he was attracted by a voice. He traced it to the adjoining room. The voice rose and fell now in pitiful supplication and now in almost tearful rage. The reporter stole over to the closed window the better to hear. But his shadow revealed his presence and the voice within shouted:

"You needn't stalk me like that, I tell you. Bring in your bulls. I could tell 'em something pretty quick. Sam Hodges could tell you I ain't really to blame."

The voice trailed off and the reporter had Captain Connell and the district attorney notified. Both arrived in a hurry. They knocked on the door and a voice, high and piping, cried:

"Come on in! I'm ready for you bulls!"

With drawn pistol, Connell flung open the door. If he had expected to be met with a hail of bullets he was mistaken. Seated on a chair was an old man, trembling and muttering a prayer. For a moment he paid no attention to the intruders. Then he piped:

"Too bad Sam Hodges had to get himself killed! Fine fellow he was. But he was drinkin' too much over at Tim Farrell's place and Sam won all my money—$8. We come back to Sam's room, where he said he'd give me a chance to win it back. But he didn't. He fell asleep. I was reachin' for it in his pocket when he woke up and grabbed for my throat.

"I hauled out my knife an' as he was gettin' up from the chair I drove the knife in his neck. Then I ran back to Tim Farrell's and stayed there until they put me out. Then I walked around the rest of the night and most of the day, and I just climbed in here from the fire escape a minute ago when the bulls looked in the window."

Tears came to the old man's eyes and he raised a deformed right hand, encased in a glove, to wipe them away. It was the gloved hand that had weilded the knife. Then resumed his prayers.

He was still mumbling incoherent prayers when they led him away to the patrol wagon.

Things New and Old About The Bible :

By W. P. KING
Pastor First Methodist Church, Athens, Ga.

IT IS becoming more and more embarrassing for church institutions that are involved in the meshes of compulsory military training. If some of our sticklers for traditionalism would go back far enough they would find that this is an apostasy from early Christianity.

The lines are being clearly drawn between the advocates of war and the advocates of peace.

A note of desperation is readily detected in the utterance of representatives of the war department. They make free use of their favorite color "red" and in passing it around they take in a very large territory. The number of distinguished Americans who are allured by soviet gold and Moscow money is very alarming. They are rather high-priced men, and the Russian government must be immensely wealthy to purchase the service of these persons.

The Industrial Defense Association of Boston makes an exposure of the dangerous reds who are in league with soviet Russia. The marked men are so distinguished for their intellectual achievements and for a high type of character that it appears as if our standing in society demands that we join the company of these respectable reds.

Think of it, gentle reader. The list of dangerous citizens includes: Dr. William P. Merrill, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian church, New York city; the Honorable William Howard Taft, chief justice of the supreme court of the United States; the Rt. Rev. Charles H. Brent, Protestant Episcopal bishop of western New York; Archbishop John J. Glennon, Roman Catholic Archbishop of St. Louis; President W. H. P. Faunce, of Brown university; Bishop Luther B. Wilson, Methodist Episcopal bishop resident in New York; Dr. Stailer Mathews, dean of the divinity school of Chicago university; Doctors Arthur J. Brown and Robert E. Speer, of the Presbyterian board of foreign missions; Dr. John R. Mott, of the Y. M. C. A.; Hon. Henry Morgenthau, the Hon. Robert Lansing, the Hon. Elihu Root, Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, the Hon. John W. Davis, late candidate for the presidency of the United States; Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, Dr. W. Russell Bowie, of Grace church, New York; Bishop James Cannon, Jr., George Foster Peabody, Frank A. Vanderlip, Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, William Allen White, Thomas J. Lamont, of the J. P. Morgan company; Professor Stephen P. Dugan, of the Institute of International Education; President Edwin A. Alderman, of the University of Virginia, and President A. Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard university; Professor Bliss Perry, of Harvard university; Dr. Joseph Swain, former president of the University of Indiana.

The American Citizenship foundation regards Miss Jane Adams, recently acclaimed the first citizen of Chicago, as the third most dangerous person of America. Sherwood Eddy is another dangerous red.

Among the organizations on the blacklist of this organization are the League of Women Voters, the League for Industrial Democracy, the American Association of University Women, the Fellowship of Reconciliation, the International Student Forum and the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, and of course the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

The militarists are putting forth their utmost patriotic endeavor as they doubtless realize the difficulty of saving their country against such strong and illustrious opponents. Some of the "reds" connected with the Federal Council of Churches make quite a formidable list. They are: Bishop John M. Moore, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the chairman of the executive committee of the Federal Council, and Mr. Frank H. Mann, president of the Union Mortgage company, as treasurer of the council. Bishop McDowell, Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, president of the Princeton Theological seminary. Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, pastor of Broadway Tabernacle and Dr. Francis E. Clark, head of the Christian Endeavor movement.

What if these "dangerous citizens" should succeed in persuading the nations of the earth to settle their differences by an appeal to reason rather than by an appeal to brute violence.

The militarists give indication by their desperation that they are waging a losing fight: "Whom the Gods would destroy they first make mad."

According to President Coolidge our need as a nation is intellectual demobilization. In the recent movement towards further disarmament the official declaration from Washington was: "The American government and people are convinced that competitive armaments constitute one of the most dangerous contributing causes of international suspicion and discord and are calculated eventually to lead to war."

This is evidence that the nations must pursue a different course, for there is the fallacy of the whole theory of preparedness. To be prepared, the United States would have to have greater military strength not only than Germany, France and England, but greater than all possible combinations. Any nation to be prepared would have to be stronger than all possible combinations, which reduces it to an absurdity. The race of preparedness is the race of death. The only real preparedness must result from international relationships so that the nation is strong with the strength of the entire group; I am an advocate of this kind of preparedness, and it is the only preparedness which will prevent war.

In the early stage of society the only self-defense of the individual was his individual ability to fight, but I much prefer that self-defense which the courts and law throw about me. So it must be with nations. There is no difference so great but that the nations can settle it without resorting to physical violence.

Reactionaries suppose that everything has to continue as it has in the past. I wonder that some people do not break their necks looking back on the past. It is not a mere idiosyncrasy—I like to use a shorter word when it will do as well or better, it is idiocy. There are those who are always looking back on the past, but who never learn any wisdom from the past. They are like the old negro who said, "My mind kinder comes and goes," only their minds mostly go. A poor shell-shocked soldier replied to an inquiry by saying, "I am getting on very well, I sleep and eat and feel all right, I don't have any mind, but I don't seem to miss it," There are a number of controversialists today who do not use their mind and who do not seem to miss it.

The time has come to put war advocates on notice that we refuse to be browbeaten by any amount of bluff or bluster and that we will persistently resist the cultivation of the war spirit for which we so roundly abused Germany in 1914. We now find this curious contrast between Germany and the United States. While Germany furnished a free biological mission to the Argentine republic in the interest of health, the United States sent to Brazil a naval mission of 36 officers, headed by a rear admiral, to train the republic in the arts of war.

It is nothing short of stupidity to allow ourselves to drift towards another war. With increased methods of destructiveness in poison gas and death germs, whole cities could be destroyed in a few hours. It means race suicide. There would not be enough people left to hold memorial exercises. After all when shall we most reasonably expect to find the insidious influence of the motive of mammon?

Those whose livelihood are involved in war may be expected to create a war scare. The munition makers are very fervent in their patriotism. They are prophets of the certainty of wars for the future because they desire that their future profits shall be certain. If war to these "patriotic" citizens meant financial loss or loss of life by a gas attack, they would become so pink in their pacifism that Tolstoi would look like a rampart militarist.

They have a super-abundance of proxy patriotism. They are more than willing to furnish the guns and receive the gains. Their militarism after all is mammonism. Their patriotism is located in the purse. They have no interest in the cultivation of peace so long as it interferes with their vested interests. The jingo politician finds his opportunity in appealing to the provincialism, partisanship and baser prejudices of the people. His politics and official position and patriotism all blend into one. He advocates the urgency of military preparation provided it means a preparation for his political position. He keeps one ear to the ground and both eyes on the main chance. The yellow newspapers see red. What if the rest of the world should combine against us and we should not be ready? The yellow newspapers see the peril of the yellow races, whereas our greatest peril is the yellow metal of commercial exploiters.

then cable for money to come home.

"That is, when their people have money, or when they can swallow their pride and admit defeat easily.

"There is another side to the picture. Many American and English boys of no particular means fail as artists and still stay on. Sometimes they sink very low. Some become guides, and are on the payrolls of what I have heard an Iowan call the 'gyp joints' of Montmartre. Some take to drugs and disappear from the artists' colony altogether. Once in a while one prostitutes his art and paints or draws the originals of those vile postcards that are for sale in all parts of Paris, I regret to say.

"Of course, even such poor artists must have models, and there are girls to pose for them. So hard is it to generalize and praise or condemn a class."

And every now and then an American girl who was sent across the sea to study art meets with a failure corresponding to that of the boy, and then there is a real tragedy of the studios. The hangers-on to the fringe of the Parisian night life include not a few country girls from this and other lands who left home with high ideals and aspirations and then encountered storm and shipwreck and went down. That, Mlle. Yves points out, has no significance.

Most of the girls who took to posing years ago hoped to learn about art cheaply and aspired to paint their own canvases in time, Mlle. Yves says. Nowadays, however, they start posing, knowing that the movie directors, seeking a type, or a beautiful girl to "walk on," go first to the studios.

Mlle. Yves has been painted by Monet, famous French artist, and has visited him and his family at their country home. She had been drawn by Renaud and Iselin, noted pen-and-ink sketchers.

Mlle. Yves does not pose any more, except for artists who are her friends. She finds in the movies quite as satisfactory an emotional and artistic outlet. And ever so much more money.

The Romance of Nikko Cheyne

phrases of Wilson's," said he. "We'll be right along here with the rest of you." Then, taking Nikko's hand, "But you look fine—swelled up to manhood. I'll say hardship is your right diet. Now to business."

After death duties had been paid and debts discharged, the Querne estate had realized a net total of 30,000 pounds.

"That sum you can do with as you please. You can put it in gilt edge stock and let it accumulate—you can gamble it or chuck it in the sea."

"I leave it to you."

"Still of the same mind?"

Nikko nodded.

"Don't expect I'll ever touch it. War isn't over yet, and——"

Mr. Fladgate held up a hand.

"S— you don't want to talk that way. A boy of your years. Surely it can't still be as bad——"

Nikko closed up like a clam.

"I didn't mean that. But after what I've seen of fighting, the chances of coming through aren't too good. Put the money in something useful—why not munitions?"

Mr. Fladgate's features broke into a crooked smile.

"I guess," he said "you've got the makings of a financier. That's your wish, then?"

"Whatever you like. I leave it to you, only——"

"Well——"

"I don't want to hear about it—much."

"Right; then I'll carry on till you do. Any time you write there'll be an answer ready for the mail."

"Thanks."

There was an awkward silence.

"This war is hell," said Mr. Fladgate.

"Do you know I rather like it," said Nikko. "Must sound rot—but I do."

Mr. Fladgate cocked an eye at him and nodded shrewdly. Nikko frowned. He knew the natural sentiment of his visitor would sooner or later reveal itself and, though he half wanted to talk of the past, an inhibition prevented him.

"Kind of rough life in the Legion?"

"Not too bad when you're used to it."

"Suppose you'll cut out at the end of your five years' term."

"If the war's over I might. If not—but I haven't thought much about it."

"Veronica's married, d'you know."

In spite of himself Nikko could not help flinching.

"Good luck to her."

"Married an Englishman, too. Friend of yours, Joris Howard."

"We were at Marlborough together. A first-class chap."

"I guessed you'd be surprised."

"Yes, rather!" but Nikko's tone had become apathetic again.

Then another silence.

"Read the papers ever?"

Nikko shook his head.

"Not much time."

"I see." Mr. Fladgate nodded, paused, took courage, and went for it. "That little country, Sciriel, has kept out of the war up to yet."

"Yes—so I heard" said Nikko.

"But for how long they'll be able——"

"Why not?" cried Nikko, suddenly. "Why should they be dragged in—what possi——" He broke off short and rubbed his mouth with a dry hand. "Say something nice to your—to Veronica from me—won't you."

Mr. Fladgate nodded understandingly and touched the bandage on Nikko's shoulder.

"Wound healing all right?"

"First rate."

"That's the advantage of a healthy mind and a healthy system."

"Don't know about the mind."

"You don't have one without t'other." Then, dropping his voice to a tender note "O, boy, can't you tell me that other wound is easier, too?"

Nikko made no reply.

Mr. Fladgate rose.

"Well, I'll carry on, Cheyne. There are just these papers I'll have you sign"

The papers were signed and witnessed by two ward doctors.

"And you don't want me to write."

"It's doubtful if I'd get the letters," said Nikko. "Good-by and thanks awfully."

In the train going north Mr. Fladgate could not rid his mind of a curious medieval impression.

"Not of this age," he kept saying. "Too constant for this age—kind of old world chivalry. Well, well—takes all sorts——"

The train steamed on.

* * * *

The war was not over when Nikko's first term of enlistment expired. In consequence he signed on for a second five years and became a veteran.

He had given some offense by refusing to accept promotion, but, as his seniors said, it was his own affair.

"A brilliant soldier—courage—endurance — resource — but without a vestige of ambition."

But Nikko was not the silent, remote figure of his first months of service. That he continued to stay in the Legion was no longer due to grief at the loss of Bettany and inability to see any future happiness for himself. The Legion had become a habit. Even the tenderest emotion and the greatest loss, with the passing of years recedes from the immediate foreground of a man's thoughts. There had never been, nor ever would be, another woman to dethrone Bettany from the place she occupied in his heart. That was unassailable, but she had become so much more a memory than a reality that even if the pain were less the great idea of her still remained. It was the original idea, hastily conceived and instantly accepted in the Rue St. Dominique, that kept Nikko Cheyne in Africa—a legionnaire at a few sous a day. The idea had been sublimated into a fixed belief that the flame of his existence had flared up and been extinguished in a single episode. This being so, he was as well in one place as another. He had clung to that belief and in time it had become a habit of mind which took precedence over the cause which had inspired it. He never consciously regretted what he had done, but as months ran into years long bridled ambition sometimes spurred him to sudden resentments against dull routine and the narrow horizon that cramped his mental activity and independence. During the war these prickings had not troubled him. War itself was a form of expression, but after the war, with little else to occupy him but drills, astiquage and the unending monotony of barrack life, the sharp rowels of that spur were continually at work.

Thus, though he was at times a livelier companion, Nikko Cheyne, in his second term of service, was not the perfect soldier he had been during the first. He chafed against discipline and more than once fell foul of the authorities.

"See here, old Travailleur," said a corporal who, unlike the usual run of Legion N. C. O.'s, did not care to see a good man get into trouble, "your ways need mending. Why spoil a clean record. Hein?"

Nikko shrugged his shoulders. The N. C. O. went on:

"The road you are taking leads one way only, which is something you know or should know. Men who have started as well, aye, better, than you, Travailleur, have found their way through le pleton des hommes punis to the 'Joyeuse.'"

But Nikko was not to be scared by talk of punishments or even the threat of the "Joyeuse," the dreaded penal battalion, whose shadow stands like a grim sentinel in the path of the unwary.

"Life is dull without a few risks," he answered. "There is little here to interest a man."

The corporal swelled visibly.

"Then you should have taken promotion. Who knows, by now you might be a corporal like me."

Nikko laughed.

"Is it as fine as all that," and laughed again.

"Stomach of a blue cat," cried the corporal, "would you laugh at the noncommissioned rank?"

His dignity was outraged.

"Either you have the cafard or you are a pariah without pride." Again the little man swelled his cheeks.

Nikko was not as callous to abuse as formerly.

"When I swell up with pride," he answered, "it will be for a better cause than cursing at a rabble of damned legionnaires."

After that the lightnings blazed and the wretchedest fatigues were imposed on him.

SPORTS—GAMES—PUZZLES—RIDDLES

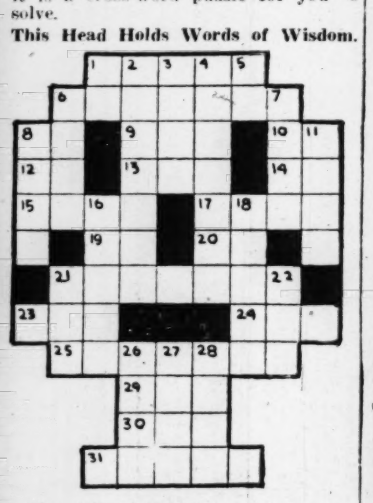

THE PUZZLE COLUMN

BY CECILLE LYON.

—1—

Have you ever tried to carve faces with a scroll saw? Last Tuesday, after the manual training class was dismissed, Ben and Tom made a head like this one below, and showed it to some of the Puzzlers. These experts soon divided it into squares—and now it is a cross-word puzzle for you to solve.

This Head Holds Words of Wisdom.

The definitions are:

Horizontal.

1. To accept.
6. Weather conditions.
8. To perform.
9. Atmosphere.
10. Railroad (abbr.)
12. Either
13. Mountains (abbr.)
14. That is (abbr.)
15. Low degree of temperature.
17. Baking contrivance.
19. Upon.
20. Negative.
21. Shyness.
23. Donkey.
24. Snake-like fish.
25. Fashionable.
29. To consume.
30. Playing card.
31. Cream (from French.)

Vertical.

1. Boy's nickname.
2. Priceless stone.
3. To leave out.
4. Clergymen.
5. Tennis tournament (abbr.)
6. Heart (of fruit.)
7. One of the great lakes.

16. Sleeping place for domestic animals.
18. Elects.
21. Manuscripts (abbr.)
22. Expression of agreement (slang.)
26. Period of time.
27. Delicate, woven material.
28. Individual article.

—2—

Guess this seven word diamond. The second word means to knot, the third is an article of furniture, fifth means to excite, sixth before.

L I B . . A R Y

The whole is a means of reaching a higher altitude; beheaded it is a reptile; beheaded and curtailed twice it means to sum up; its first three letters spell a young boy. What is it?

—4—

Fill the blanks in this sentence with two words, of like pronunciation, but different spellings and meanings:

"The gold was ——— with a ——— toward its disposal in Jewel City."

NICELY PLACED.

Little Boy: "Please, may I have my arrow?"

Lady: "Certainly. Where is it?"

Little Boy: "I think it's sticking in your cat."

NO FEELING.

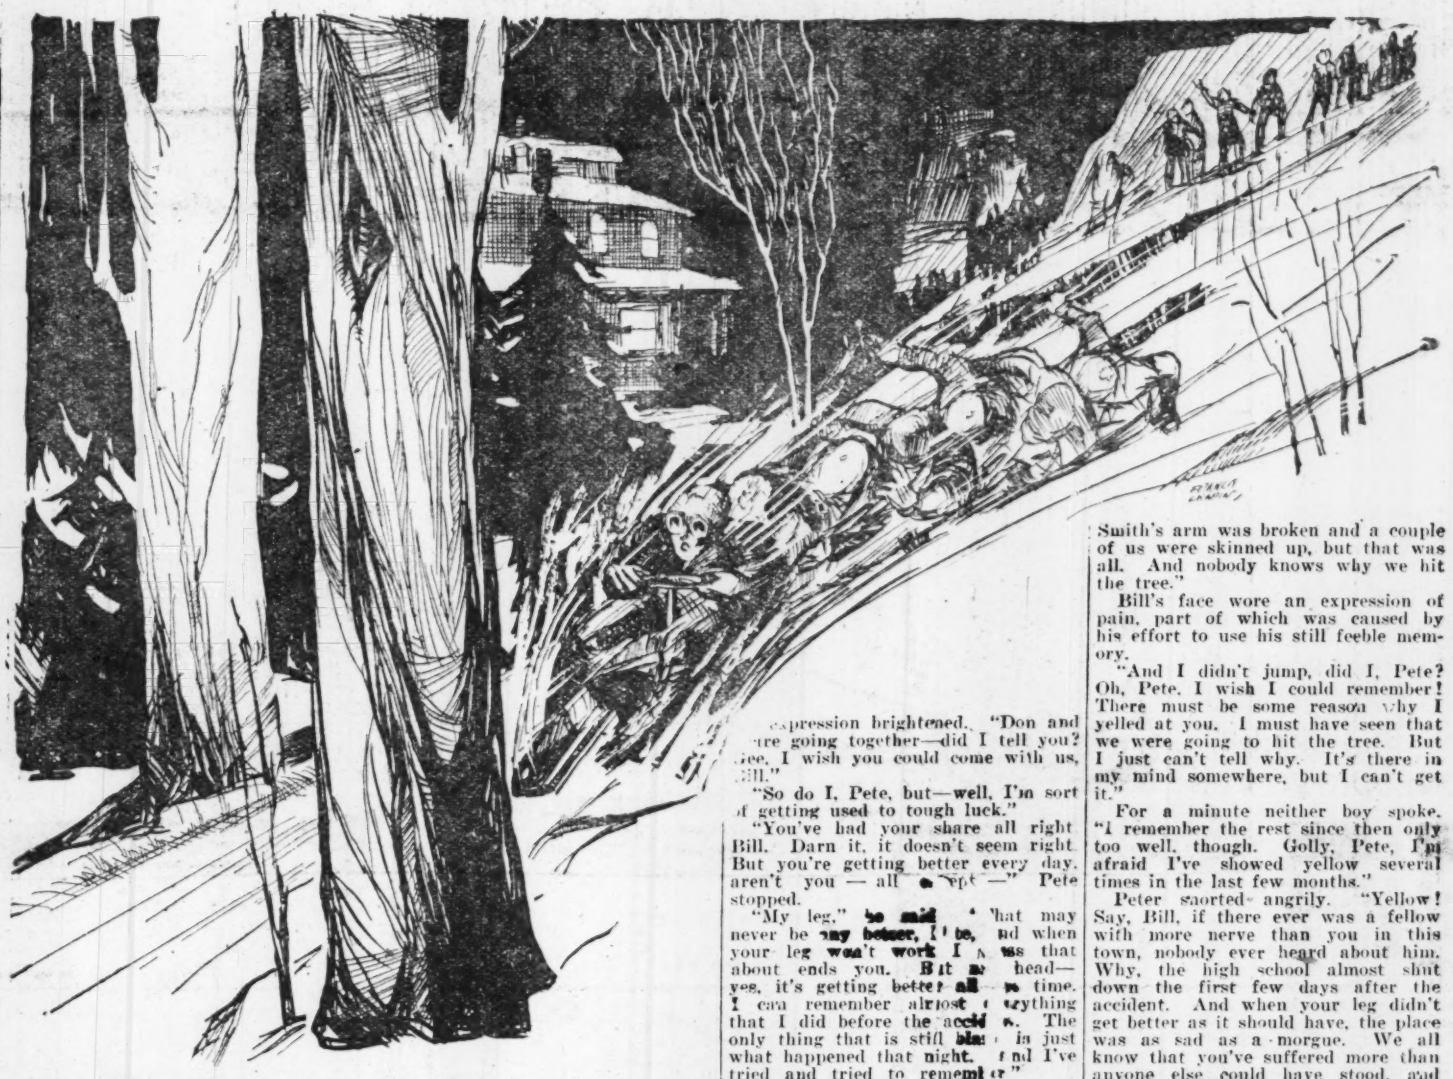

Teacher: "I'm going to give you zero in this test."

Student: "That means nothing to me."

Behind the Norstrum House

BY W. BOYCE MORGAN

Author of "The Abandoned Mine," "The Barricaded Gate," "Raging Waters," etc.

"'You screamed for us to jump and jammed on the sprag'"

A Tale of a Bob Sled, a Broken Leg, and Baseball.

INSTALLMENT I.

Spring sunshine!

In other years it had meant happiness to Bill Perkins. It had brought baseball, and the approaching end of another school term. It still brought those things to all of the other boys in Shartlon—but not to Bill.

He sat at the window of his modest little home, looking out at the bright spring day. Just so had he sat for many days past. In a few minutes one of the boys from high school would stop to see him—somebody stopped every day. It was kind of them, and helped him keep from being lonesome.

His mother entered the room. He turned to her. "What time is it, mother?" he asked.

"Almost four o'clock, Bill," she answered. "One of the boys should be along pretty soon."

Just then there was a shrill whistle in front of the house, and a minute later a loud knocking was heard on the door. "There's someone now," said Mrs. Perkins, hurrying to admit the newcomer.

"That's Pete's whistle," said Bill. He had grown so used to hearing his various friends approach that he could tell each by some distinguishing sign.

"Hi, Bill? How's the boy this afternoon?" A tall, slim youth with dark, curly hair entered the room, tossed his books upon the floor, and perched on the arm of Bill's chair. "Sorry to be late, but they were electing a baseball captain to take your place, and I stayed to see who got it.

"Who did?" exclaimed Bill, eagerly. "Did Don?"

"Sure. It was a walkaway."

"Great! Boy, I'm glad Don got it. Who was close?"

Pete laughed. "Nobody was VERY close. I think Ed Hamer was next, but he only had two votes."

"Gee, that's great! Don will make a dandy captain."

Pete smiled ruefully. "Yes, I suppose he will, but it's not like having you in there."

For several minutes both boys were quiet. They did not like to talk about the reason that Bill was sitting at home helpless, instead of being "in there" as captain of the high school baseball team.

Suddenly Pete clapped his fist into his hand. "Oh, say! I almost forgot. Mr. Shilling told me to tell you that he was coming out to see you soon. He says he thinks he can arrange for you to make up this half year during the summer, and you can get your diploma in the fall in time to go to college. I think that's pretty white of the old principal, don't you?"

Bill's face bore a pained look. "Y-yes, it is, Pete—mighty white. But—well, Pete, I'm not going to college."

"W-what? You aren't? Oh say Bill, that's tough! What's the trouble?"

"Well, these doctor bills have cost the folks an awful lot, you know. And I would have had to work my way through anyway. Now that I'm crippled and can't work,—well, I guess I'll just stay here in Shartlon and get some kind of a job—if anybody will have me!" His voice was almost bitter.

Pete was silent, but his face showed how sorry he was. Finally [illegible] expression brightened. "Don and [illegible]re going together—did I tell you? [illegible]ee, I wish you could come with us, Bill."

"So do I, Pete, but—well, I'm sort of getting used to tough luck."

"You've had your share all right Bill. Darn it, it doesn't seem right. But you're getting better every day, aren't you — all except —" Pete stopped.

"My leg," he said, "that may never be any better, Pete, and when your leg won't work I guess that about ends you. But my head—yes, it's getting better all the time. I can remember almost everything that I did before the accident. The only thing that is still blank is just what happened that night. And I've tried and tried to remember."

He was silent for a moment, and it was evident that he was trying to make his memory, clouded for months, work again.

"Pete," he finally said, "I can't remember why the sled went into that tree, but I feel sure I didn't lose control of it. I steered into the tree for some good reason—but I can't remember why to save my life. Tell me again just what happened that night. Perhaps in that way you will make me remember."

"Well," said Pete, repeating a story that he had told to his friend for the same purpose many times before, "we had spent almost a week building the new bob sled. You and Don and I and four other fellows had worked on it—the regular bunch. We finished it that Saturday afternoon.

"The Higgins hill was a glaze of hard snow, wonderful for coasting. The place was crowded when we took the bob over for its first trip. We had everybody else clear off the long track, and there was the usual policeman stationed on the hill to keep people out of the way of the coasters."

"I can remember all that now, dimly," interrupted Bill. "We didn't finish the bob until early in the evening, and it was about nine o'clock when we got over to the hill, wasn't it?"

"That's right—you are getting better all the time. Well, we drew lots to see who would steer for the first trip, and you won. So, with a big crowd watching us, the seven of us piled on the sled and started.

"I never had such a ride in my life. We went like wildfire. About half way down the hill the sting of the wind was so strong that all of us buried our faces in our coast, and I guess you were the only one watching the track."

"I was wearing goggles," added Bill.

"Yes. Well, we were clear down the hill and tearing into the field behind Norstrum's house, almost at the end of the ride. Right there, you know, the track goes between two big trees. Well, none of us was watching, but all of a sudden you screamed for us to jump and jammed on the sprag. Somehow we fell off. The bob crashed into one of the big trees.

"They picked you up with your leg broken and your head cracked open, and rushed you to hospital. [illegible] Smith's arm was broken and a couple of us were skinned up, but that was all. And nobody knows why we hit the tree."

Bill's face wore an expression of pain, part of which was caused by his effort to use his still feeble memory.

"And I didn't jump, did I, Pete? Oh, Pete, I wish I could remember! There must be some reason why I yelled at you. I must have seen that we were going to hit the tree. But I just can't tell why. It's there in my mind somewhere, but I can't get it."

For a minute neither boy spoke. "I remember the rest since then only too well, though. Golly, Pete, I'm afraid I've showed yellow several times in the last few months."

Peter snorted angrily. "Yellow! Say, Bill, if there ever was a fellow with more nerve than you in this town, nobody ever heard about him. Why, the high school almost shut down the first few days after the accident. And when your leg didn't get better as it should have, the place was as sad as a morgue. We all know that you've suffered more than anyone else could have stood, and don't you forget it."

Pete's words were true. Bill had been badly hurt. His leg, broken at the hip and below the knee, had been slow in healing, and even when the bones had knit, the worst was not over. One day they discovered that, although the injured limb was whole again, it was partly paralyzed. Bill could not walk.

Something wrong with the nerves, the doctors said—and there seemed nothing they could do. "It may get all right some day all of a sudden," they said, but they admitted that the chance was only a slim one.

And so, after months of suffering, Bill was left with a leg that would not work and a memory that was bad. The Perkins family was not rich, and the doctor bills had made Bill's contemplated college course an impossibility unless he could work his way through, which was now impossible. Without him at his old position on second base, the high school baseball team was in a sorry way. He had missed several months of school, for it was only in the last week that he could move, even on crutches.

Pete's indignation had cooled now, and he changed the subject. "Oh say, Bill," he said. "You'll be able to get over to the ball field for our first game with Drake on Saturday, won't you?"

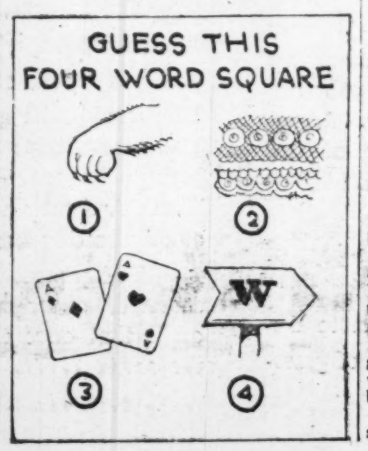

"Yes, I guess so. Who is going to play my position—do you know yet?"

"I guess Johnny Peters will play. And oh, he's fierce Bill. And he can't hit at all." He shook his head sadly. "Unless some miracle fixes you up before our first games in the County league, I'm afraid we haven't a chance."

Ice 150,000 Years Old Found

Ice believed to have been formed 150,000 years ago when Russia and all northern Europe were covered with the wintry coating, has been found in a cave recently discovered in the Ural mountains. The cave is 26 miles long and is festooned with glistening icicles. The roof is a mass of snow crystals that reflect the colors of the rainbow, and there are many grottoes. Objects dating from the time of the Persian King Cyrus were found nearby.

Famous Monuments — The Deserted Cloisters of Meteara — By Hendrik Van Loon

Color Instructions

Tne few trees in the foreground must be green.

But for the rest, you can use such color combinations as seem best suited for the occasion.

You really have three distinct units to consider, the sky, the monasteries, and the rocks.

Don't color the original until you have taken a couple of sheets of paper and have tried them all out.

With three colors you can get 1 x 2 x 3—6 entirely different color effects.

And if you want to do the job well, I would advise you to make six originals of your own and try them out six different times.

You will have to be a little methodical in this and for example if you want to use yellow and red and blue, you had better make a mathematical chart:

Y x R x B
Y x B x R
R x B x Y
R x Y x B
B x Y x R
B x R x Y

Then work it out according to your formulas.

This does not look like "art" you will say. Where is the inspiration?

Believe me, there is mighty little inspiration in art and a terrible lot of hard work.

THE idea of fleeing this wicked world and finding relief in the loneliness of a monastery is Oriental rather than European. Europeans have never taken very kindly to the contemplative life. They have always been men of action.

But when the prevailing religious fashions of the sixth and seventh centuries swept them into cloisters and nunneries, they contrived to be active and they made their monasteries the center of the intellectual life of their times and appointed themselves the school masters and the doctors and the civil servants of that strange and disorderly period of time which came to be known as the dark ages.

The far eastern half of the Mediterranean, however, was inhabited by a people who had grown tired of living. We can hardly blame them. They had known the joys of civilization for almost fifty centuries before Europe appeared upon the international horizon and the pleasures of this world meant less to them than nothing at all.

Wherefore they foreswore the joys of the flesh, put on their oldest suit of clothes and wandered forth into the desert to discover their immortal souls on a diet of grasshoppers and plain cold water.

Soon, however, such an existence seemed too tame to the more energetic leaders of the new cult and they went to live on the top of an old pillar or at the bottom of a dried up well. Others prompted by a desire for greater safety and perhaps by wish for the sound of an occasional human voice, built themselves monasteries on the tops of the steep rocky pinnacles that are found in the northern part of Greece and there, far away from the turmoil of this wicked world they lived lives of such complete dreaminess and uselessness that it led them into all sorts of strange mental aberations and turned many of them into hopeless idiots before they had reached the age of 30.

And no wonder. Their only means of communication with the rest of the world was by a netlike sack pulled up from above. They could take no physical exercise at all. The superstitious peasants from the neighboring villages fed them on the riches of the land. And they had nothing to do that was of any earthly use to anybody else.

Today most of these monasteries stand deserted, queer monuments to a strange craze that once upon a time swept across the earth.

A POINTED STORY.

During a great banquet given by a powerful prince in Rome long ago, a serving boy was carrying a large roast tongue into the banquet hall, when he slipped, and the tongue skidded off the platter and fell on the floor.

Now Roman princes in these days were tyrants, and the boy felt sure that he would be ordered away immediately to the dungeons. An idea struck him, however.

"Pardon me, sire," he said to the haughty ruler. "'Twas just a lapsus lingue." (Latin for "a slip of the tongue.")

The prince's face relaxed into a smile, and a roar of laughter went around the table, everyone commenting on the wit of the young boy.

Another boy, watching, and wishing to curry favor, went out and got a large side of beef, and coming back, purposely slipped, and let it fall on the floor. Then he repeated what his fellow servant had said, and waited for the applause he thought would come.

There was, of course, no point, and instead of laughter, angry faces stared at him from the table, and he was ordered away to be beheaded.

The point is obvious. Don't be a copycat!

POSERS!

Are you a "posers" fan?

If you are, you're adding to your stock of knowledge every week, and some of these days it's all going to be of service to you. No one "knows it all." It is the ones who are willing t learn who progress.

Some of these posers may tell you something you don't know.

1. What is a scabbard?
2. Who wrote "Paradise Regained?"
3. Where is Hankow?
4. Who was Mohammed?
5. What is gun-cotton?
6. What is a "soothsayer?"
7. Who was Americus Vespuccius?
8. Who said, "My country, right or wrong?"

"MISSING WORD" LIMERICKS

Well, well, look what's here! A brand new sport for readers of the Boys' and Girls' page.

Limericks, with the last word of the last line missing! Read the verse and pick a word that will make the last line rhyme with the first and second lines. You don't need to be a poet to do it! If you can't find a word, the answer is on this page somewhere.

After you read this limerick, how about making one up and sending it in to the Limerick Editor? He'll publish it with your name if it is a good one. Let's go!

There was a young freshman named Ed,

Kite Flying Is Men's Sport in Far China

Kite flying is a popular pastime with most American boys, but in China it is mainly a sport for grown-ups, and old men may often be seen flying elaborate kites, while children look on.

The kites the Chinese fly are made in queer shapes. With a thin, tough kind of paper, and slips of split bamboo, they shape dragons, birds, and huge insects, chiefly dragon flies, and even men. They then pierce them with holes, covered with vibrating cords; so that when the kite goes up, the air rushing through makes a loud, humming noise.

When the wind is favorable, great crowds of people turn out with these peculiar kites. Some of them are youths, but most are grown men, and among them can be seen many ancient Chinese, with grey beards and huge spectacles. The chief fun to the younger men is to try to bring down each other's kites, either by entangling them, or by dividing the string. Meanwhile, the children look on, discussing the merits of the kites and the skill of their owners.

The Fun Box

Oh, Grave, Where Is Thy Victory?

They tell the story of a golfing clergyman who had been badly beaten on the links by a parishioner thirty years his senior, and had returned to the clubhouse rather disgruntled.

"Cheer up," his opponent said, 'remember, you win at the finish. You'll be burying me some day, I expect."

"Even then," said the preacher, "it will be your hole."

PROBABLY WORTH IT.

Rastus: "Wanna buy a mule, Sam?"

Sam: "Wot ails de mule?"

Rastus: "Nothin.'"

Sam: "Den what yo' want to sell him for?"

Rastus: "Nothin."

LIVING UP TO IT.

"What do the inmates think of the new asylum?"

"They just rave about it."

Danger Common to the Royal Mounted

How would you like to take a dog sled and trek a thousand miles through snow and ice, across plains, through forests, over mountains, to catch a criminal, bring an insane man back to civilization, or rescue a snow-bound and starving trapper? When it's forty below, it takes a good man to go through with a task like that. Yet it's common experience to a member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Once they go after a man who has done wrong, nothing but death can save him from arrest. He may travel thousands of miles and hide himself away for years but they will follow on his trail until eventually he is run down.

You can't help admiring the dress of a Royal Mounted man, his smart red tunic; blue riding breeches bearing a broad yellow stripe, and riding boots of finest russet leather. His head is covered with a broad brimmed felt hat, while a black leather belt girdles his waist. On long trips through the cold, of course, thick mackinaws, fur caps and snow shoes are necessary equipment.

He is mounted on a fine horse, especially bred for the Service on its own stock farm. These animals are exceptionally intelligent, and well trained. They can leap high boulders at a jump, and stand rifle fire close to their ears without flinching.

JUNGLE JINGLES

And is famed for his loving hug,
He really is built for comfort
For he makes an excellent rug.

Something to Do

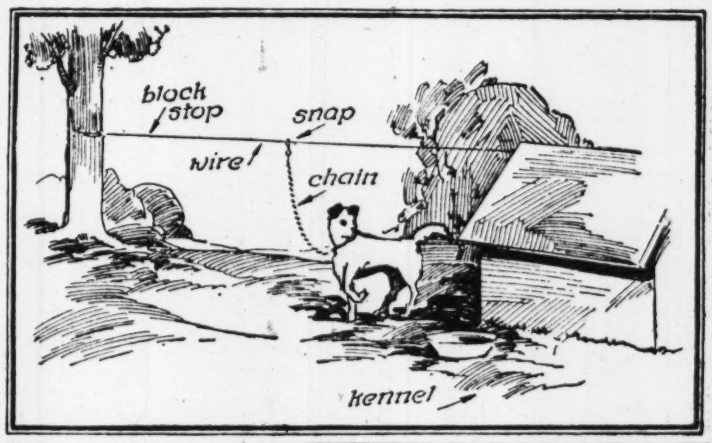

DALE R. VAN HORN

EXERCISE YOUR DOG.

It pays to keep your dog confined in some way for several reasons. If allowed to run loose, a car may run over him or he may stray away. Yet if you tie him up with an ordinary length rope or chain he will not get enough exercise.

The plan shown here confines the dog to your home place, but he will have so much freedom that he will scarcely know he isn't running loose. Since you have provided him with a collar anyway, the rest of the equipment is easily prepared.

Run a smooth wire between the kennel and a tree or post some distance away, and draw it tight. Fasten the chain to the collar and a snap to the other end so it can be snapped over the wire. The chain need not be more than eight or ten feet long, but with this arrangement the dog then will be given a running space equal to twice the chain length in width as long as the wire. You can provide a stop a few feet from the tree so the dog will not be able to wind the chain about it. When you want to free the dog, it is done by simply removing the chain. This plan will doubtless be approved by any city ordinance, too.

Baked Beans Can Be Made in Camp

Baked beans are generally a favorite with healthy young appetites, but when you are out camping they are especially delicious.

If your camp is on a lake or a river with a sandy shore or bank, here is a way to bake beans that we feel sure will make everybody in the party pass his plate for more.

Use the common small, white bean. Look over the beans carefully and throw out all the imperfect ones. Put the good ones to soak over night in plenty of water. The next day place the soaked beans in an iron pot and boil them for two hours over the camp fire. Meanwhile, build a good sized fire on the shore or bank and keep it going for several hours. The object of the fire is thoroughly to heat a patch of sand. When the fire has burned low, rake aside the embers and dig a hole two feet deep in the hot sand. Place the boiled beans in a crock with a lid.

If you like your beans sweet, pour in a little syrup from time to time as you fill the crock. And if you like bacon, put in several slices now and then. When the crock is filled, put the lid on carefully, and place the crock in the hole. Fill up around and on top of the crock with hot sand. Scrape the embers back on top of the crock, which should be buried at least a foot deep, build up the fire and go to bed.

In the morning, dig up the crock get out your plates and pass the beans! Better have a large crock and plenty of beans with you, for if you make camp baked beans once, you'll surely make them more than once.

SUNDAY APRIL 3rd, 1927

LINE FORMS TO THE RIGHT—This beautiful Polish lady with a name that's unpronounceable wants a husband — and he must be an American, must love children and wild animals and be wealthy, affable and athletic. Can you qualify? (Herbert)

JUST ANOTHER GOLF TITLE—They're becoming so routine for Bobby Jones, "Atlanta's own" ace of the links, that everybody considers them quite the natural thing. Here you see the British and American open champion in action before a big gallery at East Lake recently, when Bobby annexed the southern golf title. (Kenneth Rogers)

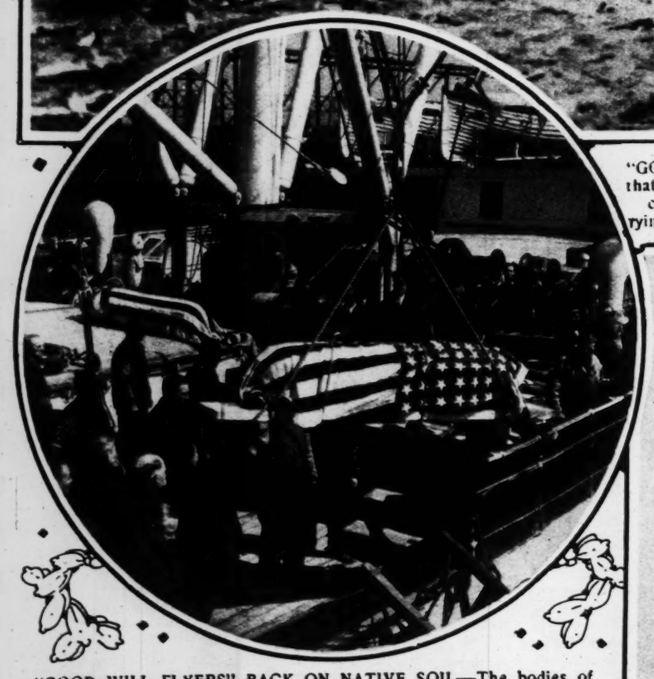

"GOOD WILL" FLIGHT ENDS IN DISASTER—Here's all that remained of the Pan-American plane, New York, after crashed with the plane Detroit, over Buenos Aires, carrying two army officers to their death. (International)

LOOK HIM OVER, GIRLS—He's Yale's handsomest athlete, Lawrence M. Noble, of Syracuse, N. Y., recently chosen the big university's best all-around athlete and best-looking senior. He starred at baseball, football and hockey and is working his way through college. (Underwood & Underwood)

THE KING OF CLUBS—Bobby Jones with the southern open trophy immediately after the final round of the tournament. (Kenneth Rogers)

"GOOD WILL FLYERS" BACK ON NATIVE SOIL—The bodies of Captain John W. Benton and Lieutenant Clifton F. Woolsey, killed in a collision at Buenos Aires while engaged in the army's Pan-American flight, were received with military honors when they reached Hoboken. (Herbert)

JUST IN THE NICK OF TIME—A Southern Pacific train crew has been cited for bravery in saving the life of two-year-old Dorothy Terry, who was standing on the tracks when the big locomotive bore down upon her. The engineer applied his emergency brakes but could not stop the train before reaching her, so the fireman, James S. McGraw, leaped out of the cab, raced ahead of the engine and snatched the tot from the rails. (Underwood & Underwood)

IT'S "DOG DAYS" IN CALIFORNIA—Dogs are certainly having their day in Los Angeles, where Alexander Moxley, proprietor of a fashionable dog hospital, recently opened a beauty shoppe for dogs. Note the fashionable bored expression on this canine aristocrat. (Underwood & Underwood)

CZAR OF THE AIR is Judge Eugene O. Sykes, of Mississippi, acting chairman of the federal radio commission, who recently made a talk over radio which was the first under the new governmental control of the ether. (International)

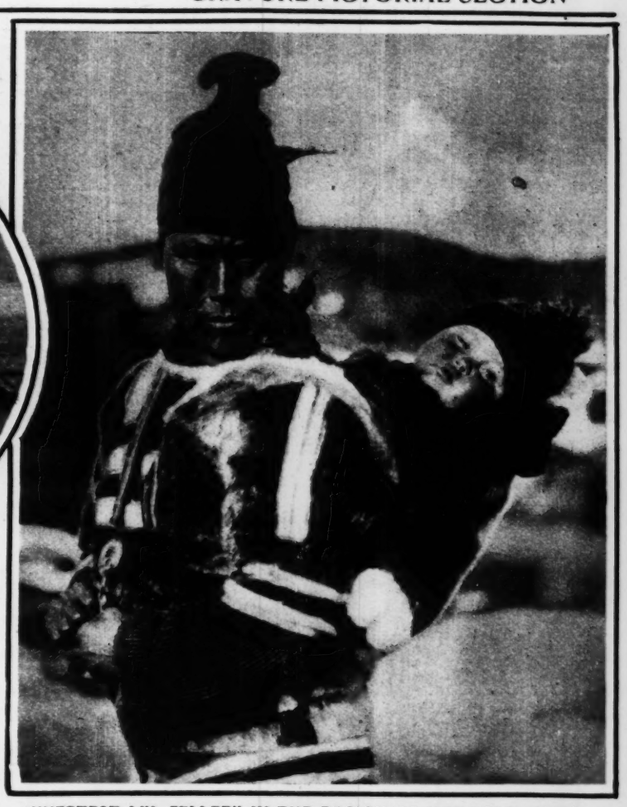

BROAD SMILES AND BIG COIFFURES are common among the Greenlanders, and beauty is by no means unknown in the polar land. Look at this fair Greenland maiden.

A Cry from "Greenland's Icy Mountains"

The interesting photographs presented herewith were made in Greenland by the "Ethnological expedition" which left Denmark for north Greenland to study the life of the interesting people there. Helge Bangsted, noted explorer, headed the party, which made many interesting reports after its exploration tour.—Photos by Underwood & Underwood

"SWEETEST LI'L FELLER" IN THE REGION OF THE POLE—Here's a typical Greenland baby, fat and sleepy in the warm nest strapped to its mother's back.

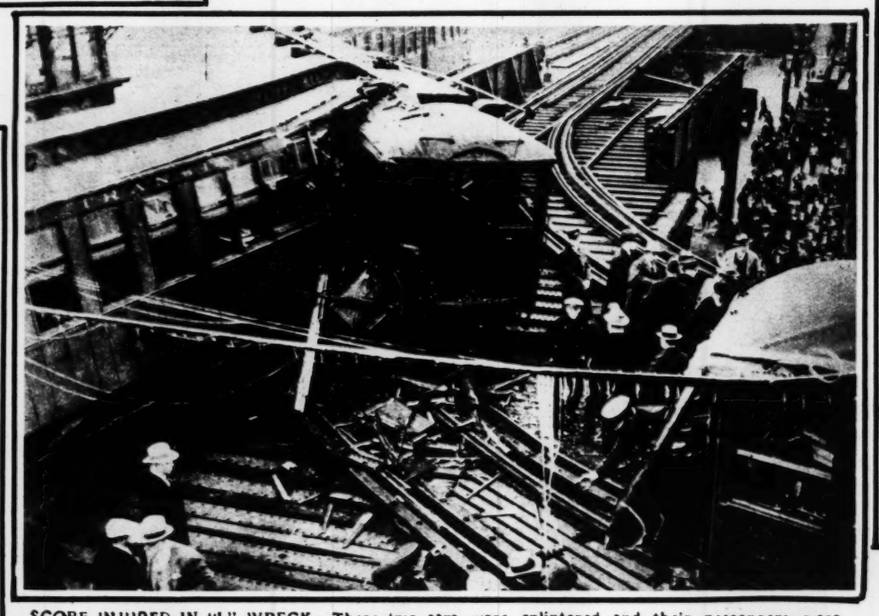

ALL DRESSED UP AND NO PLACE TO GO BUT SKIING—And that's no novelty to a Greenlander. Note the picturesque costumes of this mother with her son and daughter.

DIP IN ICE WATER—It's a serious spill, but most Greenlanders are experts in manipulating their boats, called kayaks.

SPORTSMAN'S PARADISE is Greenland, but what we call sports mean nothing but routine ways of making a living to the polar people. A Greenland boy is shown here with a catch of a fine halibut, which he hooked through a hole in the ice.

SCORE INJURED IN "L" WRECK—These two cars were splintered and their passengers were hurt in a crash on the Chicago Northwestern elevated (International)

DRESSING YOUR HAIR TO MATCH YOUR PERSONALITY—That's what Antoine Cierplikowski, renowned Parisian hair dresser, advocated for American women. Wonder if he'll shave the crown of the lady who has no personality. (International)

POSITIVELY NOT A POLE CAT—Instead, it's a New York pussy that climbed higher by night than it was accustomed to do, and was afraid to attempt a descent in the morning. A fireman rescued her. (International)

YEP; THEY'RE PROPER—The Fashion Art league, in session at Chicago, decreed that skirts "are a matter of age," so this little "panti-dress" is suggested for the flapper. (International)

PROOF AGAINST BRICKS AND BULLETS—John W. Donaldson, New York policeman, designed this helmet for use by riot squads to protect them against gangmen's leaden hail and strikers' playful Irish confetti. The jeweled pistol Donaldson holds was presented him by an Indian rajah he guarded while the dignitary visited New York. (International)

"UNDER THE GREENWOOD TREE"—The dramatic club of Wesleyan college, Macon, recently presented Shakespeare's delightful comedy, "As You Like It," with a complete female cast. (Warlick Studio)

HO, HUM! HAVE YOU GOT SPRING FEVER, TOO?—Pansy, the giant hippo of the Boston zoo, has a bad case of the disease, so she sinks a little lower in her tub and stifles a moist yawn. (Herbert)

YOU'VE HEARD OF THE "RUMPUS BIRD"—Well, here he is. He was a guest at the "rumpus ball" staged recently in Los Angeles and caused a riot of fun. 'Tis said he eats only millinery, so these pretty girls fed him right out of the hat box. (Herbert)

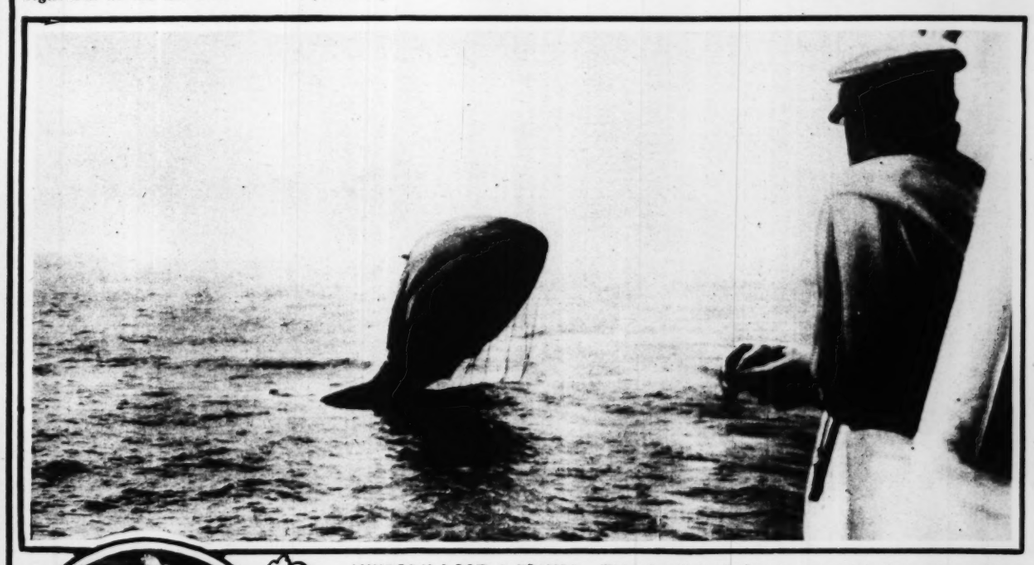

PITY THE POOR OYSTERS—Thousands of them lived out their dark and slimy lives producing these pearls crocheted into a novel coiffure adornment—without living to see the wearer, pretty Judith Barbier, of Paris, France. (Underwood & Underwood)

MOTHER OF TWINS WINS BEAUTY CONTEST—Mrs. Rose Wagner Regan, mother of 7-year-old twins, holds three cups certifying that she has swept aside all fair competitors in as many beauty tournaments conducted in her home town. (International)

BANDITS, BEWARE!—There's no holding up this bank in New Jersey, for a guard concealed in a newly-devised steel sniper's nest can sweep the entire ground floor with a leaden hail from his riot pump-gun. The nest is placed in such a vantage point that no one can detect its presence (International)

ANYBODY LOST A BLIMP?—This derelict of the air was picked up at sea by the S. S. Pastores of the United Fruit line. The blimp tore loose from its moorings at Langley field while no crew was aboard, and was blown 200 miles off New York. (International)

THE MILK BOY OF BRUGES—Imagine milk being delivered at your door in the early mornings of these free and independent states in the fashion pictured here. This youngster and his dog deliver milk in Bruges, and everybody's delighted with the service. (International)

DRESSING YOUR HAIR TO MATCH YOUR PERSONALITY—That's what Antoine Cierplikowski, renowned Parisian hair dresser, advocated for American women. He's here with a number of new and striking creations, one of which is pictured. Wonder if he'll shave the crown of the lady who has no personality? (International)

GUIDING SPIRIT OF MERCER UNIVERSITY—The latest photograph of Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, president of the Baptist institution of learning at Macon. (Metro Studio)

FEMALE "ALEXANDER"—She's sponsor for the ragtime band of Fulton High school, and, in addition, pretty Miss Thelma Barker holds the honor of being the first and only girl to graduate from the local high school's home economics department to hold the musical title. (Andrew & Holloway)

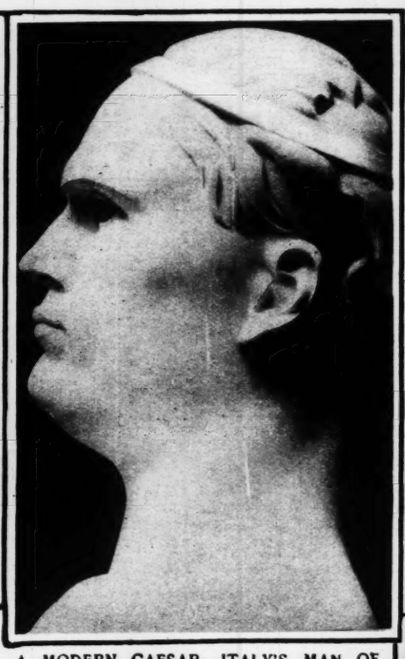

THE FIRM OF WILLIAMS & WILLIAMS—Mrs. Nadia Williams, 38 years of age, and her son, Sidney, 20, both students in the law school of the Southwestern university at Los Angeles, will enter the practice of law together when they graduate. (International)

LATEST VIEW OF ATLANTA'S EVER-CHANGING SKYLINE—This panoramic photograph was snapped by Andrew & Holloway and affords a sweeping outlook upon the "Gate City's" towering structures of steel and concrete.

HE AIN'T AFEARED O' HENRY—Aaron Sapiro, who started his business career as a California newsboy and who now is chief of cooperative farm marketing, sued Henry Ford, the billionaire automobile magnate, for libel as the result of an attack in Ford's paper, The Dearborn Independent, on Sapiro and Judaism. The case was tried in Detroit. (International)

A MODERN CAESAR: ITALY'S MAN OF DESTINY—A striking ultra-modernist's conception of Italy's "iron man," Benito Mussolini, done by the famous Italian sculptor, Adolphe Wildt. It is entitled the "Caesar of Today."

SLAPPED KERENSKY'S FACE—When the former Russian military leader appeared at New York to take part in a celebration of the Russ revolution's tenth anniversary, Miss Catherine Bary walked up and slapped his face with her glove. She blames Kerensky's regime for the death of her sweetheart. (International)

COOLIDGE INFLUENCE ENTERS FLORAL WORLD—Miss Elle Hardeman, of North Carolina, is shown with the new Coolidge rose, a prize-winner at the New York Grand Central Palace flower show. (International)

MAKES DEAF HEAR—An invention for home or office by which people who are 88 per cent deaf can hear easily was displayed in New York recently by Charles William Harper, of Boston, the inventor. Sounds are amplified without distortion, it is claimed. The instrument is not movable. (International)

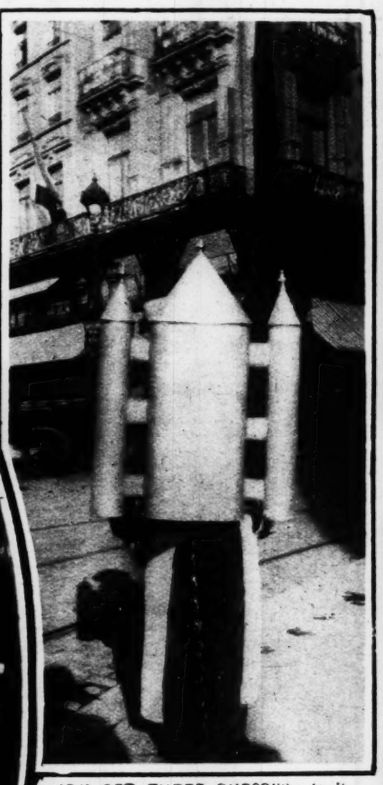

SOLD BUTTON GWINNETT'S SIGNATURE—Acquisition of the signature of the Georgia signer of the declaration of independence brought $51,000 to John Cecil Clay, whose career as a brilliant illustrator was halted by paralysis. Confined to his chair, Clay sold the signature on a letter to Dr. A. S. W. Rosenback at the Anderson galleries. (International)

AND HERE'S DOWNTOWN ATLANTA BY NIGHT—This remarkable picture shows the great skyscrapers and the streets far below brilliantly illuminated.

THEY ALL TAKE HER DUST—Miss Hazel Kirk, of New Jersey, winner of several A. A. U. games events, is known as "the female Charlie Paddock." Here she's shown set for the 60-yard dash. (International)

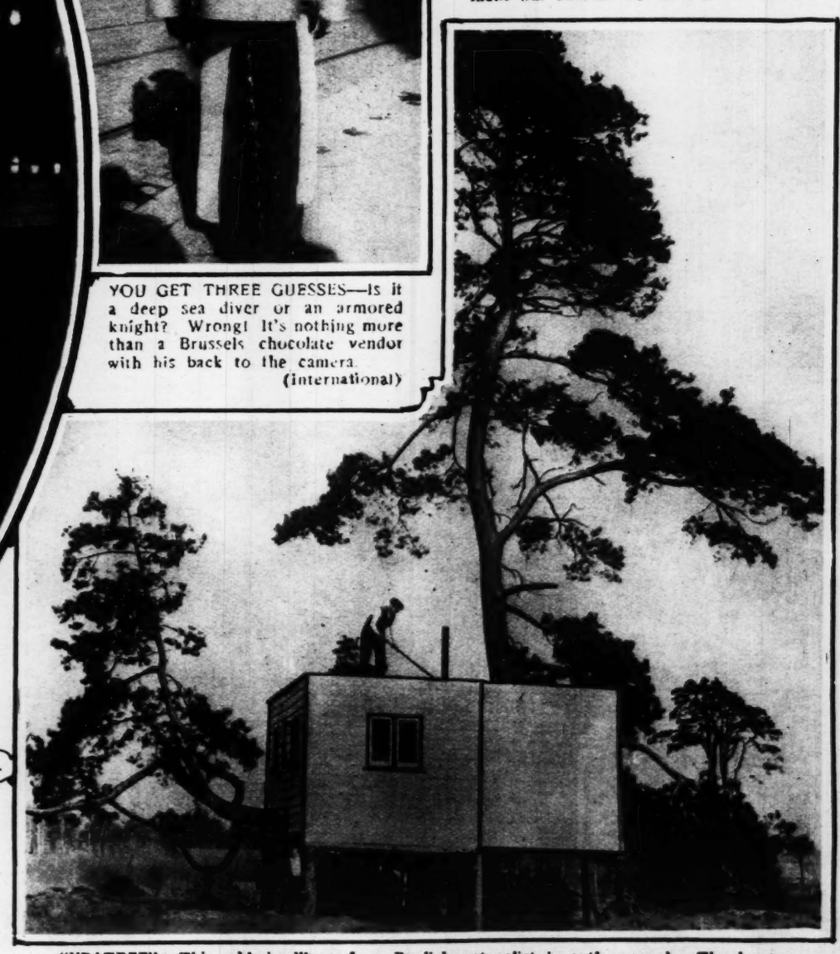

YOU GET THREE GUESSES—Is it a deep sea diver or an armored knight? Wrong! It's nothing more than a Brussels chocolate vendor with his back to the camera. (International)

TRY THIS ON YOUR OLD MAN—Leon Metzenbaum, son of a Seattle, Wash., lawyer, decided he needed a baseball bat and glove, so he entered "formal suit" for them against his dad. Superior Court Judge Ronald decided Leon was right, and judgment was entered on the court's records. (International)

IN THE WAKE OF THE OZARK TWISTER—Another view of the havoc wrought by the tornado that tore its way through the mountains of Arkansas, this vista of debris being snapped near Klondyke. Seven were killed in the wrecking of the home in the foreground. (Herbert).

HAPPY HOMES WERE ALL ABOUT until the recent tornado that swept over Arkansas turned them into matchwood and killed more than 25 persons. More than 700 residences were wrecked by the high winds. This photo was made at Benton. (International)

GUN THAT SHOOTS PICTURES ON THE SKY—The General Electric illuminating laboratory has perfected a long-range searchlight projector capable of casting reading matter or pictures into the heavens, using the clouds as a screen. The device looks like a cannon, and its inventors claim that the largest models of the "gun" will "shoot" pictures five miles into the air. (International)

A Sweet Stomach!

What a pity when youth and vitality are set at naught by a disordered stomach, and bad breath! Don't have them at any age! Hearty eaters—hard smokers—high livers—find Stuart's a boon and blessing!

Eat what you wish. Drink what you like. Then chew a Stuart tablet. That gives the stomach sufficient alkaline; the result is a sweet stomach, serene digestion, no pains, no gas.

Full Box FREE!

Every druggist has Stuart's tablets, 25c and 60c. Or, a full box free if you mail special coupon below. Get a metal box of Stuart's for the pocket—and keep it filled! A sweet stomach for twenty-five cents.

STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS

"WHEN YOU AND I WERE YOUNG, MAGGIE"—These two women, crusading to bring back the fashions of a generation ago and to discourage what they call "mannishness" in girls of today, rashly chose the Atlantic City boardwalk to recruit followers. They got many laughs but few customers. (International)

SHE'S A GUN-TOTER—Pretty Pauline Fanning, just 21, is the youngest U. S. deputy marshal in the country. She recently received her appointment in the Muskogee, Okla., district. She rarely misses at target practice and says she's all set to make any arrest. (International)

Lenore Ulric, Famous Belasco Star writes:

"With women in practically all the professions smoking, I have observed those in my own calling and have found their favorite cigarette is the LUCKY STRIKE. I always choose it for my occasional smoke because it affords the greatest relaxation and pleasure."

Lenore Ulric

You, too, will find that Lucky Strikes are mild and mellow—the finest cigarettes you ever smoked, made of the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and blended with great skill, and there is an extra process—"It's toasted"—no harshness, not a bit of bite.

"It's toasted"

Your Throat Protection

When in New York you are cordially invited to see how Lucky Strikes are made at our exhibit, corner Broadway and 45th Street.

FEMALE BASKETBALL CHAMP—Miss Jo Copeland, star center of the Illinois Woman's Athletic club team of Chicago, is credited with being the leading female center of the country. Already this season she has rung the basket more than half a hundred times. (International)

DETAIL OF CONSTRUCTION of the new bridge over the St. Marys river connecting Georgia and Florida. This photograph was taken while the bridge was under construction.

THE NEW BRIDGE OVER THE ST. MARYS RIVER connecting Georgia and Florida—on the Dixie highway and the South Atlantic Coastal highway. Chairman of state highway commission, John N. Holder, in the foreground.

STRETCH OF THE COASTAL HIGHWAY near the Kingsland approach of the new St. Marys river bridge. This type of paving is now, or soon will be, completed all the way from Savannah to Jacksonville, crossing the St. Marys river on the new bridge and connecting at Waycross with the Dixie highway to Atlanta and the west.

LUCREZIA BORI as "Juliette" in "Romeo et Juliette," one of the season's finest operas.

GUESS AGAIN; IT ISN'T JAPAN—This scene of gorgeous cherry blossoms was made in Washington, where the Japanese cherry trees planted about the tidal basin are in full bloom. The Oriental kiddies are daughters of the third secretary of the Japanese embassy out to enjoy the "home touch." (Herbert.)

ONCE TOO OFTEN—F. A. Dobbs, leading British aircraftsman, invented a game called "balloon jumping," but in hopping over the hangars of the London aerodrome he came in contact with a live wire and was killed. (International)

IT'S A HARD LIFE, FOLKS—Having dropped her suit against her husband, the famous silver screen comedian, Lita Gray Chaplin now plans to reenter the movies to support herself and her two children. This is the latest picture of Lita and the little Chaplins. (Underwood & Underwood)

HE ACTS FOR THE U. S. IN CHINA—Admiral C. S. Williams, commander of the American Asiatic fleet, was given full powers to act as necessity dictated in the disorders sweeping China. (International)

THE VERY LATEST THING IS THE HANDALETTE—The novel jewelry creation promises to become fashionable. This one was made of 360 diamonds set in platinum and valued at $5,000. (Herbert)

"I'M GOING A-MILKING, SIR"—That's what this milkmaid would doubtless say if she could talk, but she can't. She's made of hardware and was a novel exhibit devised by a California storekeeper recently to pep up trade. (Underwood & Underwood)

THE GUMPS

SIDNEY SMITH

I WOULD HAVE BOUGHT THAT CAR I PROMISED YOU, MIN, BUT IMAGINE THAT SALESMAN OFFERING ME ONLY $50.00 FOR MY OLD 348 — I COULD HAVE PUT THE GARAGE OVER HIS HEAD —

I DON'T BLAME YOU —

MY HEART WAS IN THE RIGHT PLACE — IF YOU THINK I WAS CHEAP AND TRYING TO SAVE MONEY — LOOK AT THAT — DIAMONDS — COUNT THEM — A LITTLE GIFT FROM THE GUY THAT BOUGHT YOU THE WEDDING RING — HOW DO YOU LIKE IT?

OH, YOU DEAR OLD SWEET THING —

IT'S THE MOST BEAUTIFUL THING THAT I EVER SAW IN MY LIFE — HOW ON EARTH DID YOU EVER SELECT IT? YOU'RE JUST TOO GOOD FOR ONE MAN — THAT'S ALL —

WHEN THAT BRACELET HAS GONE 10,000 MILES YOU WON'T HAVE TO TRADE IT IN FOR $50,000 — AND WE STILL HAVE OUR OLD CAR — AND THERE IS A MILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF HEALTH AND PLEASURE IN IT YET — AND WE'LL COLLECT $100,000. ON ACCOUNT WHILE WE'RE TAKING THAT TRIP TO LAKE GENEVA TODAY —

GOSH, MIN — TO GET ON THOSE ROADS AGAIN — OUT IN THAT SUNSHINE — AND TO HEAR THOSE BIRDS CHIRP —

AND HOW LITTLE CHESTER WILL ENJOY IT —

ISN'T IT A WONDERFUL THING TO HAVE AN AUTOMOBILE? DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK — IF OUR GRANDFATHERS WANTED TO TAKE A TRIP TO LAKE GENEVA IT WOULD TAKE THEM THREE DAYS OF HARD TRAVELING — AND WE'LL BE OUT THERE IN LESS THAN THREE HOURS — EATING OUR LUNCH — CAN YOU IMAGINE THAT?

WE MIGHT WAIT ONE H'NDRED YEARS AND NEVER GET A DAY LIKE THIS — TIME ME BY YOUR CLOCK NOW, AND SEE IF I'M NOT TELLING THE TRUTH — AT 11:45 WE'LL BE THE OTHER SIDE OF WAUCONDA —

IT JUST HAPPENED THAT WE HAVE THIS WONDERFUL DAY — AND WE'VE GOT THE SUNSHINE — AND WE HAVE THE HEALTH TO ENJOY IT — AND I'VE GOT THE CAR — AND I'VE GOT THE TIME —

WHAT ARE WE GOING TO PUT THIS LUNCH IN?

AND I'VE GOT THAT — IT'S IN THE GARAGE AND IT'S A SUIT CASE — AND I'LL GET IT —

BLUE DAYS — ALL OF THEM GONE NOTHING BUT BLUE SKIES FROM NOW ON THE CAR IS GONE!

OH MIN!

Little Orphan Annie

YESSIR, SANDY! ANYBODY CAN KEEP REAL BUSY MOST ALL TH' TIME JUST MINDIN' THEIR OWN BUSINESS, I BETCHA-

THERE'S COMPANY, SANDY- LET'S HURRY IN AN' SEE WHO THEY ARE -

OH, ANNIE- COME IN AND MEET THESE LADIES- WE'VE JUST BEEN TALKING ABOUT YOU-

HERE IS ANNIE- ISN'T SHE A SWEET LITTLE GIRL?

DON'T GO FAR, ANNIE- WE'RE GOING TO HAVE DINNER BEFORE LONG-

NO, MA'AM I WON'T-

I DON'T S'POSE I OUGHT TO EAVESDROP, SANDY, BUT I'M GOIN' TO- THOSE TWO BIRDS LOOK LIKE TH' KIND THAT'D GIVE YUH A DIRTY RAP TH' MINUTE YER BACK'S TURNED-

SH-H-H- YOU WAIT THERE, SANDY-

OF COURSE IT'S YOUR BUSINESS, MRS. FLINT, BUT YOU CERTAINLY ARE MAKING A TERRIBLE MISTAKE TO TAKE A CHILD LIKE THAT INTO YOUR HOME- WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT HER- AN ORPHAN- HUMPH!

SHE IS RATHER PRETTY IN A WAY- BUT THEN, THEY'RE THE WORST- NO GRATITUDE- TAKE EVERYTHING AND GIVE NOTHING- WE WERE DISCUSSING IT AT THE SEWING CIRCLE YESTERDAY- OF COURSE IT'S NONE OF MY AFFAIR BUT WE HATE TO DO SOMETHING YOU'LL BE SURE TO REGRET-

WE CAN'T STAY- WE JUST DROPPED IN AS WE FELT IT WAS OUR DUTY TO WARN YOU - NO GOOD CAN COME OF IT- WE JUST THOUGHT YOU OUGHT TO KNOW HOW PEOPLE IN TOWN FEEL ABOUT IT-

I CAN'T HELP IT- I HAVE TO TELL THE TRUTH- IF I BELIEVE SOMETHING I SAY SO-

YOU DID QUITE RIGHT, ABAGAIL- I ADMIRED THE WAY YOU CAME RIGHT OUT- SOME ONE HAD TO TELL HER THE TRUTH-

BUTINSKIS! NOSEY OLD GOSSIPS! TROUBLE MAKERS! FUNNY-LOOKIN' OLD CROWS, TOO- I GOTTA TELL TH' TRUTH- BLAH!

ARF!

HUMPH! THAT'S THE THANKS WE GET FOR TRYING TO DO GOOD-

THAT VIPER!

I'LL TAKE POLKA DOTS- By BERT INK

SO THE SALESMAN SAID "THE PLAIN WHITE MUFFLERS ARE THREE BUCKS AND THE WHITE WITH BLACK

POLKA DOTS ARE $3.50." "YOU'RE CRAZY" SAID I. "I WONT PAY FIFTY CENTS

EXTRA FOR POLKA DOTS, THEY AINT WORTH IT.- BUT A POLKA-DOTTED ONE IS WHAT I WANT AND I WON'T

PAY MORE'N THREE FOR IT." SO HE SAYS "ALLRIGHT, YOU CAN HAVE THE POLKA DOTS FOR THREE"-

Moon Mullins

I HEARD THAT DAME SAY YOUR NAME WASN'T IN THE SOCIAL REGISTER, MISS SCHMALTZ

WELL, I SHALL CERTAINLY TAKE MY PENCIL THE NEXT TIME I CALL AND ASK HER TO LET ME SIGN IT

THEY GOT UNCLE JAKE LOCKED UP IN THE BUGHOUSE FOR HIS D.T.'S AGAIN, COUSIN CLANCY. YOU'D BETTER DRIVE BY AND SEE IF THEY'RE READY TO TURN THE OLD BOY LOOSE YET

I WILL THE FIRST CHANCE I GET, MOON. BUT YOU'D BETTER BEAT IT NOW, I HEAR THE LADY OF THE HOUSE COMIN'.

WHY MOONSHINE! WHAT WERE YOU DOING IN THAT ELEGANT HOME.

OH - I WAS JUST VISITIN' WITH MY COUSIN CLANCY.

WELL, MY STARS ALIVE! I HAD NO IDEA THAT ANY OF YOUR RELATIVES LIVED IN A PLACE LIKE THAT, MOON - YOU MUST INTRODUCE ME.

SOME OTHER TIME, EMMY. I'M BUSY NOW.

KAYO, YOU GO IN AND CALL ON YOUR COUSIN CLANCY= AND I WILL CALL FOR YOU A LITTLE LATER. IT WILL BE A GREAT OPPORTUNITY FOR ME TO MEET THE KIND OF PEOPLE I SHOULD REALLY ASSOCIATE WITH, SOCIALLY.

ALL RIGHT, BUT YOU AINT GOT A CHANCT WITH COUSIN CLANCY. HE'S MARRIED.

WELL, WELL SO YOUR NAME IS KAYO MULLINS = I HAVE NEVER HEARD MY LITTLE SON SPEAK OF YOU = BUT THEN YOU REALLY DON'T TALK LIKE YOU WERE RAISED IN THIS NEIGHBORHOOD. WHERE WERE YOU BORN?

DOWN IN SOUTHERN ILLINOIS.

IS THAT SO? MAY I ASK WHAT PART?

ALL OF ME, OF COURSE = WHAT'DJA THINK?

MAY I COME IN?

OF COURSE, I NEVER MET YOUR HUSBAND, MY DEAR - BUT I HAVE HEARD MY GENTLEMAN FRIEND, MR. MULLINS, TELL ABOUT THE DANDY TIMES HE AND MR. CLANCY HAVE HAD DOWN AT MOSKEY'S POOL PARLOR—

MY WORD!

WHODIE! I'M GOIN' HOME AN' GET ON SOME DRY CLOTHES.

CLANCY, HOW MANY TIMES DO I HAVE TO TELL YOU THAT YOUR RELATIVES AND FRIENDS MUST USE THE SERVANTS ENTRANCE? — GET THAT GABBY WOMAN OUT OF THE HOUSE IMMEDIATELY.

YES MAM = I'LL TAKE HER OFF THE PLACE, MAM - AND WHILE I'M OUT COULD I PLEASE USE THE CAR TO GO SEE MY UNCLE JAKE THAT'S IN THE HOSPITAL?

SAY, SISTER - WHAT WAS YOU TRYIN' TO DO - GET ME IN BAD CALLIN' TH' BOSS' WIFE MRS. CLANCY? MY NAME'S CLANCY AND I'M HER CHAUFFEUR AND WHAT SHE SAID TO ME WAS A PLENTY!

OH - MY STARS! AND SHE WAS SO NICE TO ASK ME TO LEAVE IN HER AUTYMOBILE WHAT MUST SHE THINK OF ME?

WHERE IS TH' INSANE ASYLUM AT, OFFICER?

YOU DARE LAY YOUR DIRTY HANDS ON ME AND I'LL SMACK YOUR SASSY FACE!
